Two Billion Extra WPA Fund Studied By Senators

Roosevelt's Message on Relief Is Expected Before March 19.

Vandenberg Asks Complete Inquiry

Robinson Scores Critics of Boondoggling as 'Meddlers.'

By Felix Bruner.

The Senate yesterday turned to consideration of Federal relief in anticipation of a request from President Roosevelt for an additional appropriation of from $1,000,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 to continue the works program.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, majority leader, spoke for an hour and a half in a detailed defense of "boondoggling" and the works program under Harry L. Hopkins.

Senator Hayden (Democrat), Arizona, proposed an additional appropriation of $700,000,000 for loans and grants for new Public Works Administration projects. This, presumably, would be in addition to the amount to be requested by the President.

Inquiry Demand Renewed.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, renewed his demand for an investigation of the entire administration of relief and his objection to works administrators committing the nation to long-time developments that must be financed by future appropriations.

President Roosevelt said he had not yet prepared his relief message and that he might not send it to Congress until just before he leaves on March 19 for his Florida vacation.

Robinson charged the Republican National Committee and the "miscalled" Liberty League with "playing politics with human misery and with attempting to make a political football out of the unfortunate unemployed in this country."

The Robinson and Hayden speeches, and announcement of another speech to be made on the radio by Robinson Thursday night, indicated that the Administration was attempting to prepare Congress and the country for the stock of the forthcoming huge appropriation request. They indicated the Administration, foreseeing stiff opposition, was itself taking the offensive.

"Boondoggling" Praised.

Robinson titled his speech in the Senate simply "boondoggling."

"The scope of the work involved," he said, "is of such magnitude that it seems almost unbelievable that it could be handled as well as it is being handled by the officials placed in charge by the President."

He pointed to the premanency of many of the works projects and said that it will confer benefits for generations to come.

"Senators on both sides will agree that if there is one issue concerning which we should be as non-partisan as possible, it is this business of providing a living and providing employment for the large army of the unemployed who are still unable to find places in private life," he said.

Politics and Relief Angle.

"The Roosevelt Administration has consistently and persistently tried to keep politics out of relief, and I think every fair-minded man will acknowledge that fact. No matter what charges are hurled at Mr. Hopkins, the record speaks for itself. He has co-operated with State and local officials, regardless of party, and he has done everything in his power to keep politics and inefficiency out of the work relief program."

Robinson said that just as Administration opponents were attempting to shake confidence in the the Government, "banks and business leaders gave concrete evidence that they think Uncle Sam's credit is the best in the world."

"'Now they are unloosing a terrific national campaign against what they call waste and inefficiency in the work relief program," he said.

Robinson then undertook to explain the expression "boondoggling." He said the word meant useful work, and that its origin was from the name of Daniel Boone, "who certainly knew as much about practical, useful things as the sd-

Admiral Beatty Dies; Jutland Hero Was 65

Cold Contracted During King George Funeral Weakened Heart.

By the United Press.

London (Wednesday), March 11. Admiral Earl Beatty, naval hero of the Battle of Jutland, died early today after a three-week illness.

He was 65. He contracted a heavy cold while marching bareheaded in the funeral procession for the late King George V. Later, he suffered a severe chill and his heart weakened steadily.

The famous naval hero's condition became grave two and a half weeks ago.

His doctors announced late Monday that the admiral's condition was slightly improved, but it was evident that they held little hope for his recovery.

In 1916, Admiral Beatty succeeded the late Lord Jellicoe as commander in chief of the British grand fleet. After the World War he became first lord of the admiralty, the highest post in the British navy.

His greatest fame and popularity, however, came in the battle of Jutland when he fought the German navy against great odds in order to give the British grand fleet time to arrive for the decisive battle.

Doctors and nurses worked over him feverishly all last night, but abandoned hope around midnight.

He died a short time later. His son, Lord Borodale, arrived at his bedside only a few minutes before the end came.

Corporations' Tax May Fall Short of Aim

Bank, Other Exemptions Would Cut Estimates of 620 Million.

Disclosure by Treasury Comes as Surprise to House Group.

By Robert C. Albright.

Searching analysis of the Administration's corporation earnings tax estimates yesterday disclosed that the Treasury's own rates will fall far short of the $620,000,000 revenue claimed if banks, insurance companies and other fiduciaries are exempted from the proposed corporate profits levy.

This revelation by Treasury experts came as a surprise to the House Ways and Means tax subcommittee, which is predominantly in favor not only of providing special treatment for banks, but of creating a "cushion" against heavy taxes on other small corporate surpluses.

Although "reserving judgment" on whether banks and insurance companies should be wholly or partly exempt from the new corporation tax, the Administration made no allowance for the exemption in estimates on which the President's $620,000,000 revenue proposal was computed, it was learned.

Mass of Tables Studied.

At grips with one of the most complex tax tangles in Congressional fiscal history, the tax subcommittee meanwhile found itself confronted with a new mass of Treasury tables covering reserve "cushion" proposals, but fashioned in a manner tha showed maximum Treasury losses under the plan.

Members of the sub-committee were not satisfied with the schedules submitted, and called on the Treasury to furnish additional tables today computed on a basis most sub-committee members think will give a more fair picture of the situation. "Cushion" tables offered yesterday by the Treasury showed losses under the $620,000,000 revenue estimate ranging from $106,000,000 to $324,000,000. Many members of the sub-committee feel this is the very worst side of the picture, and that if their suggestions for computing the tables are followed no such heavy losses will be shown.

In failing to provide any preferential treatment for banks and fiduciaries in the original Administration estimates, the $620,000,000 revenue figure the program was designed to yield annually was opened to serious challenge in the sub-committee itself. If banks alone were exempted (and members generally concede that some special treatment must be given them), a taxable base of some $800,000,000 would be removed at one stroke from reach of the program, with proportionate reductions made necessary in the Administration's own revenue estimates.

Special Exemptions.

Although banks are now taxed at the same rate as other corporations, a number of special exemptions are allowed them, such as a preferred treatment for profit gains of a given character. Insurance companies also are allowed special exemptions under the present law, with such items as premiums collected excluded from the tax base.

Believing that publication of "cushion" tables submitted yesterday by the Treasury would only serve to add to the wide public confusion on the nature of the forthcoming tax program, Chairman Samuel B. Hill declined to release them, or to comment on subcommittee discussions. Hill, who knows taxes as probably no other member of Congress, reiterated that he wants the whole picture before he volunteers any opinion. Most other sub-committee members observed a similar secrecy rule.

The new Treasury tables added little to the maze of information that already has been presented to the sub-committee. The so-called "cushion" tables, designed to give a lower rate to corporations reporting small earnings to enable them to convert an adequate amount of profits into reserves, proposed levies ranging from 10 and 15 per cent to 75 per cent.

Levied Against Incomes.

These were levied against income percentages, rather than against a fixed income figure, as the Treasury originally had proposed. Estimates of losses under these plans were based on the assumption that all earnings were either retained or distributed as income. Sub-committee members felt the Treasury "cushion" proposals should be more adapted to the situation with which the Government is more likely to be confronted, namely, that most corporations will retain 25 or 50 per cent of their earnings for reserves, and distribute the rest as dividends. The tables to be submitted today will be computed on that basis.

Meanwhile, the House passed and sent to the Senate the "green-slip" bill providing fines for failure to file duplicate income tax returns for use of State and local tax officials. Solidly opposed by Republicans, the final vote was 288 to 76.

$5 and $10 Penalties.

The measure, enacted at the request of the Treasury, would add a $5 penalty to the tax of an individual failing to file the "green-slip" duplicate, and add $10 to that of partnerships or corporations. The duplicate returns are designed for use of State and local taxing officials. They were authorized last year, at the same time that the "pink-slip" income tax publicity law was repealed.

The Treasury's $820,000,000 new revenue estimates have been based on fixed corporate income brackets.

Building Heads Offer Proposal To Settle Strike

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 10.—A realty board spokesman tonight offered a plan to settle the ten-day building service strike calling for union recognition and arbitration of minimum pay.

The offer followed extension of the strike during the day to skyscrapers in the Grand Central, Times Square and Columbus Circle districts of midtown, and to the Brighton Beach section of Brooklyn, although the operators declared the fresh walkouts had been ineffective.

The board's attorney, Walter Gordon Merritt, said in a radio address that if the union accepted, the board would recommend to its members a three-year extension of the 1934 agreement, known as the Curran Award, plus arbitration of minimum pay now and in 1937 and 1938. This agreement, he said, provided recognition of the union for collective bargaining, nondiscrimination against union members, replacement of union members only by other union members, and arbitration of hours and wages.

No mention was made of the closed-shop issue, the principal point of difference between the two sides.

Strikers Hold Mass Meeting.

Meanwhile, Jerry J. Horan, national president of the Building Service Employes International Union, presided at a mass meeting of strikers. A police stenographer was present to take notes. At a similar meeting last week James J. Bambrick, local union head, made remarks District Attorney William C. Dodge considered inflammatory. The strikers leaving the meeting perpetrated many acts of vandalism along Park avenue and the prosecutor summoned Bambrick to his office for a warning.

Reports on success of the midtown call-out differed tonight, the union claims being much greater than figures furnished by the police.

The city affairs committee, in a statement signed by John Haynes Holmes, John Lovejoy Elliott, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise and Frederick L. Guggenheimer, entered the battle late today with commenda-

New Deal Leads NewHampshire Delegate Vote

Knox Backers Ahead on G. O. P. Slate; Merriam To Back Landon.

By the Associated Press.

Manchester, N. H., March 10.—Roosevelt-pledged candidates for places on the New Hampshire delegation to the Democratic national convention took the lead in early returns from today's State-wide Presidential primary.

Although unpledged, Republican candidates favorable to Col. Frank Knox's candidacy for the Republican Presidential nomination, led in the first returns tabulated.

Gov. Bridges Leads.

Leading the Republican list was Gov. H. Styles Bridges, with a total of 2,104, in returns from 35 of the 295 towns and city wards in the State. United States Representative Charles W. Tobey was running second, with 1,852; former Gov. Huntley N. Spaulding third, with 1,774, and former United States Senator George H. Moses fourth, with 1,644.

Two candidates, unpledged but favoring Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas, Eliot A. Carter and Edwin Gordon Lawrence, were well down the list.

Two unpledged candidates on the Democratic side were far down in the totals, as was Joseph A. Coutremarsh, pledged to himself for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

Merriam Backs Landon.

Sacramento, Calif., March 10 (AP). Gov. Frank F. Merriam suddenly announced today that he would support Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas for the Republican Presidential nomination.

Merriam, until yesterday considered a potential candidate himself, said he had decided against this course "because I could not see where I could spare the time to enter into the campaign or a contest as seemed to be developing."

He said his friends then decided to support Landon and he made up his mind to go along with them.

The announcement came on the heels of varying statements from organized Landon supporters as to whether the Kansas chief executive would be represented by a delegate

Mystery Veils Youth's Death In Apartment Elevator Shaft

The mangled body of a blue-eyed, curly headed 14-year-old boy was found in the bottom of the elevator shaft at 7611 Georgia avenue last night.

He was Harvey Crowell, student at Paul Junior High School, and only child of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe H. Crowell.

The cause of his death remained a mystery to police and Coroner A. Magruder Macdonald, who investigated after blood on the elevator led to the discovery of the body.

Police believed Crowell, who was delivering magazines about the building where he lives, met his death shortly before 7 p. m. when he got tangled up in the elevator machinery.

A noise, heard by George S. Wilson whe he tried in vain to operate the machine about 7:30, led him to think that a cable was broken. He later speculated that the sound was that of Crowell's body, shaken loose from the elevator and falling to the bottom of the shaft.

Wilson, an employe of the District highway department, returned home at that time with his wife, Helen. The elevator, which is operated automatically, was on the second floor at the time. He pushed the button on the ground floor and it failed to respond.

Thinking he could enter it on the second floor, he climbed the steps, but was unable to open the door. He then started pushing the button.

It was then that the elevator began to move toward the sixth floor and Wilson heard the noise.

He summoned the janitor to complain and the janitor called the elevator company. After testing the machine for about an hour, the machinists discovered, at about 11 p. m., that there was blood on the door and also on the doors of one of the upper floors.

Peering down the shaft, they saw the body. The Fire Rescue Squad had to hack open the door at the foot of the shaft to enter. Crowell's clothes were in shreds. Beside the body lay his magazine sack, covered with blood.

Taken to Walter Reed Hospital, he was pronounced dead.

Police were unable to explain how the boy got into the shaft. None of the doors can be opened unless the elevator is on that floor. Only a few inches separate the door from the threshold of the elevator.

The traces of blood led to speculation that the boy's body was caught in the machine while dwellers of the apartment house ran it up and down the shaft.

Britain Ready to Back France In Firm Stand Against Reich; 'Deal' for Aid by Italy Hinted

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 10.—France and England appeared tonight to be pulling a solution out of the Locarno crisis that some thought spelled war.

A sudden shift to London of today's conference of Locarno signatories was taken to mean that the two powers had agreed upon a firm stand toward Germany and possibly the lifting of economic sanctions from Italy.

Pierre-Etienne Flandin, French foreign minister, backed by his ring of military allies virtually encircling Germany, was understood to have hammered home to Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, that Hitler's might could only be balked by "right linked with force."

Out of Premier Sarraut's refusal to negotiate while a German army was still in the Rhineland and the disposition of Britain to consider German proposals for a new all-embracive pact, the four allied Locarno signatories—Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium—were reported evolving a formula acceptable to both.

"Swap" With Mussolini.

One portion of this formula, it was reported, involved a clean bill of health in Africa for Premier Mussolini of Italy in exchange for the moral force of his million-man army in Europe.

The sudden transfer of the Locarno discussions to London and the summoning of the Council of the League of Nations to meet there Saturday, presumably to ratify their decision, was interpreted as proof that the conferees were near agreement.

Whether that agreement involves force or sanctions was not revealed. Observers said force, at least in a "moral" form, was involved in Flandin's mental parade of allies before Eden to show how many countries and how many millions of soldiers were willing to back France to halt Hitler if events should demand it.

Flandin showed Eden that Italy, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Russia and Poland were bound by a treaty to be ready to act, and that others might be pulled in through the Balkan pact.

Italy alone was the problem, observers said, but Mussolini, in the face of a delicate European situation, would be willing to back France in return for the lifting of sanctions against him.

The French foreign minister, these observers declared, was able to convince Eden that Britain had been as much insulted as France when Adolf Hitler tore up the Locarno pact. He further argued that the problem facing the conferees was not merely a Franco-German problem but, as Premier Sarraut had declared, one that involves "the future peace of Europe."

Indication of Accord.

The London meeting Thursday was interpreted in diplomatic circles as definite proof that Flandin and Eden, hitherto opposed on what course to take toward Germany, are getting together.

When they parted this afternoon no meeting was foreseen until Friday at Geneva, but when Eden talked with Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin by telephone he found the basis of understanding was broadening and immediately arranged with Flandin and others for a London conference, which is expected to be decisive.

The fact that the League Council has been asked to meet there indicated that the signatories expect to have something for it to do.

Strict secrecy was maintained, but those in touch with negotiations said an agreement was developing in harmony with a declaration before the French Parliament today by Premier Albert Sarraut against negotiations with Germany "under fire."

This was taken to mean that Britain is prepared to support France in compelling at least a "symbolic" withdrawal of the German army from the Rhineland, probably for a certain distance, or some other measure that would spare France

Legislator's Car Is Missed in Tag Drive By Police

Students Are Given Tickets in New Campaign on Parkers.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Another chapter in Washington's "Congressional immunity" traffic problem was added to the records yesterday when the automobile of Representative John M. O'Connell (Democrat), Rhode Island, escaped unmolested while parked in a downtown restricted zone.

Meanwhile, members of the House Traffic sub-committee, during hearings on Capitol Hill, were told that "ticket fixing in the District is not an evil." This statement came from William S. Canning, engineering director, Keystone Automobile Club, yesterday's only witness.

In response to a question from Representative Carpenter (Democrat), Kansas, chairman of the subcommittee, Canning said:

"So-called ticket fixing is nothing more or less than traffic education. It would be unfair and unjust to fine and convict every person who violates the multitude of minor regulations in Washington."

While the traffic hearings were in session, police were conducting an intensive enforcement drive in the vicinity of Sixth and E streets northwest.

But during this surprise "ticketing" campaign against illegally parked cars, the automobile of Representative O'Connell remained untouched, although a number of other cars received tickets and several were even impounded.

The police "ticket attack" centered on students of Georgetown University Law School, described as "flagrant parking law violators."

Policeman C. A. Goodman, traffic division, opened his one-man crusade shortly before 9 a. m. and continued throughout the morning. One car after another received a parking ticket. Autos with out-of-town tags were towed away to insure the owner's appearance.

There remained undisturbed, however, a big, black sedan with Rhode Island license 266. In addition to this tag, the car bore Congressional tag number 121. Although listed to O'Connell, it was learned later the Representative's son, John M., jr., a student at the Georgetown Law School, was driving the car.

When Goodman finally returned to this auto, he produced a "courtesy" card and attached it to the windshield. The card bore the reg-

3 Nazi War Planes Reported Over French Rhineland Forts

General Staff Studies 'Strong Measures' to Prevent 'Spying' Flights as Border Inhabitants Crowd Parish Churches to Pray for Peace.

By the Associated Press.

Strasbourg, France, March 10.—Three Nazi war planes were reported to have flown today over French Rhineland fortifications, reinforced over the week-end by 50,000 troops.

Military headquarters at Metz was informed a German observation ship hovered over Montmedy early today and that two similar planes flew over Kanfen and Veckring in the afternoon.

Although some officers said they were convinced the Germans are seeking a view of French troop movements, officials would give out no information. The planes were believed to have come from Trier.

The French general staff, meeting at Metz, discussed "strong measures" to prevent such flights by German planes, following the sighting of one yesterday over the fortress at Thionville. This craft was pursued back to the German border by French planes.

Parish churches of French frontier provinces were crowded today with women and children praying that there might not be another war. These people had heard rumors that old imperial regiments, stationed in Alsace before 1914, have been revived in Adolf Hitler's Rhineland army.

Troop trains bearing more French soldiers to the front passed through Metz and Nancy. Trucks and armored cars were being brought up.

Frightened depositors continued to withdraw money from banks in border cities and it was estimated that 3,000,000 francs were removed in Metz alone today.

Cologne, Germany, March 10 (AP). Heavy combat equipment has been drawn into the Rhineland by Germany, it was learned today.

Cologne, it was disclosed, has one of the biggest garrisons with more troops than were officially admitted and also is an important center for heavy artillery.

Nationals Must Report to Consulates Immediately, With Threat of Fine.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 10.—Siegfried von Nostitz, attache at the German consulate in New York, announced today that by command of Reichsfuehrer Hitler all German citizens living in the United States are to be conscripted for potential service in the fatherland's Nazi legions.

Upon receipt of the order in New York, notification was immediately transmitted to all German consulates in the United States.

All German citizens are commanded to report immediately either to their local consulate or to the consulate general in New York.

They will be registered, Von Nostitz said, although exemptions will be given those in financial straits or suffering physical disability.

They will not be subject to immediate military service, he said, but will be held in readiness in the event of an emergency.

Those who disregard today's order are liable to a fine of 105 reichsmarks (about $65), Von Nostitz said.

Under the order Germans in this country who were born between 1911 and 1915 may volunteer for military service in the fatherland from next October 1; those born between 1912 and 1918 may volunteer to serve after October 1, 1937.

Result of January Call.

The German embassy said today that the conscription order made public by the consulate general in New York calling upon all German citizens in the United States to register was a development of the reintroduction of the general military service call in Germany last January.

Belief was expressed here that the consul general's announcement gave fuller details concerning the minister of interior's instructions under the act.

Embassy officials said the law was intended chiefly to enable the German government to keep a check on its nationals abroad and that it cannot compel them to leave the country in which they are now residing except under extremely limited conditions.

Hungary May Break World War's Treaties

Budapest, March 10 (AP).—Newspaper accounts and guarded statements by officials concerning Germany's re-occupation of the Rhineland indicated today Hungary may also seek to break the restraint of treaties imposed by the World War.

The newspaper "Eight O'clock" said "that which Germany forcibly seized cannot be denied to Hungary."

Spanish Army Rules Granada After Rioters Sack Churches

By the United Press.

Granada, Spain (Wednesday), March 11.—Martial law was declared today to cope with rioting Communists, who were sacking churches and convents.

Scores were wounded and several were killed in gun battles with federal troops and police.

Meanwhile, 2,000 Communists, carrying red flags, marched on Madrid with the avowed intention of burning all churches and convents. They dispersed before reaching the city, however, after setting numerous fires along the way.

Coincident with proclamation of martial law, the general strike, originally declared for 24 hours, was extended for an additional 24 hours.

Elsewhere in Spain, other serious disturbances were reported.

At Seguin, Murcia Province, Manuel Rodriguez, a parish priest, shot and killed Antonio Acenjo. The priest told police he feared Acenjo and another man were going to attack him at his home. Friends of Acenjo burned a small church and attempted to fire the priest's home. Storm and civil guard re-enforcements were rushed to Seguin.

A mob in Serrol attacked and injured four army lieutenants attempting to restore order.

Ten were wounded when Fascists and Leftists clashed at Regovia. Headquarters of the Traditionalist and Popular Action political factions were closed by troops.

12 Germans Arrested By French on Border

Strasbourg, March 10 (AP).—French border guards today took into custody 12 Germans who said they had come to Strasbourg out of "curiosity." The Germans were released after they had been questioned at guard headquarters.

Test Set Today On U. S. Right To Seize Wires

Strawn Asks Injunction to Keep Telegrams From Senate Inquiry.

Principals in the Senate Lobby investigation forsook argument yesterday for a study of law books, in preparation for a stiff legal test in the District Supreme Court today.

Before Chief Justice Wheat will be argued the question of whether the Lobby Investigating Committee, headed by Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, has the right to subpena all telegrams of an individual, firm or corporation.

The suit was brought by Silas H. Strawn, noted Chicago lawyer, who will be represented by Frank J. Hogan, Washington lawyer, who frequently has appeared in controversies with Congressional committees.

The action asks for an injunction against the Western Union Telegraph Co., to prevent it from turning over to the Senate committee all telegrams charged to Strawn's law firm between February 1 and December 1, 1935. Black has explained that he attempted to seize the telegrams, because the firm is connected or co-operating with the American Liberty League.

Defending Committee.

While the Black committee is not a party to the suit, it will be represented in court by Crampton Harris, Alabama attorney, who will argue that the court has not power to pass upon an act of the Senate. Black has used this argument in defending the committee against charges of wholesale seizures of telegrams sent and received by alleged lobbyists and opponents of the New Deal.

Strawn and Hogan contend the committee has no right to seize messages not pertinent to the subject being investigated.

The committee will be represented by Harris only as a "friend of the court." It will make no effort to become a party to the suit, because it questions the jurisdiction of the court in such a suit. The Western Union has filed an answer to the Strawn complaint, in which it was said that it did nothing it did not believe itself legally obligated to do.

The court hearing will be confined to arguments on the law and on charges made by the Strawn complaint. No witnesses will be heard. It is expected that should the lower court rule against the Strawn contention, an effort will be made to hasten the case to the United States Supreme Court, for a decision on the scope of the Senate's power to subpena private papers.

Fourth Amendment.

Hogan is expected to contend that the Senate committee is violating the fourth amendment to the Constitution, which declares that a citizen shall be secure in his effects and papers from unreasonable search and seizure.

Meanwhile, the Senate awaited a response to its request to the Federal Communications Commission that it reveal any part it played in obtaining telegrams for the Black committee, and that it explain under what authority it was operating in doing so. The commission's report is expected to be made today.

It was reported that the commission will deny that it "seized" telegrams, but that it will explain that it assigned an employe to work with the Black committee, to examine messages in Washington telegraph offices. It was said that the commission, at a meeting September 26, agreed that it would request messages in the name of the commission.

Popular Fallacy Inspired By New Deal Critics Obscures Abilities of Roosevelt Brain Trusters.

By Franklyn Waltman

IN the last three years President Roosevelt undoubtedly has wished frequently he had never heard of the term "brain trust." It has been a phrase which has haunted his Administration from the beginning down to the present day. The label has on occasion embarrassed the President and put his Administration on the defensive.

Foes of the New Deal seized on the phrase almost immediately to convey the impression not that men of intellect had been called to aid the Administration, as the term originally was intended to connote, but that impractical men, daydreamers, Utopians and experimenters were at the helm of Government.

Everything that has gone wrong in the New Deal has been blamed by its critics on the "brain trust" and on the President because he followed the advice of these academicians. What has been beneficial has been credited to the ingenuity and ability of those outside of the brain trust—the Cordell Hulls and Joseph P. Kennedys. From New Deal critics Mr. Roosevelt gets little credit for having followed their advice.

* * *

But not all the brain trusters have been impractical nor has any one of them been impractical all the time. Nor have the practical men always shown common sense. James M. Landis, chairman of the SEC, for instance, is regarded as one of the brain trust and yet his administration of the difficult securities act has been every bit as practical and marked by common sense as that of Mr. Kennedy. On the other hand, George Peek was a hard-headed businessman, but he caused the country, as well as President Roosevelt, nothing but pain.

There is a widespread fallacy that the President and the brain trust as a whole approve of everything done in the name of the New Deal. In three years of daily contact with the Administration this writer has yet to find one brain truster who approves every measure taken. Some are critical, others privately but sharply denunciatory of the work being done in other departments and agencies. Hardly one of the brain trust approves of the silver purchase program, which resulted from compromises inevitable in politics.

* * *

An illustration that has just come to hand is the criticism—the sharp criticism, it might be said—of the pending tax bill by Raymond Moley, former number one brain truster, in the weekly Today, which he now edits. He declared that it is unsound to force corporations to distribute all their earnings because "surpluses are the life insurance policies of business firms."

"Had American industry entered this depression stripped of all surpluses, scores of the biggest corporations could not have survived," the former brain trust chief continued, and then added, "Better let a comparative few get away with evasions which are on the border line of good business judgment than to undertake to destroy all possibility of prudent corporate thrift."

Some observers jumped to the conclusion that Mr. Moley has broken with the President. But he has not. He was at the White House less than a week ago. He is only exercising his independence of judgment — freed from any obligation to remain silent—as he has done on previous occasions. But his criticism undoubtedly is embarassing to the President because it gives the foes of his tax plan ammunition to throw at him.

On the other hand, financial journals blame Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, now regarded as chief of the "brain trust," as responsible for the tax bill, characterizing it as "a particularly vicious brand of Tugwellian philosophy." This contention is substantiated by quotations from Dr. Tugwell's "The Industrial Decline," in which he advocates as a first step in control of capital the driving of "corporate surpluses into the open investment market" through taxation.

It is now becoming embarassing for the Administration to have any of its legislation marked as Tugwellian. Foes of the Administration have undertaken to build Dr. Tugwell up as a dangerous and radical experimenter. His California speech of last October, calling for a union of farmers and workers "which will carry all before it," is being widely circulated. Over the weekend a New York newspaper published the text in full, four months after the speech was delivered.

David Lawrence in the United States News has made some striking comparisons of excerpts from that address with excerpts from the speech broadcast the other night by Earl Browder, secretary of the Communist Party. Mr. Lawrence observes that "in both speeches there is an appeal to class prejudice, an effort to array the farmers and laborers on one side against the people who own property or by whose thrift capital has been accumulated."

Dr. Tugwell was put under blankets after his California speech and now he is confining his remarks to the work of his Resettlement Administration. But he remains, in the opinion of one of the major strategists in the Roosevelt camp, the heaviest load which the President will have to carry in this year's election. Nevertheless, Mr. Roosevelt still stands by Dr. Tugwell, as recently demonstrated when he successfully appealed to Columbia University to extend for one year the brain truster's leave of absence.

* * *

One sometimes wonders whether the New Dealers are smart or have a sense of humor. Some of them are boasting that President Roosevelt put one over on President Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia, in getting the Tugwell leave extended. They do not seem to realize that the greatest favor Dr. Butler could do the President would be to take Dr. Tugwell off his doorstep through refusing to extend his leave. They do not seem to realize that Dr. Butler is a Republican.

Will Investigate Cotton Sales, Re-establishment of American Exports.

Chester C. Davis, who quarterbacked the agricultural adjustment act through its most difficult period in the last two years, and who has recently become ill under the strain of reorganizing the AAA under the new soil conservation act, yesterday was commissioned by President Roosevelt to study economic conditions in Europe which bear on agricultural problems.

Appointed in his stead as acting AAA administrator was Howard R. Tolley, director of the Giannini Foundation at Berkeley, Calif., former director of the division of program planning of the AAA, and widely known as a "soil wizard."

Davis, who succeeded George N. Peek as head of the AAA, will probably sail for Europe on March 20 for at least a two-month stay in which he will study such matters as foreign cotton consumption and the replacement of American exports by substitutes in some nations.

The graying 47-year-old AAA chief, who has appeared weary recently in the intensive grind incident to revamping the unconstitutional AAA into a legal and smooth-functioning organization, was praised by the President in a formal statement and in a letter to Davis.

Cites Services.

In the statement the President said:

"In requesting him to make this study for our Government, Secretary Wallace and I have had in mind the distinguished service Mr. Davis has given American agriculture, especially during the past 2½ years. As administrator, he has been directing governmental efforts which, to a considerable degree, were made necessary by changes in the European outlets for American farm products."

In the letter the President said: "... The fortunes of American agriculture in the next few years are certain to be closely linked with the world economic situation, and particularly that of Europe.

"The agricultural industry of this country never could have profitably expanded beyond its present scope if it had not found substantial markets beyond our own borders. The shrinkage of these markets following the World War, and particularly following the enactment of the Smoot-Hawley tariff of 1930, placed the farmers in a desperate plight from which only such measures as the agricultural adjustment act and the present soil conservation and domestic allotment act could partially rescue them.

Changes Abroad.

"Since 1933, there have been extensive changes in the economic policies of the foreign countries and international trade relationships, and further changes are in prospect. Future plans made by farmers of this country will depend in large measure on the extent of their outlets abroad. For that reason I believe it would be advantageous to them if someone who will have an important part in shaping those plans could survey conditions in Europe at first hand.

"Therefore, I am suggesting that you ... arrange as soon as possible to undertake such a survey.

"I feel that during the more than two years that you have administered the farm program it has been brought through its most critical phases. I believe that it will not only be in your own best interests but in the best interests of the American farmers for you to take a little time away from the arduous duties of active administration and to size up trade conditions in Europe ... and I feel very strongly that your services to the farmers of this country will be more valuable than ever when you return."

Conservation Expert.

Tolley was recalled from California in the hectic days of early January, after the AAA had been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, to assist in drafting a new program along the lines of soil conservation, in which he is an expert of considerable standing.

He had been out of the spotlight from which AAA chiefs had been yanked in the two "purges" of that administration, and has been in the Department of Agriculture for over 15 years, chiefly in the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, of which he was assistant chief in 1928. He is 46, short and rotund, and political columnists have often termed him "tough," due to his persistence and hard-headed acumen in pushing the AAA front forward.

An added development on the agricultural news front came yesterday morning when the sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee, under the chairmanship of Representative Clifton Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, began to examine Dr. Davis and his assistants at executive hearings.

Representative James P. Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the full committee, insisted on the hearings in order to study the $450,000,000 AAA appropriation rider on the Independent Office Appropriations bill, passed by the Senate and the House, and now in conference. Since hearings have not been held on any phase of the farm program, according to the committee members, the opportunity was seized to inform the members on the administrative set-up of the new AAA.

These executive hearings will conclude today, it was said, and immediately following the group will begin examination of Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Veterans Bureau administrator, on the administration of the forthcoming bonus payment. Representative Woodrum indicated that particular attention would be paid to the complex machinery set up by the Veterans Bureau and the Treasury to pay off the bonus.

The sum of $11,000,000 has been estimated as required to handle the mere payment of the huge total appropriation to the soldiers and the necessity of such a sum will be examined closely.

Northeast Farm Leaders Draft Allotment Plan

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 10.—Farmers from northeastern States mulled over their problems behind closed doors today after having listened to an explanation of a new AAA bill by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace. Tomorrow reports from the six committees appointed Monday will be presented to the conference.

The farmers and farm representatives hope to present a program of soil conservation and domestic allotment applicable to the Northeast in which marketing of compodities will bear an important part. All seemed agreed today that such a program must cover a period for years to come if it is to be of help to this section of the country.

Secretary Wallace, in speaking of the hopes of the Department of Agriculture, said:

"The most damning indictment you can make of the capitalist system is that because of the emphasis on individualism we have hitherto exploited our natural resources without any thought of the future.

"It has been no one's function under the capitalist system to think of the future. Can it be modified?"

Wallace stressed the fact that there was a unity in agriculture in the country and said: "There will come a time when all of us must learn to live with one another and recognize that there is no easy way out of our difficulties, no cheap land, no foreign markets, no fresh immigrants to impose upon.

"We will just have to live with one another and face our problems. Down in the Department of Agriculture we don't thinks we have any final answer to this large problem, but I, personally, do believe that no matter what party is in power one year hence, the kind of thing exemplified in this act will be going forward."

Secretary Wallace promised that the Northeastern farmer will receive several times more money than he did under the AAA and he emphasized that the good to be brought about would be greatly limited if the farmer asked $50 to $60 an acre to divert land from truck crops, pointing out that the total sum available was only $470,000,000.

Corporation Tax Fails Mark with rates ranging from 20 and 25 per cent up to 35 and 37½ per cent.

Typical is the following table submitted yesterday:

Net income classes	Grad. rates of tax
Under $1,000	25 per cent
$2,000-$15,000	28 per cent
$15,000-$40,000	32 per cent
Over $40,000	35 per cent

Some members of the sub-committee felt that levies should be assessed against percentage of income, rather than a fixed earnings bracket, and that the rate should be substantially lowered on the lower percentages, providing a "cushion" for small reserves.

Typical Tables.

Following are two typical tables submitted yesterday at the request of those sponsoring the "cushion" argument, but tentatively rejected by them:

On the undistributed net income, so far as same constitutes:

Not more than 10 per cent of total net income, 10 per cent.
More than 10 per cent and not more than 20 per cent, 20 per cent of total net income.
More than 20 per cent and not more than 30 per cent, 30 per cent.
More than 30 per cent but not more than 40 per cent, 40 per cent.
More than 40 per cent and not more than 50 per cent, 50 per cent.
More than 50 per cent and not more than 60 per cent, 60 per cent.
More than 60 per cent of total net income, 75 per cent.

On the undistributed net income, so far as same constitutes:

Not more than 10 per cent of the total net income, 15 per cent.
More than 10 per cent and not more than 20 per cent, 30 per cent.
More than 20 per cent and not more than 30 per cent, 45 per cent.
More than 30 per cent and not more than 40 per cent, 55 per cent.
More than 40 per cent and not more than 50 per cent, 65 per cent.
More than 50 per cent of the total net income, 75 per cent.

One of the "cushion" schedules the Treasury has been asked to supply today will provide for more moderate, 8 per cent step-ups in the rates, along the lines of the original corporate earnings tax proposed in 1921 by Senator Andrieus Jones, of New Mexico.

Senator Walter F. George, (Democrat), of Georgia, a member of the Senate Finance Committee, believes that careful study of the Treasury proposals is necessary to determine "whether new loopholes to tax evasion will not be opened up; whether the estimates of added revenue are correct; whether the proposed graduated tax rates should not be based upon the percentage of net income undistributed instead of the amounts of money withheld by the corporations, and what is yet more important, whether the proposal must not be substantially modified so that it will not prevent the reasonable accumulation of a surplus sufficient to carry a corporation through the fluctuations of economic conditions and to safeguard the opportunity of American labor to find employment in times of economic stress."

A charge that the whole program was "frightfully muddled" meanwhile was advanced by House Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell, who hazarded a guess that the bill will never pass Congress unless a provision is incorporated protecting corporate reserves.

The Administration plan also was under attack from Republicans in the tax sub-committee itself, with Representative Roy O. Woodruff, of Michigan, charging the plan would not yield the $620,000,000 claimed for it.

New Deal Leads Delegate Vote

slate in the California primaries May 5.

Statements Differ.

The Landon Republican League of California, with headquarters in San Francisco, announced last night it had acceded to Landon's desire that his name not be entered on the primary ballot.

Ross Marshall, southern California leader of Landon supporters, promptly declared the Kansas Governor would be entered. Marshall indicated Landon would not oppose the move, although the Kansas Governor thus far has not encouraged the use of his name on primary ballots.

Complicating the California situation is the determination of several Republican factions to send an uninstructed delegation to the convention. These include Earl Warren, State chairman and friend of former President Herbert Hoover. The former President has indorsed this course.

Declines to Co-operate.

Merriam's announcement brought further into the open his apparent hostility to the Warren faction. He declined to join them in their conferences to make up an all-faction slate of 44 delegates to go on the primary ballot.

Some observers professed to foresee a fight between the Merriam and Warren groups for control of the State organization.

In his statement the California executive said: "It is not difficult or illogical for me to support Gov. Landon, he being the only other Republican Governor in the Western part of the United States and one of the few in the entire country.

"It is my contention," said Merriam, "the people have a right to know what they're voting for in selecting a delegation. This relates both to platform and candidates."

Hoover on several occasions has urged the sending of uninstructed delegations to the national convention in line with his avowals that principles should be put ahead of personalities.

Defeated Sinclair.

Merriam managed Hoover's Southern California campaign in 1928. As Lieutenant Governor he succeeded to the chief executive's position in 1933 on the death of Gov. James Rolph, jr. In the memorable gubernatorial election of 1934 he polled more than 1,138,000 votes to defeat Upton Sinclair, EPIC Democrat. Sinclair's vote was 879,000.

The Governor's declaration committed him to "join my friends in any reasonable undertaking" on Landon's behalf, although "there's no obligation on my part."

Gov. Merriam had not officially announced his own candidacy but had permitted his friends to mention him as a possible candidate.

Merriam recently spoke words at a Washington-Lincoln banquet which many interpreted as being laudatory of President Roosevelt.

He declined to elaborate on this later, referring questioners to the quoted text of his address: "I am a firm believer in the statement that Providence has provided leaders for this great Nation in times of her crisis. * * * Historians in the future, viewing in retrospect, may point to Roosevelt in the same way. It is difficult for a person in any age to evaluate properly a man's worth during the time he is engaged in his activities."

Hoover Off to New York.

Chicago, March 10 (AP).—Former President Hoover left for New York aboard the Twentieth Century Limited at 4:30 p .m., Eastern standard time, today, declining to comment on the announcement of Gov. Frank Merriam of California that he was supporting Gov. Alf M. Landon for the Republican Presidential nomination.

The former Chief Executive spent a day here, "seeing friends and answering mail."

His son, Allan, who was traveling with him, said he would attend an insurance company directors' meeting in New York.

Landon Silent.

Topeka, March 10 (AP).—Gov. Alf M. Landon said today he had nothing to say on the proposed entry in the California Presidential primary of a group of delegates pledged to him for the Republican Presidential nomination.

He smilingly declined comment also on announcement of Gov. Frank Merriam of California that he would support the Kansas Governor for the nomination.

Gov. Landon has frequently declined comment on activity in his behalf.

Woman Escapes Death In 7-Story Plunge

Chicago, March 10 (AP).—A young woman either fell or leaped seven floors from her tenth-story hotel room window today and landed on a wire mesh skylight screen in such a manner that physicians said she was only slightly injured.

To police and hospital attendants the young woman gave her name variously as Patricia or Doris Drew, of Squirrel Hill, Pa.

Historic U. S. Shiphouse Is Destroyed by Flames

Portsmouth, N. H., March 10 (AP).—The historic Franklin shiphouse, the only building of its kind in any navy yard in the United States, was destroyed today by fire of undetermined origin. The building was erected in 1820 at a cost of more than $150,000. The first sloop of war constructed in the house was the Preble, built in 1838. The building has been used recently for storage purposes.

Hoffman Visit May Be Asked By Hauptmann

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., March 10.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, an authoritative source disclosed tonight, may ask Gov. Harold G. Hoffman to visit him again in the death house of the New Jersey State Prison.

The request may be made, the source said, in a last desperate effort of the convicted Lindbergh baby killer to stave off execution in the electric chair, the week of March 30. The Governor visited Hauptmann in the death house in mid-October, but never revealed details of the visit.

The Governor's reprieve powers expire Thursday night. He said last week there would be no further stay of execution, unless new evidence is discovered.

The Governor meanwhile carried on his investigation of the kidnap-slaying, still apparently unconvinced the case was solved with the arrest and conviction of Hauptmann.

Mrs. Hauptmann's Visit.

Mrs. Hauptmann came to the prison in a car today, with her son, Manfred, in her arms. The child slept in the car while his mother went inside.

Mrs. Hauptmann said her husband was still confident something would be done to save him, though he didn't know what, but was downcast because he could not see the baby.

Col. Mark O. Kimberling, warden, said the date for the execution has been fixed. He would not disclose it. Ten days before executions are held, invitations are mailed to the witnesses. Hauptmann will probably go to the chair either the night of Tuesday, March 31, or Friday, April 3, since executions are usually carried out on those nights.

Kimberling said Charles Zied, Philadelphia gangster, convicted of killing William T. Feitz, jr., a Camden detective, in a holdup September 2, 1934, will go to the chair the same night.

One of the chief foes of the Governor's activities, Basil Bruno, Monmouth County Republican assemblyman, today said he would move for adoption tomorrow night of his resolution that the motor vehicle department be investigated. Bruno said Gov. Hoffman, who headed the department before his election, had turned it into a detective agency, and added he would name "at least eight" motor vehicle inspectors who have become Lindbergh case detectives.

Out of Country.

He said two of these men are out of the country, carrying on their investigations.

Andrew K. Dutch, a motor vehicle inspector, arrived at Cristobal, C. Z., today on the liner Georgic, but denied he had come to the Canal Zone to see Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, ransom intermediary in the Lindbergh case. He expected to sail on the Georgic tonight. Condon was in the interior when Dutch came ashore.

Gov. Hoffman, apprised that Dutch had landed at Cristobal, laughed and said he thought he had "gone to Cuba."

It was reported today that Henry Young, jr., Essex Republican, made no effort last night to move his bill to keep Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf in office as head of the State Police until a successor is qualified, because of the possibility Hoffman may reappoint Schwarzkopf.

Young, it was also reported, wished to defer action until after Hauptmann's execution.

Pupils Picket School When Chief Is Ousted

St. Helens, Oreg., March 10 (AP).—Students of St. Helen's High School picketed the grounds today after striking against classes because the school board failed to renew the contract of Jay R. Austin, superintendent. Most of the 400 students walked out.

The board, after meeting with 800 parents, citizens and students last night, at which it promised to receive a citizens' committee to discuss the problem, took no immediate action.

Austin had been superintendent for three years and for ten years previously was high school principal.

Schooner, Crew Feared Lost in Atlantic Storm

St. Johns, Newfoundland, March 10 (AP).—Members of the crew of the schooner General Wood today said they believed the schooner General Gough, which left Lisbon November 28, had been lost in the Atlantic. The General Wood arrived here today, having left Portugal six days after the other ship.

When the General Wood was nearing her home port, 58 miles south of St. Pierre, the schooner was lashed by a heavy gale and was forced to run south before the wind to Barbados. Ambrose Walsh, master of the General Gough, and her crew of six, must have been lost in the storm, Capt. S. W. Forest of the General Wood said. Both schooners are owned by the Grand bank Fisheries, Ltd., of St. Johns.

Edward Rosenthal, 58, Trade Publisher, Dies

Cincinnati, March 10 (AP).—Edward Rosenthal, 58, vice president of S. Rosenthal & Co., publishers and book binders, and owner or part owner of several trade magazines, died of a heart attack today.

He was sole owner of Automobile Digest, Radio Dial, Gasoline Dealer and Writer's Digest, and owned half interests in Independent Salesman, Sportsman's Review and American Building Associations News.

N. Y. Strikers Hit RFC Head

tion of Mayor LaGuardia's action in seeking to arbitrate the strike.

The committee declared the mayor "is entitled to the moral backing of every citizen who believes that no group of men, however large their possessions or realty holdings, has the right in a spirit of obstinate indifference to the welfare of New York to compel prolongation of a strike which means hardship and misery to many and may at any time bring violence to our city."

LaGuardia Is Praised.

"The mayor has done his part and done it well," the committee declared and suggested a public mass meeting to ratify his efforts for peace.

At the same time, striking employes of a Park avenue apartment building issued the charge that "Pennsylvania gunmen" were being packed into the building by the operators.

"Believe me they are tough looking," said C. E. Reilly, spokesman for 144 strikers in the building.

"There are 35 or 45 of them in there now. They not only have clubs, but guns, too."

"We just start in a great wave and keep rolling along," said Bambrick.

The night police compilation of strike data tonight showed these changes:

A total of 3,005 buildings affected as against 2,231 this morning.

Settlements in 222 cases against 201 this morning.

The strike missed the famous Empire State and Chrysler Buildings but struck the tiered Paramount Building which towers above Times Square. The Loew Building and the Strand Theater were affected as were the noted Palace Theater and the Pershing Square. Employes in the building where the Realty Advisory Board has been meeting were called out and some left, although the realty board said they did so reluctantly.

Police, who have arrested a great many strikers and sympathizers, were having trouble with the other side, also.

An unidentified replacement elevator operator was sought in connection with theft of a mink coat and jewelry valued at $55,000 from the apartment of Dr. and Mrs. Kurt M. Simon, on Park Avenue. Reports to police said the man ran his car to the Simons' floor, jimmied the door while they slept and left with the coat and jewels.

Two other men, Arthur Rothbart and Joseph Friedman, who police described as strike guards, were sent through the police line-up today, accused of assault and robbery in connection with a $2,287 robbery in Brooklyn. A third man, also described by police as a strike guard, was held for alleged violation of the State firearms law and for alleged vagrancy.

Nurse's Job Surety Approved by Board

Workers in welfare agencies are entitled to the same security as employes in business establishments, the boards of directors of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society decided yesterday in voting against asking for an exemption from the unemployment tax.

Meeting in the headquarters of the society in the Albee Building, the board accepted the recommendation of its legislative committee as presented by the chairman, Richard H. Wilmer. The committee held that welfare workers were entitled to the same job security as employes elsewhere.

Attending the meeting were Miss Elizabeth Ryan, Mrs. Charles Crawford, Joshua Evans, jr., Miss Janet Houtz, Miss Virginia Hunt, Mr. John Ihlder, Mrs. R. M. Kauffmann, Mrs. Emory Scott Land, Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. William Marbury, Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, Miss Elsa Peterson, Mr. Charles W. Pimper, Mr. Ord Preston, Mrs. Ord Preston, Mrs. John M. Sternhagen, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. B. W. Thoron, Mrs. J. W. Turrentine, Mr. Richard Wilmer, Mrs. Charles F. Wilson, Mrs. John Marvin Wright, Mr. John L. Proctor and Miss Gertrude H. Bowling, the executive director.

Blind Aid Society Elects Dr. Wilmer

The District of Columbia Society for the Prevention of Blindness was organized on a permanent basis yesterday at a meeting in the home of Dr. William H. Wilner.

Dr. Wilner was elected president of the society with Mrs. Allen Vories, first vice president; Dr. S. B. Muncaster, second vice president; Mrs. Louis B. Castell, secretary, and Dr. James Greer, treasurer.

Mrs. Henry G. Doyle, president of the Board of Education; Mrs. Martin King, Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, and C. Melvin Shapre were selected as members of the board of directors.

Funds are to be raised by the society to finance a campaign of education and co-ordination of agencies for the prevention of blindness.

Hughes, Van Devanter Attend Rites for Negro Messenger

Associate Justice Willis Van Devanter accompanied him to the rites.

The messenger, Edwin O. Burke, was employed in the United States Supreme Court for 18 years. He served as private messenger to the late Chief Justice William Howard Taft and was assigned to Hughes when the latter succeeded Taft.

In addition to delivering mail and performing other tasks, Burke was Chief Justice Hughes' barber. This meant that he trimmed one of the most famous beards in the world.

The affection which the Chief Justice had for Burke was shown when the health of the colored man began to fail. He had him transferred to the post of doorman at the marshals' entrance to the Supreme Court Building, a less exacting task.

Burke died Friday.

The funeral services yesterday morning were held in St. Augustine's Catholic Church, Fifteenth and L streets northwest. Chief Justice Hughes and Associate Justice Van Devanter arrived at the church at 10 o'clock and remained through the hour-long requiem mass.

The floral tributes around the casket included several from other members of the Supreme Court.

Chief administration officers of the court, including Key Green, the marshal, and Charles Elmore Cropley, the clerk, also attended the funeral.

Justice Harlan Fiske Stone on Monday night visited the funeral parlor of W. Ernest Jarvis, where Burke's body lay. He remained there more than two hours and offered condolences to members of the family and friends.

Burial was in Lincoln Memorial Cemetery.

Party Slaying Of Girl Suicide, Coroner Says

Friends Declare 17-Year-Old Was Despondent After Call From Youth.

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald after he had performed an autopsy on the body of 17-year-old Edna Trathen, who shot herself through the stomach while attending a party at 3220 Walbridge place northwest Monday night.

Edna slipped away from the table at a gay dinner party in the home of Bernard Livingston, Washington jeweler, went upstairs into her host's bedroom and killed herself with a gun found in a compartment of a specially designed bed.

The girl was having dinner with Livingston and two other couples. Her roommates, Anna Portell and Eleanor Shearer, whom Miss Trathen had roomed with at 1418 W street northwest after coming here several months ago from her home in Cheverly, Md., were accompanied by Harry Lasoer, of the Chastleton Apartments, and Ernest Hammersla, a traveling salesman.

Lasoer told police he found the body of the girl sprawled on the floor beside the bed in Livingston's room after hearing the report of a gun. A .38-caliber revolver was found beside the girl's body.

Detective Sergt. Jeremiah Flaherty, who investigated the death, said Edna's friends had declared she was despondent after she made a telephone call before dinner to a "boy friend."

Homicide squad detectives questioned the youth, John Hallett, of 21 L street northeast, yesterday morning. He said he had been out with the girl several times and that they had a misunderstanding at a dance Saturday night.

McKellar Praises New Deal Spending

By the Associated Press.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, in a radio speech last night in which he accused the newspaper industry generally of misleading the public with "propaganda," asserted New Deal spending was bringing "prosperity and happiness" to the Nation.

He declared former President Hoover added $5,000,000,000 to the national debt "in two years and two months and so far as beneficially affecting the depression is concerned, he might as well have gotten together $5,000,000,000, reduced it to ashes and then scattered the ashes in the ocean.

"On the other hand, Roosevelt spends $7,800,000,000 in three years and makes the country prosperous and happy and restores prosperity to our people.

The Senator added that, "Pernicious and untrue propaganda would make you believe that Roosevelt has squandered the taxpayers' money without doing any good."

Ousting of Frank Held Likely June 1

Madison, Wis., March 10 (AP).—The Capital Times said today that Dr. Glenn Frank either will resign or be removed as president of the University of Wisconsin by June 1.

Following closely on a report that a member of the board of regents was prepared to ask for the president's resignation, The Capital Times said it learned Dr. Frank had made a defense of his administration before the board at a closed session today.

Friction between Athletic Director Walter E. Meanwell and Football Coach Clarence W. Spears and lack of harmony in the athletic department generally resulted in an investigation by the regents, who subsequently dismissed Meanwell and Spears.

Dr. Frank declined to comment.

Two Are Jailed, Fined For Extortion Attempt

Denver, Colo., March 10 (AP).—Former Secretary of State James H. Carr and William E. O'Toole, liquor lobbyist, were sentenced to a year in jail and fined $400 each today for attempted extortion.

A jury convicted them of attempting to extort $3,000 from a wholesale drug firm for renewal of a State liquor license.

Carr, liquor licensing authority, resigned as secretary of state after the House of Representatives voted impeachment charges against him.

In passing sentence, Judge Henley A. Calvert declared that public corruption "is an offense that ranks with treason."

McKellar Wouldn't Even Want Republicans Bitten by Mad Dogs

Senator Backs $19,000 Cost of Building New Pound in Memphis.

Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, hopes that no mad dog ever bites a member of the Senate, not even Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), of Delaware, most active Senatorial opponent of the New Deal. He said so yesterday.

The remark was made in connection with McKellar's defense of the Memphis (Tenn.) dog pound, an institution that has suddenly become a leading issue in the Presidential campaign.

The Memphis dog pound is being erected with WPA money. McKellar said it was costing $19,000, of which the city is contributing $6,000.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, majority leader, in taking up the defense of the dog pound later, referred to it as a $25,000 project.

Representative Lehlbach (Republican), of New Jersey, recently remarked that he would like to live "in as handsome a building as the Memphis dogs will occupy."

"The dogs will have individual pens with fresh bedding every day, exercise runways, shower baths, and every imaginable comfort," Lehlbach said.

McKellar read a telegram from Mayor Watkins Overton, of Memphis, saying that an epidemic of rabies has made the new dog house necessary.

"The attempt to belittle and ridicule the construction of the Memphis dog pound is malicious, vicious and inspired," wired the mayor.

SENATOR McKELLAR.

Speaking of Hastings' opposition to the deluxe homes for dogs, McKellar said:

"I am surprised and astonished at my distinguished friend for taking such an untenable, inhuman position in regard to this project.

"As vitriolic as the senior Senator from Delaware is, I would not have him bitten by a mad dog for anything on earth."

Trade Post Held Way to Stability

Detroit, March 10 (AP).—The United States' trade agreement program was described tonight by Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, in an address prepared for delivery before a world trade conference here, as a means to "economic peace and stability."

Illness prevented Sayre's appearance at the conference, but his address was read by Henry Deimel, assistant chief of the trade agreements division of the Department of State. The conference was held in connection with the second Detroit and Michigan Exposition.

"The country as a whole should never lose sight of the fact that it has nothing to fear from tariff reductions which stimulate the mutually profitable exchange of goods," Sayre said. "Trade is the very life blood of our prosperity."

Austrian Police Seize 21 Nazis, Charge 'Plot'

Bad Aussee, Austria, March 10 (AP). Police tonight raided a session they described as a meeting of Nazi leaders from all parts of Austria plotting new action against the government.

Twenty-one were arrested.

Townsend Inquiry Scope Broadened

By the Associated Press.

An amended resolution, broadening the scope and authority of the Congressional investigation of the Townsend and other old-age pension plans, was approved yesterday by the House without a dissenting vote.

Chairman Bell of the bipartisan investigating committee offered the resolution, which specifically mentioned the bill by Representative McGroarty embodying the Townsend program of a 2 per cent transaction tax to raise funds for a $200 monthly pension to all persons over 60.

The committee also is authorized under the revised resolution to make its reports to the Speaker and print its findings regardless of whether Congress is in session.

The committee, Bell declared, is particularly interested in the financial structure of the Townsend organization, the motives of its leaders and "the propaganda issued together with efforts made to secure Congressional approval of the program rather than the economic feasibility of the plan."

Mrs. Roosevelt Lecture Faces Boycott Threat

Ohio Political Dispute Is Back of Reported Plan to Shun Her Talk.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, March 10.—A bitter dispute in the Cuyahoga County Democratic ranks resulted today, according to the Cleveland News, in a threat to boycott Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's lecture here tomorrow night.

The newspaper said a faction of the party headed by W. B. Gongwer, county committee chairman, made the threat to Undersecretary of the Interior Charles West in an attempt to have Gongwer named a delegate to the National Democratic Convention.

Gongwer was a delegate to the 1932 Chicago conventoin, where he supported Alfred E. Smith and refused to climb aboard the "Roosevelt bandwagon."

United States Senator Robert J. Bulkley, leader of the rival county division, has said Gongwer could not be a convention delegate. Gongwer claimed West said he had no objection to him.

West returned to Washington last night after spending nearly two weeks in Ohio in an attempt to solve the Cleveland delegate problem. West said today he expected to announce the Ohio slate of delegates tomorrow.

Gongwer said the report of a threatened boycott was untrue.

Mrs. Olive Joy Wright, past president of the Women's Democratic Club here, asserted, "Of course, there is a feeling among the rank and file that there isn't as much enthusiasm as there might be for Mrs. Roosevelt, but there wasn't any threat of any kind."

Other county party leaders also denied a boycott threat. Mrs. Bernice Pyke, collector of customs, appointed by President Roosevelt, said, "I never heard of such a thing. I would be terribly embarrassed if there wasn't a big audience." Adam Damm, claiming to have attended the conference with West, labeled it "a rotten rumor."

Mrs. Roosevelt, lecturing on "The Way to Peace," is scheduled to appear under the auspices of the Health and Parent Education Association.

Mrs. Katherine Wallin, a member of the committee sponsoring Mrs. Roosevelt's lecture said, "We know nothing about Democratic factional politics, but we have heard that the factional split may hurt our meeting."

Orchestra Fund Is Given $1,000 By Music Club

Provisional Berliner Gift Matched by Friday Morning Group.

A gift of $1,000 from the Friday Morning Music Club headed the contributions that yesterday brought the National Symphony Orchestra fund campaign nearer its $100,000 goal.

The $1,000 gift was the second presented the association since Mrs. Emile Berliner announced a provisional $1,000 donation, pending similar gifts from four other donors. Mr. and Mrs. Christian Heurich were the first to match the Berliner gift.

The Friday Morning Club, which has actively supported the Symphony since it was founded five years ago, presented its $1,000 through Mrs. Emile Berliner, club president.

Other gifts, announced at yesterday's campaign luncheon in the Carlton Hotel, included an $85 contribution from the U. S. Judicial Department. William F. Crosby reported $3,430 as Tuesday's contribution from the men's division of the metropolitan committee. Mrs. J. G. Rowcliff, speaking for the women's division of the same committee, announced $1,346 in new donations, bringing the division campaign total to $16,717.

Mrs. Barton Yount, chairman of the Army committee, reported $140. The Navy committee announced a total of $601 for the first five days of the campaign.

Business committee contributions for the day were $579, and the private school section of the educational committee brought in $125.

Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, co-chairman of the general committee, urged the workers to extend every effort to bring victory by Sunday, the last day of the drive.

"Too many people take the National Symphony Orchestra for granted," she declared. "They do not realize that every person who wants Dr. Kindler to continue with the magnificent work he has begun must put their shoulders to the wheel, and try to make the orchestra a permanent institution."

Charter Repeal Sought, Marshall Sells Bonds

Marshall, Va., March 10 (AP).—Despite a move to force a municipal vote on repealing Marshall's town charter, the local council last night awarded a $23,000 waterworks bond issue to Scott, Horner and Mason, Inc., of Lynchburg, on a bid of $23,349.60. The bonds bear interest of 4 per cent.

It is the intention of the municipal government to build town-owned waterworks with the proceeds from the bond issue, together with PWA money. An opposition group has fought the plan by issuing a petition for a special election to repeal the one-year-old charter.

Dr. F. E. Brown Dead; State Hospital Chief

Catonsville, Md., March 10 (AP).—Dr. Frank E. Brown, 68, senior assistant physician in charge of the criminal division at Spring Grove State Hospital, died last night. Dr. Brown, who had been a resident member of the hospital staff for 13 years, had been ill for a month. Death was attributed to a heart ailment. He received his medical degree at Georgetown College and interned at St. Agnes Hospital, Baltimore.

Active in Promoting Concerts

Post Staff Photos.

Kaye Burrell, left, is president and Mary Elizabeth Hand, seated with her, is secretary of the George Washington University Symphony Club, which not only stimulates interest in the National Symphony Orchestra concerts but also takes an active part in the symphony's efforts to raise funds to support future concerts.

Life of Symphony Club Hinges On $100,000 Music Fund Drive

George Washington Group Was Founded 5 Years Ago, to Develop Interest in Orchestra; Members Meet to Discuss Concerts Presented Here.

Upon the success of the National Symphony Orchestra Association's efforts to raise a $100,000 sustaining fund for next season's concerts depends the life of an active student organization at George Washington University.

Ever since the symphony was founded, five years ago, there has been a Symphony Club on the campus, which for steady growth has matched that of the National Symphony itself. It has enlisted more members each year, and has been represented at more concerts. Its development has spread interest in good music to an ever-expanding circle of music fans on the campus.

The club was organized for the specific purpose of developing interest in the National Symphony. Now, however, the group uses the symphony as a means of stimulating interest in good music among George Washington students.

"We have in the club many students who are not musicians. They neither play nor sing," Frances McMaugh, who has just retired as secretary of the club, pointed out. "Almost all of the members belong because they like to go to concerts and want to know more about the music that's played.

"Now we have meetings, to which we invite speakers who know music to talk. We discuss the music both before the concerts and afterward."

Each year the Symphony Club not only sends large numbers of students to the symphony concerts, but also gives substantial help in the sustaining fund campaign. Usually the club stages a musical or other entertainment event for the benefit of the symphony.

Now the Symphony Club is organizing a large party of students for the concert in Constitution Hall Sunday afternoon. The George Washington University Men's Glee Club is to assist Hans Kindler and the orchestra on that occasion. The men will sing the choral part of Liszt's "Faust" symphony, a work which has never been performed in Washington.

Facial Defect Work Outlined To Dental Unit

Corrective Work on Lips and Receding Chins Explained.

Dentistry, in co-operation with plastic surgery, can alleviate or completely cure deformities of the face, speakers told the Five-State Post-Graduate Clinic at the Wardman Park Hotel yesterday.

Dr. George A. Anderson, of the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery, was the first speaker to address the thousand dentists who have assembled from neighboring States and the District for the four-day dental convention.

Stressing the necessity of caring for childrens' teeth at an early age, Dr. Anderson explained how orthodontic work done in time could straighten a child's teeth without having recourse to anything save plates and braces.

Should this not be done, however, and the child should grow to maturity, dentistry already has progressed so far that it can correct almost any defects at any stage and restore the teeth so that they are both comfortable and serviceable.

The next speakers outlined the various aspects of this work, and its efficacy.

Speaking of the cases in which all the teeth were not beyond repair, Dr. I. Lester Furnas, of the Western Reserve School of Dentistry, Cleveland, Ohio, outlined the work which the dentist could do to help the patient. Partial dentures, or false teeth, could be put in the place of the teeth which were missing, and so fitted as to make it possible for the patient to chew his food as well as before the loss of his own teeth occurred.

Two Washington dentists, Dr. Vernon J. Lohr, who has served as crown and bridge professor in three colleges, and Dr. Edmond J. Bottazzi, who has worked as assistant with Dr. Lohr, were the main speakers in the afternoon session of the clinic.

They outlined the most recent work which has been done in the field of crown and bridge work, gold inlays and other restorations. Dr. Lohr spoke of the success which he has had with the use of gold as opposed to amalgum, and its superior durability.

Dr. Bottazzi, with the use of several charts, demonstrated what a complete rebuilding of the mouth could be done by replacing teeth which had been lost, and by cutting down and filling or building up teeth that had either become elongated or crooked.

Speaking of the research work which he and Dr. Bottazzi had performed, Dr. Lohr said that they had found that teeth should be replaced as soon as possible when they were lost, otherwise the whole mouth might become deformed, and many, if not all of the other teeth, would have to be removed.

"People who are deformed from receding chin or from protruding lips can be treated so that their whole facial expression will become normal," he explained, "and their chins will be of a natural shape."

Battlefield Park Unit Holds First Meeting

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 10.—The first new meeting of the newly organized Orange County Battlefield Park Association was held tonight in Orange, with Frank M. Chichester, president of the local association, and Branch Spalding, co-ordinating superintendent of the Civil War battlefield parks in Virginia, as the chief speakers.

The section which the Orange men wish embraced in the park system are the Confederate trench lines, running from the Rapidan River southward and generally facing Mine Run. They were the fortifications thrown up by Gen. Lee's men while the Army of Northern Virginia was in camp in Orange County prior to its move toward the Wilderness.

T. C. Townsend Refuses To Enter Governor Race

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 10.—T. C. Townsend, of Charleston, Republican nominee for Governor of West Virginia in 1932, who was defeated by the present Democratic Governor, H. G. Kump, disclosed today that he would not be a candidate for the party nomination for the office this year.

He expressed deep appreciation for requests that he make the race again, but stated that obligations to business and professional associates were such that he could not, if nominated and elected, give full time and attention to the governorship. He is a former State tax commissioner.

Council Parley Is Re-enacted To 'Satisfy' Law

Alexandria's Session Last Month Held Illegal; Acts Re-Adopted.

Last month's meetings of the Alexandria city council were held last night.

In deference to Councilman Henry O'B. Cooper, who contended that meetings of February 25 and 26 were illegal, the council last night re-enacted all acts adopted at the meetings.

Cooper observed that the city charter specifies that meetings of the council shall begin at 7:30 p. m., whereas the meeting of February 25 didn't get under way until 9:30 p. m., and council, therefore, found it necessary to finish its business at a meeting the following night.

Cooper contended that an adjourned meeting of the council can't be held without the consent of the full council.

Saw Fire Apparatus.

What delayed the February 25 meeting beyond the usual starting time was a demonstration of fire-fighting equipment recently purchased by the city. Most of the councilmen went to see the demonstration. Furthermore, the mayor and other city officials entertained the visiting firemen at dinner that night.

Cooper, it was recalled, opposed purchase of the fire apparatus.

Thirty items acted upon at last month's meetings were re-enacted last night. The council decided to reconsider its approval of an $1,800 salary for a superintendent of public welfare, referring the proposition back to the board of public welfare.

Police Judge James R. Duncan asked the council for an audit by the State, as well as the city, of the accounts of J. Thornton Goods, resigned clerk of civil and police courts.

Driver to Face Court.

Chambersburg, Pa., March 10.—Truman C. Kirkpatrick, 20, of Fayetteville, faces charges of drunken driving and failing to stop after an accident as the result of his arrest yesterday. He is alleged to have struck Carson Bitner, employe of the borough street department. He furnished bond.

Senate Studies WPA Program

Opponents Are Attacked.

Opponents of the relief program, he said, "hope to ridicule and drive back into the soup lines the great number of unemployed men and women who are simply asking an opportunity to earn a living for themselves and their families in the old-fashioned and respectable way."

"These Republican spokesmen and Liberty Leaguers go about the country crying over what they call the breakdown of local responsibility and local self-government," he continued. "As a matter of fact, every project undertaken by the Works Progress Administration was first sponsored by local authorities."

Robinson went into a detailed explanation of various projects which have been subjected to attack. They included the Government-financed dog pound at Memphis, Tenn.; the painting of fire hydrants in Wilmington, Del.; the cobbling of shoes at Mineola, Long Island; the employment of housekeepers for families, health projects in Cleveland, the killing of rats, the construction of bridle paths, and the draining of a "piggery" at Waltham, Mass. Robinson attempted to justify each of these projects and insisted that their critics had not told the whole truth about them.

"Facts Suppressed."

"By first-hand evidence, I have shown you that both the Republican committee and the Liberty League are guilty of suppressing the facts, of distorting the facts, and of misrepresenting the facts," he said.

Robinson then went into a defense of "white collar" projects.

"The Liberty League argument boils down to this—in case of war the artists, musicians and writers may have the privilege of being destroyed by Du Pont gunpowder, but in time of peace they must not be given aid through Federal funds," he concluded.

Vandenberg said he would not discuss whether the Memphis dog pound had "put the dog in boondoggling" but that he did not want the Senate left with the impression that the only challenge against the WPA is a charge of boondoggling.

The Michigan Senator said that consideration must be given to whether the WPA is being subjected to political exploitation.

Holt Charges Recalled.

"A far more fundamental charge in that respect has been made from the Democratic side than from the Republican side," he said.

He evidently was referring to recent charges made Senator Holt (Democrat), West Virginia.

"There should be a short, concise act passed at this session of Congress to enable PWA to aid in the construction of those projects which are most useful and worthy," he said.

"Work relief must be supplemented by a public works program of the character I am suggesting in order that our attack on the unemployment problem shall be coordinated and well balanced.

"I know the Administration would condemn political exploitation," Vandenberg continued. "But the charges won't be downed until a complete investigation reveals the right and wrong of the charges."

He said the second basic question is one of whether it is wise for emergency relief officials to commit the country to long-time projects which are subsequently left to Congress to finance. He said it was "bad policy" for the WPA to appropriate $5,000,000 for the Florida ship canal, which will eventually cost $200,000,000 and for the Passamaquoddy power development, which will ultimately cost $30,000,000. He added that five large reclamation projects in the same category will cost $500,000,000 before they are completed.

Reply By Robinson.

"Congress is being robbed of its free opportunity to pass on these things," he said.

Robinson replied that Vandenberg had become a champion of "boondoggling" by expressing preference for projects which can be quickly completed.

Hayden, asking for a $700,000,000 appropriation for the Ickes Public Works Administration, said that this money could be used in 12 to 15 months to partially finance $1,500,000,000 in construction.

Hayden suggested that it might be well to reduce the grants for projects partially financed by the Government to below 45 per cent, so that more than 55 per cent will eventually be repaid. He also suggested that communities might be compensated for this reduction in grants by a reduction in interest rates on loans from 4 per cent to 3 per cent or 3½ per cent.

Hayden said the PWA "has demonstrated to the country that the money intrusted to it has been economically and honestly spent on projects of unchallenged worth."

"The expenditure of vast sums has been marred by no scandal," he said. "The PWA has good reason to be proud of its achievements."

Garner Sworn As Trial Judge In Ritter Case

By the Associated Press.

The Senate transformed itself with great solemnity yesterday from a legislative body to a court of justice—the twelfth such instance in history—in preparation for the impeachment trial of Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter, of Florida.

Even the ancient cry, "Hear ye, hear ye hear ye," echoed through the chamber as a prelude to the protracted but entirely preliminary ceremonies. The actual trial of Judge Ritter—impeached by the House for "misbehavior, and for high crimes and misdemeanors"—probably will not be held until some time in April.

The proceedings were opened as three members of the House Judiciary Committee, acting as managers for that branch, marched solemnly down the Senate aisle and offered verbally the articles of impeachment.

$75,000 Fee Charged.

In them were charges that the Southern Florida judge "corruptly and unlawfully accepted and received for his own use and benefit" from A. L. Rankin, his former law partner, "sums of money amounting to $4,500." In the House it was charged that acceptance followed an allowance to Rankin of a $75,000 fee in receivership.

Immediately upon reading of the articles, Vice President Garner was sworn by Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, Senate dean, as presiding judge to "do impartial justice."

Every Senator in the chamber was sworn as a juror after Chairman Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, of the Judiciary Committee, wearing a cutaway, announced that "if anyone wishes not to serve, now is the time to make known his wishes." Senators Fletcher and Trammell, Florida Democrats, took the oath with the rest.

Spectators Warned.

Chesley W. Jurney, Senate sergeant at arms, gave warning for spectators to "keep silent on pain of imprisonment." When it was over, however, he told reporters that he had made an agreement with Frank Walsh, of New York, counsel for Ritter, that the summons calling for the defendant's appearance at the bar of the Senate Thursday would be served in Washington Thursday morning. Ritter was reported en route here from Florida.

After this appearance, Ritter will be given about 26 days to prepare a formal answer. Then a date will be set for the actual trial.

A two-thirds vote on any one of the four articles lodged against Ritter will be necessary for conviction.

Conviction carries with it removal from office. Further punishment can be given by the Senate by forbidding a convicted person from ever again holding public office.

D. C. Girls Sought By Virginia Police

The girls, Ruth Dixon, 728 Upshur street northwest, and Esther Kishter, of 618 Keefer street northwest, left their homes about 7 p. m., talked to some friends on the corner and then began their trip, hitch-hiking.

Word received here by the girls' parents yesterday carried information they had spent the night in Warrenton. They are expected to visit Ruth's grandmother, who lives in Roanoke. They had about $6 and only the clothes they wore when they left.

Two Workmen Injured At New Library Annex

Two workmen were slightly injured yesterday on the construction job at the new Congressional Library annex. Ralph Chandler, 43, 5814 Fourth street northwest, was treated at Providence Hospital for possible fractured ribs after he was struck in the side by a falling piece of steel. His condition is not serious.

John McRae, 55, 1288 Neal street northeast, received severe head and face cuts when he was struck by a crank handle while starting the motor on a steel hoist. He was treated at Providence Hospital.

Man Stabbed to Death In Fight Over Clothes

A fight over the ownership of a shirt in a house behind 438 N street northwest yesterday afternoon cost "Yellow" Rice, colored, 33, his life. Police found Rice lying on the floor of the house with a knife wound in his chest.

A colored man about 32 years old, who formerly lived in the house, is sought by police in connection with the case. He is described as being about 6 feet tall, weighing 170 pounds and with a burn scar on his left cheek.

Legislator Escapes Tag

ulation welcome to Washington, with an appeal to observe traffic rules.

Goodman's violation note read: "No parking 8 to 9:30 a. m., unless on official business."

During the "ticketing" activities several students stood on the sidewalk gazing with chagrin at their cars and watching a police tow-car impound a machine with Minnesota tags.

O'Connell's car was parked within a few feet of a "no parking" sign. A young man suddenly hurried from the law school, unlocked the car door and drove quickly away. As he left, the "courtesy" card fluttered to the street beneath wheels of oncoming vehicles.

Duffy Warrant Unserved.

The Minnesota car was listed to Richard D. Schall, younger son of the late Senator Schall. It bore no Congressional tag. Young Schall later appeared at Police Headquarters and deposited $5.

Meanwhile, application for a traffic warrant against Senator F. Ryan Duff (Democrat), Wisconsin, charging him with violating a parking regulation on Connecticut avenue last month, remained in Police Court files awaiting routine issuance.

Policeman S. J. Prophet, Eighth Precinct, applied for the warrant after no effort was made to settle a ticket he placed on Senator Duffy's car February 28. The Senator yesterday insisted he knew nothing about the alleged ticket, adding:

"As I recently pointed out to Senator Borah, I do not believe members of Congress are subject to arrest for violations of city ordinances which do not constitute a breach of the peace. While I do not advocate violations of the law by members of Congress, I intend to demand my constitutional rights as I see them."

He said that if police insist on going through with the case, he will fight it. It would be difficult to determine just where his car was parked when the alleged violation took place, Senator Duffy declared.

"I doubt if my automobile were parked in one of those trick areas where they let you park on one side in the morning and another in the afternoon."

Policeman Prophet said he was not aware the car he "ticketed" belonged to Senator Duffy. The Senator, however, pointed out that it could not have been taken for the auto of a private citizen, because it bore a Congressional tag.

Police Court attaches said the warrant application would receive "routine handling."

"It may be a matter of weeks before it is issued," a spokesman reported.

Jammed With Work.

"We are jammed with work and will reach this case in the regular course of time. So far, no efforts have been made to have it withdrawn."

In yesterday's discussion of "ticket fixing" before the House Traffic sub-committee, the question was raised when Representative Carpenter asked Canning "what he thought of the reputed practice?"

"I have given the subject a great deal of thought," Canning replied. "Although I don't believe it is an evil in Washington, there are other cities where it has become an evil."

He then cited figures showing convictions as compared to arrests in Philadelphia. Of some 162,000 tickets issued in that city during last year, only 4,000 persons paid fines, he said.

At this point, Carpenter interjected to say:

"My idea of ticket fixing which ought to be stopped is by the flagrant violator who is arrested for speeding and then calls on a friend who might have influence to 'fix it up.'"

Among several recommendations for improvement in local traffic conditions, Canning urged further extension of the "stagger hour" system of Government bureau operations—closing and opening.

Other suggestions included an increased police force; an enlarged system of accident investigation; assignment of rowing mechanical crews to inspect vehicles; additional one-way streets for rush hours and more playgrounds for children.

It was also announced yesterday that the Budget Bureau had turned down a measure supported by the Commissioners which would require semi annual inspection of all motor vehicles. It was pointed out that less than 3 per cent of vehicles involved in local accidents were found to be mechanically defective.

Motorman Fined.

In line with Maj. Ernest W. Brown's "crack down" drive against public vehicle drivers, a street car motorman was fined for speeding yesterday, despite a plea in Police Court that street car operators are exempt from arrest for violations of traffic laws.

The motorman, Thomas Greenhorn, 400 block of Warner street northwest, was fined $10. He was arrested on Monroe street northwest by Policeman R. W. Davis, traffic division, for driving his heavy vehicle at 34 miles an hour.

"I see no reason why the law does not apply to public vehicles as well as any other," said Judge John P. McMahon.

"We will prosecute street car and bus drivers the same as any other type of violator," said George Neilson, assistant corporation counsel.

Cutten Is Indicted On Tax Complaint

Chicago, March 10 (AP).—An indictment charging Arthur W. Cutten, famous grain trader, with the "wilful attempt to defeat and evade an income tax" for 1929, amounting to $414,525.54, was returned by the Federal grand jury today.

The indictment also named William E. Gatewood, formerly an internal revenue agent, charging he aided Cutten in the alleged tax dodging.

Cutten, self-styled "speculator," was called "the nation's biggest grain trader" in hearings before the Grain Futures Administration, which a year ago issued an order disbarring him from American grain pits.

Yesterday the Supreme Court of the United States agreed to hear the Government's appeal from a decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, which stayed the disbarrment.

Army Doctor Reports Toxin for Meningitis

Kansas City, March 10 (AP).—Development of a cerebrospinal meningitis toxin that has checked "two virulent epidemics" was reported tonight by an Army doctor, Capt. Dwight M. Kuhns, of Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

Dr. Kuhns told a medical clinic here that use of his toxin, obtained from cultures taken from meningitis victims, had halted meningitis epidemics in two CCC camps.

A similar toxin was developed previously, he said, but has never been used in an epidemic.

Securities Act Held Violation Of State Rights

Supreme Court Told Law Is Designed to Regulate Individual Conduct.

By the Associated Press.

The 1933 securities act was challenged in the Supreme Court yesterday as an instrument to regulate individual conduct and defended as being necessary to prevent fraud.

Counsel for J. Edward Jones, New York broker, attacked the law as an invalid delegation of Congressional authority and a violation of State rights.

The Government countered with the contention that Congress had full power over the mails and interstate commerce "to protect the public from fraud that is widespread."

James M. Beck, former Republican solicitor general, who is one of the counsel for Jones, will complete his arguments today. Then the court will turn to another challenged New Deal law—the Guffey soft coal control act.

The State of Washington, in a brief filed with the court yesterday, became the sixth State to support the Guffey measure, which authorizes Federal regulation of wages and hours, as well as price-fixing in the bituminous coal industry.

Regulates Individual Conduct.

Harry O. Glasser, of Enid, Okla., representing Jones, told the justices that the "truth in securities" act "does not regulate commerce but individual conduct." He added that despite the act it was still possible for "wildcat" stock to be sold through the mails.

John J. Burns, Securities Commission attorney, and Stanley Reed, solicitor general, denied the act violated State rights or represented an invalid delegation of Congressional power.

Jones sought to register $100,000 worth of participation trust certificates with the commission in 1934. After the commisison had questioned some statements in his application, he tried to withdraw his registration. This the commission refused. It was upheld in the lower courts.

Glasser contended the commission had no such authority. He asserted it was on a "fishing expedition" to get other information.

Burns told the court the commission's refusal to permit withdrawal of the registration was based on its own rules and was not set forth in the act itself.

Says Congress Gave Authority.

Questioned by Justices Butler and McReynolds on where the commission derived power to make such rules, Burns replied that it was given that authority by Congress.

On the other hand, Glasser contended the commission order was void because it was issued as a newspaper release and not published as a legal document. Later it was developed that now all of the commission's rules are published in the Federal Register.

"This act," the Oklahoma attorney said, "regulates the conduct of a person who wants to put something in the mail.

"It does not keep fraudulent security issues out of the mails. If a promoter of a wildcat oil stock scheme tells the truth to the commission, his securities may be sent through the mails and the people will be led to believe that they are good.

"If the security issue is good and honest, but the person registering it makes a misstatement, it can be kept out of the mails.

"That is not purifying the mails."

Burns argued a "dishonest registrant could play fast and loose" with the commission if it did not have the power to forbid the withdrawal of registrations.

3 Colleges to Get Bill For Police Services

Cambridge, Mass., March 10 (AP).—The city of Cambridge is going to assess a "service charge" against the previously tax-exempt schools of Harvard, Radcliffe and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Mayor John D. Lynch announced today.

The levy, $10 for every $1,000 of valuation, is to pay for policing Harvard football games and student demonstrations, removal of rubbish and ashes, and fire department services.

Lynch asserted bills would be sent the institutions within six weeks, and they would total at least $1,000,000.

No Gas for Drunk Drivers.

Canton, Ohio, March 10 (AP).—A city ordinance, prohibiting the sale of gasoline or oil to intoxicated motorists, became effective here today. Passed by city council last night, the ordinance provides penalties for gasoline station attendants who violate it.

Six Motorists Lose Permits For Speeding

Expert Doubts Women Less Brainy Than Men

Moscow, March 1 (AP).—V. P. Osipoff, director of the Bekteroff Institute for the Study of Brains, reported tonight there is no scientific basis for the theory women's brains are inferior structurally to men's.

The report was based on a study of 500 human brains carried on by the institute over a period of years.

The investigations proved it is impossible to determine from its structure whether a brain belongs to a man or woman, Osipoff said.

He denounced the theory disproved by the study as a "convenient argument used in some countries to enable the strong to exploit the weak."

Baldwin Wins In Vote Testing Defense Policy

Lloyd George Denounces French in House Clash With Churchill.

By the United Press.

London, March 10.—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's government won a victory tonight when the House of Commons voted 378 to 155 to reject a laborite motion to censure the cabinet for its white paper on national defense.

"France is in no position to point the finger of scorn at Germany on the grounds of treaty breaking," David Lloyd George, war-time prime minister, said.

"Germany has been reckless and she has broken a treaty but any court of equity would rule she could call on evidence for mitigation of her fault. For 12 years or more France has refused to carry out her undertaking to disarm. Even after the Locarno treaty her armaments increased yearly."

Speaking for the government, Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the Exchequer, said:

"As a result of today's exchange of views in Paris the British delegates considered it desirable to proceed to London to discuss the situation with the government. For further convenience the French, Italian and Belgian governments agreed that conversations between the signatories of the Locarno treaty should be conducted in London."

Churchill, George Debate.

Winston Churchill, Lloyd George said, drew this picture of Germany:

"She is today a single country without allies, while in 1914 she had Austria as well as Turkey, who inflicted two severe defeats on us."

To which Lloyd George countered:

"We are not alone today. Czechoslovakia has a highly trained army of 1,000,000 men. And the air forces of Russia and France could overwhelm Germany. She is not so mad as to commit the folly of war."

Churchill argued against the former prime minister:

"A terrible dilemma confronts the German government. If it continues to pile up debt for armaments there will be bankruptcy. If it stops there is tremendous unemployment. The German government must soon choose between internal and external catastrophe. Can we doubt which course the men at the head of Germany are likely to choose?

In view of the French refusal to negotiate with Germany and because of other as yet unannounced French demands, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Lord Halifax, lord privy seal and former war minister, today asked that further international deliberations be held in London.

Russia Stands Firm.

British uneasiness apparently was increased by a Soviet Russian communication assuming an attitude equally as firm as that posed by France.

While Britain desires to use the Rhine-Locarno crisis to effect a new deal for Europe, France and Russia and their allies are determined to block all bargaining with Germany. At the same time they are anxious to strengthen a European anti-German coalition.

Soviet Russia meanwhile assumed leadership of nations unwilling to compromise with Germany and opposed to Great Britain's policy of moderation.

Russia officially informed Britain that the Soviet government is "resolutely opposed" to negotiations with Germany, and that it is ready to "participate actively" in any action decided upon at Geneva.

The Soviet communication was regarded as foreshadowing a united front in the League of Nations Council by Russia, France, the Little Entente, Turkey and possibly others, not only against Germany but also against the British inclination to compromise with Hitler regardless of Germany's destruction of the Locarno Treaty.

Ivan Maiski, Soviet ambassador to the court of St. James, visited the House of Commons at 4:30 p. m. and delivered his important oral communication to Lord Cranborne, British parliamentary undersecretary of state, on the basis of instructions received shortly before from Moscow.

Potemkin, Soviet ambassador to Paris, conveyed a similar message to French Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin in Paris.

Britain Ready to Back France

any humiliation in negotiating after she said she would not.

Hitler Saturday offered to negotiate peace pacts as a substitute for his scrapping of Locarno, but Sarraut flatly rejected this offer in a radio speech to the nation Sunday night.

A meeting of the League's Committee of Thirteen, which was to have considered Mussolini's peace reply at Geneva tomorrow, has been postponed until the German problem is settled.

This postponement will avoid any action by the League that might make difficult a settlement satisfactory to Mussolini, which is the price that must be paid for his support.

'Defense' for Belgium.

Belgium's situation is said to have influenced the British attitude. All signatories agreed that Belgium might again be a victim as in 1914, of Franco-German bad blood and Eden is reported to have said that humanity commanded proper protection of Belgium, regardless of political differences between France and Britain.

France, officials said, is determined to act against Germany only if thoroughly supported. She bases her whole case on collective security and co-operation pledged under the Locarno treaty.

Under no circumstances, it was added, will she take any drastic action alone, but insist that the others join her in a course sufficiently firm to get results from Hitler and revive League prestige.

Eden found the French so strong for sanctions or similar action that he considered the situation dangerous. He told Baldwin, it was said, that something would have to be done and French officials gained the impression he is beginning to see some merit in Flandin's case.

Premier Mussolini, it was learned, has promised to back France in any "reasonable" stand toward the Reich if the League of Nations will call off sanctions against him and take a "sensible" view of the Italo-Ethiopian war.

Mussolini feels more inclined to talk in London, where his representative would be free from League influence, and if a decision is taken there to lift sanctions it would be considered a "proud victory" for Italy.

The Council at its meeting Saturday in London would ratify whatever settlement the Locarno parties agree upon Thursday.

The breach between Great Britain and France had narrowed earlier, when, an authoritative source said, the British offered the French strong military guarantees as a reward for negotiation with Berlin.

Previously the two had disagreed when Britain refused to support strong punitive action.

The French general staff is understood to feel that if there must be war, it wants it now, rather than later when Germany will be ready.

Gen. Louis Felix Maurin, minister of war, reported to the general staff that if four military classes were recalled France would have an army 1,000,000 strong and could "take and hold the Rhineland."

An official communique of the Locarno talks said Foreign Minister Flandin "made it clear that the object of the meeting was to exchange information and to define the situation, but no resolution will be proposed and no decision will be taken before the League Council meeting."

French Statements.

Paris, March 10 (U.P.).—Striking events of the day in the Locarno crisis included governmental declarations in Parliament by Premier Albert Sarraut and Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin.

Sarraut spoke to the Chamber of Deputies and Flandin to the Senate.

Sarraut reiterated that France is willing to negotiate for future peace but, he said, "France cannot negotiate under a regime of violence and under renunciation of signatures freely exchanged. France remains ready to negotiate with Germany, once respect for international law again is assured.

"Who can maintain the least faith in a treaty if the strongest will suffices to destroy it?" Sarraut continued.

"In that case we must return resolutely to military alliances and super-armaments and let us admit it. We must return to war begun by the strongest party at the most favorable moment."

He insisted France is not acting as one with wounded pride or because of lost guarantees for her own security.

"But," the premier said, "France poses the problem of the real value of treaties, of general guarantees, of the League Covenant for its adherents and of the fidelity of members to their commitments.

"She poses the anguishing question of force—of justice. We place ourselves in the framework of the League because it is the fate of the League which must hang in the balance in the near future."

Sarraut was interrupted many times by applause. Deputies of the Left and Center rose and cheered him at the end.

The premier traced the history of postwar Franco-German relations and again refuted Hitler's objections to the Franco-Soviet Treaty.

He detailed events leading up to Germany's denunciation of Locarno and attacked Hitler for appealing to the French nation "over the head of the government."

"We ask Hitler in the name of culture and virtues of his race to reflect on the new responsibilities some want him to assume in history," he said. "We declare to him solemnly that we never wished and do not wish to injure either his liberty or honor. We agree with the German government that the French people have nothing to gain from German misery.

"We ask Hitler now how the reoccupation of the demilitarized zone helps to solve the problems we face.

Sarraut appealed to the nation to support the government, urging devotion to the fatherland which "excludes no party, no religion, no race."

He said:

"The future of Europe is at stake. France, faithful to her traditions and ideals, must remain unanimous in action to safeguard the peace."

Flandin made a similar declaration to the Senate. The chamber suspended after Sarraut's speech. Demands for interpellations failed to materialize.

G. O. P. Post Given Curtis' Secretary

By the Associated Press.

Miss Lola Williams, first woman to serve as a Vice President's secretary, yesterday took a position with the Republican National Committee because she believed that was what her old boss, the late Charles Curtis, would want.

In accepting the position as secretary to Mrs. Robert Lincoln Hoyal, head of the women's division, Miss Williams said:

"Several positions have been offered me since his death. I took the one I thought he would want me to take."

Remarking that she knew Curtis had declared for Landon, she added her own belief that his deepest interest was for the success of the Republican Party as a whole.

"I'm for any candidate," she said.

Gen. Hagood Honored By Texas Legionnaires

San Antonio, Tex., March 10 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, relieved commander of the Eighth Corps Area, was honored today with a luncheon by the Business and Professional Men's Post of the American Legion.

Regular and retired Army officers and citizens of San Antonio attended the luncheon, given, it was explained, to show the city's appreciation for what Gen. Hagood has done in building up the Army in this corps area.

Gen. Hagood responded briefly to introductory remarks.

League Certain Showdown Due On Rhine Crisis

By the United Press.

Geneva, March 10.—Sudden transfer of diplomatic bargaining over the European crisis to London tonight convinced the League of Nations that France has precipitated the long-awaited showdown with German Chancellor Adolf Hitler.

Delegates who hurriedly consulted Paris and other capitals after the Locarno conferees and League Council members were ordered to London for Thursday and Saturday, said the British have been unable to break down French insistence that the League forget the Italo-Ethiopian conflict for the time being and take strong action, not strong words, against Germany.

League headquarters had completed preparations for Wednesday's now-abandoned meeting of the Committee of Thirteen when orders arrived from Paris to convene the Council in London Saturday.

Ten foreign ministers and other delegates en route to Geneva had to be halted and advised to proceed to London instead of Geneva.

The League of Nations Secretariat announced officially tonight that its council will convene in London Saturday to consider the European crisis.

Meanwhile, League officials, stunned by fast-moving Paris developments, ordered indefinite postponement of Wednesday's scheduled meeting of the League of Nations Committee of Thirteen.

The session, scheduled to receive Italian and Ethiopian replies to the committee's appeal for peace in East Africa, was postponed after the sudden decision of British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Lord Halifax, British lord privy seal and former war minister, who were in Paris, to fly back to London.

Originally the committee was slated to meet today, but its sitting was put over to accommodate the Paris meeting of Locarno Treaty signatories.

Sudden postponement of the committee's session and convocation of the Council for Saturday in London indicated League officials were convinced that Chancellor Adolf Hitler's action in denouncing the Locarno Treaty precipitated a European crisis completely sweeping the Italo-Ethiopian conflict into the background.

Wide Split Evidenced.

It was believed the sudden decisions of tonight were due to discovery that the French and Belgians again are adamant in demanding economic and financial sanctions against Germany. Officials believed also that a wide divergence has developed between the Locarno conferees.

Many here believe that the Locarno conferees have decided that some drastic action must be taken against Germany.

The call to the League secretariat for a sudden and possibly fateful postponement came after Eden, French Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin, Belgian Premier Paul Van Zeeland and Italian Ambassador Cerruti re-met hastily at the French foreign office.

Eden called the Paris meeting after receiving a London telephone call from Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin. He proceeded at once to the Quai d'Orsay, talked with Flandin, and summoned Van Zeeland and Cerruti.

Before the postponement order the League was shocked by reports that Turkey now is likely to demand the right to refortify the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus if Germany is allowed to continue occupation of the demilitarized Rhineland zone.

Officials Worried.

Meanwhile, League officials, first gratified by the conciliatory tone of Paris consultations today among signatories of the Locarno Treaty, became worried over the general European situation.

British quarters said that as a result of late aftrenoon and evening discussions in Paris, the situation appears graver than first realized.

One important point apparently overlooked previously was that Germany had no excuse for violating the Locarno Treaty, so far as Belgium was concerned, on the ground of the Franco-Soviet pact. Belgium has nothing to do with the Franco-Soviet pact of nonaggression and mutual military assistance.

In the course of Paris conversations, it was reported, the Locarno signatories became impressed by the fact that the treaty is of more vital importance to Belgium than to France.

Hence its violation without the slightest Belgian provocation was deemed extremely grave.

British circles explained that Eden and Lord Halifax suddenly decided to fly back to London in order to confer with the British cabinet Wednesday and receive new instructions.

Counsel Says Slain Man Tortured Son

Reading, Pa., March 10 (AP).—Louis Toontas, 14, sobbed fitfully at his trial today while former Judge John B. Stevens told the jury torture and horror drove the junior high school student to slay his father, James, an auto mechanic.

Louis' school chums, their books slung over their shoulders, listened from the gallery to the defense chief's story.

Stevens related the boy was hanged by his wrists, his tongue and ears were twisted with pliers and he was beaten and kicked by the parent for fancied disobedience. Stevens cited as an example that Louis was whipped because he attended a basketball game.

Toontas, who spent yesterday winking at "the kids" in the gallery, turned pale and wept as Stevens made his plea and then called the mother, Mrs. Sarah Toontas, small and wrinkled, to the stand. She told a story of tragic home life. An interpreter aided her recital.

Claudette Colbert Wins In $1,538 Traffic Suit

Los Angeles, March 10 (AP).—Claudette Colbert, film actress, won today in a $1,538 damage suit over a traffic accident.

Municipal Judge Wilbur Curtis ordered a directed verdict for Miss Colbert, holding that Mrs. Beatrice Mannocci-Roncidelli, who brought the suit, did not make a proper hand signal before the crash.

The actress' chauffeur was named codefendant.

War in Europe Unlikely Now, Bingham Finds

Ambassador Sees Roosevelt and Hull; Denies Visit Due to Rhine Crisis.

By the Associated Press.

A belief that war is not imminent in Europe despite the Franco-German tension was expressed yesterday by Robert W. Bingham, American Ambassador to Great Britain, after a series of White House and State Department conferences.

"The situation is dangerous and trying," said the envoy, who is home on leave, "but I do not think there is danger of an immediate armed conflict."

Ambassador Bingham lunched with Mr. Roosevelt in his office after spending more than an hour in conferring with Secretary Hull, William Phillips, Undersecertary of State, and others.

Although the details of their several talks were not revealed, it was indicated that officials here generally shared the view that the crisis precipitated by German remilitarization of the Rhineland was not yet sufficiently acute to require Bingham to cut short his holiday and hurry back to London.

The Ambassador said he expected to sail for England in ten days or two weeks in accordance with his original plans when he left London more than a month ago.

Although more than ordinary interest attached to the envoy's visit to the State Department because it was his first since last week's critical European development, he asserted he was not summoned on that account.

He came here from his home in Lousiville, Ky., he said, to keep yesterday's engagement with the President. He intends to return to Louisville within a day or two.

Theater Managers Call Play Contract Strike

New York, March 10 (AP).—Broadway's first industry was suspended today as theatrical managers refused to traffic in play manuscripts, declining even to read dramas sent them for production.

They have united against the new producing contract, adopted last week by the Dramatists Guild, which denies them an equal share in the money derived from play sales to motion pictures.

4,000 Planes For Air Corps Asked of House

War Threats Spur Program of Reconstructing Combat Force.

An aerial force of 4,000 new planes would be added to the combat strength of the Army Air Corps under a bill approved yesterday by the House Military Affairs Committee.

Called into executive session as word reached the Capitol of renewed military activity in Central Europe, the committee quickly attached unanimous indorsement to the measure sponsored by Chairman McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, authorizing the reconstruction of the Nation's "first line of defense."

At the same time members of both Houses pushed ahead with plans to pass the two regular defense supply bills providing $59,000,000 for 565 Army planes and $26,000,000 for 333 Navy planes.

838 Fighting Planes.

Existing law authorizes an Army Air Corps of 2,320 planes. However, funds to build up to this strength, as recommended by two special boards, have not been appropriated. At the present time 838 fighting planes are in service with 358 others being flown as transports and trainers.

Maj. Gen. Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps, testified before the Military Committee that his branch would have an estimated 779 plans on hand by June 30 of next year. More than 500 of these would be obsolete, having reached five years of age.

"Where does that leave us," asked Representative Rogers (Democrat), New Hampshire, "when we have recommendations for 2,320 planes? Assistant Secretary Woodring said that an appropriation of the size in the War Department bill (providing 565 planes) will never permit the Army Air Corps to reach its desired strength as it will only take care of approximately yearly losses."

More Pilots Needed.

In his annual report Secretary Dern recommended purchase of 4,000 planes in the next five years. He estimated that such a program would leave the Army with 3,000 combat ships by 1941. This figure allows for obsolescence and "crack-ups."

Air Corps and General Staff officers commenting informally yesterday said they were "encouraged by the committee's action."

However, if Congress wants a larger air force we will have to train and commission some more pilots," said one officer. "We can't fly them without good pilots," he added.

The bill as written does not take up the personal question, but it is understood that this will "come later." At the present time the Air Corps has 1,400 regular pilots and about 200 additional Reserve officers now on active flying duty. The enlisted strength is around 14,500 men.

It was understood unofficially last night that McSwain will call his bill before the House "in the near future." The measure would allow an increase in the number of planes provided in the current War Department supply bill.

Members of the Military Committee already have endeavored to boost the limit of 565 planes for which funds are provided in the bill now before the Senate. However, they have been unsuccessful, one reason being that a sizable increase might carry Air Corps strength past the limit authorized under present law.

Reserve Bill Delayed.

As the plans for an increased Air Corps moved forward a bill for revision of the naval reserve act to provide a personnel increase up to 16,000 officers and 150,000 men struck a snag which may prevent action this session of Congress.

Chairman Delaney (Democrat), of New York, of the Naval subcommittee said conflicting interests have appeared in hearings on the measure.

The Naval Reserve Officers Association and the Regular Navy are in disagreement on the administration of the act. The association wants a separate bureau within the Navy while the latter wants direct control.

Newspapers Banned.

How many other such detachments are in the former demilitarized zone is unknown.

Sale of all of yesterday's editions of French newspapers was forbidden. The circulation of foreign papers had been boosted enormously as the border people, who are more concerned than other parts of Germany about foreign reaction to Adolf Hitler's step, rushed to the news stands.

Foreign residents here said tanks and armored cars have been brought into the zone secretly at night.

German corps commanders began their first inspections of the troops and the public was allowed to witness the reviews.

English Air Raid Alarm Experiment 'Fizzles Out'

Hendon, England, March 10 (AP). Expert noisemakers, armed with 36 types of air-raid alarm devices, including a 100-year-old wooden rattle, tried in vain today to "alarm" the populace of Hendon.

The experiment, under the government air-raid precautions department, fizzled completely as the signals were drowned out by the roar of traffic.

Women went on with their shopping without turning their heads and residents who had been informed of the demonstration in advance cocked their ears to hear the hullaballoo, then called up the police station to learn if the program had been canceled.

Reich Pledged Against Overt Acts on Rhine

No Time, Territorial Limit on Proposals, Hitler Tells Interviewer.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 10.—Germany will commit no overt act in the Rhineland, Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler told Ward Price, correspondent of the London Daily Mail, in a special interview at Munich today.

"The German government will do nothing more on its side," he said, "to alter the existing situation. We have re-established sovereignty in the Reich and brought back one of the oldest parts of Germany under the protection of the entire nation.

"We therefore have no reason to fix any time limit to the proposals that have been made."

The Reichsfuehrer answered six questions, the first of which was: "Does your offer of a pact of non-aggression to all the states along Germany's eastern frontier include Austria and Czechoslovakia?"

"Meant As Universal."

Hitler replied:

"My proposal for the conclusion of nonaggression pacts east and west of Germany was meant as a universal one. There is certainly no exception intended. It applies equally to Czechoslovakia and Austria."

Hitler reaffirmed Germany's readiness to return to the League of Nations immediately with the "expectation that within a reasonable period the questions of equal treatment in the matter of colonies and the separation of the Covenant of the League from so-called peace treaties will be settled."

Army at Peace Strength.

The Reichsfuehrer emphasized that the size of the Rhineland forces would be maintained on a peace-time basis, as throughout the rest of Germany, and that no concentration of troops for offensive purposes is contemplated.

Asked why he carried out the Rhineland occupation as it was done, Hitler replied: "If a British or French statesman had ever or should ever be so unfortunate as to find his country in so tragic a condition as I found mine, I am certain he would have acted, or will act, precisely in the same way under similar circumstances."

Concluding, the Nazi leader declared: "I believe that if the German government's proposals are accepted it will consequently be realized they have rendered a great service to Europe and to the cause of peace."

Germans Open Election Drive On Rhine Move

Campaign for National Support Launched by Goebbel's Speech.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Berlin, March 10.—A madly rejoicing Germany tonight opened a campaign for the election ordered to give national approval to Chancellor Adolf Hitler's denunciation of the Locarno treaty.

While German troops "dug in" along the Rhine, Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels inaugurated the campaign with the declaration:

"Germany now is proud and free, in contrast to the Germany of three years ago, when our country was the playground for cultural Bolshevism."

"Our great nation cannot tolerate lasting discrimination," he said, referring to military reoccupation of the Rhineland.

"Der Fuehrer only obeyed the laws of inner dynamics of our State.

"France's Premier Albert Sarraut says Metz shall not be within the range of German guns.

"Should we desire Cologne to be within the range of French guns?

"We thought the demilitarized zone and open frontiers on the west were enough to protect France. Yet France concluded an alliance with a Bolshevist State. If, as Der Fuehrer said, France wants to become Bolshevist, we should be surrounded by Bolshevists. Therefore we occupied the Rhineland.

"Every sensible person understands we did not want to threaten and humiliate France. On the contrary, we wanted to build a bridge of friendship to France. Our full sovereignty has prepared the ground for a long-term treaty."

He spoke at huge Deutschland Hall.

There were 200 other meetings, packed with jubilant Nazi enthusiasts, but at Deutschland Hall the keynote was sounded.

Goebbels stressed the openness of the party's aims, saying:

"Those who are astonished now did not seem to listen when we promised to destroy Marxism and Parliamentarism, break the power of the Jews, restore honesty to the theater, the press and art, solve the problem of unemployment, and break the chains other nations laid around us.

"Now, who dares to say that we have not attained our aims?"

Goebbels admitted that projects to defeat unemployment had proved costly.

"But no expense is too high when the bread of the people is at stake," he cried, amidst tumultous cheering.

Throughout Berlin the statement, "the troops are there; what can anybody do about it?" was the reply to all questions as to whether Hitler would withdraw his Rhineland army.

The country outwardly was calm, but inwardly there was tense anticipation, as he powers began a week of meetings at Paris and London, to decide what may possibly be the Reich's economic fate. Nobody believes there will be any military action.

In the present stage of the eternal European see-saw, Germans believe military sanctions would be out of the question.

Concerts And The Community.

Almost every symphony orchestra association must each year face the problem of raising through public subscriptions the funds required for its next season. No orchestra can pay its musicians adequate salaries, and meet other heavy expenses, with the revenue derived from the sale of tickets at prices within reach of the average music lover. And when concerts are for the benefit of all, it becomes a privilege for every citizen to contribute to the support of his orchestra. Moreover, the measure of individual responses will reveal the interest of the community in access to the treasure house of music.

Music is an integral part of our general culture. The National Capital should have an orchestra which will give it the same standing in this realm that its libraries and galleries have already established in other fields of art. Generous support for its symphony orchestra, which has in a few seasons attained high standing among the orchestras of the United States, will go a long way toward this end. To fail in this obligation would be admission of lack of civic pride.

Under the leadership of Dr. Hans Kindler, the local organization has made notable progress, rising from its obscurity to a place of national prominence. In the quality of its programs, and in its technical proficiency, it already compares favorably with those orchestras which have been firmly established for many years. In its recent tour of New England and Canada it received merited acclaim and greatly enhanced the prestige of Washington as a musical center.

The work which the National Symphony is doing in the musical education of young people is of particular value. Attendance at the students' concerts has steadily increased since they were instituted. This growing interest indicates that locally the rising generation is becoming more appreciative of music and is learning of its value as a spiritual stimulus. It is not merely for the current enjoyment of adults, but perhaps even more as a vital part of the curriculum of progressive youth, that the orchestra association is now asking well-merited support.

The Camel's Nose.

By adopting the Borah resolution the Senate has manifested its determination to sift out the facts relating to the Black Lobby Committee's wholesale investigation of telegrams. The resolution itself is not denunciatory. Yet it suggests that the Senate has a keen interest in preserving the constitutional safeguards against unreasonable search and seizure. Appropriate action will doubtless be taken when the full record has been brought to light.

Senator Black emphatically contends that his committee is interested only in exposing the activities of lobbyists trying to influence legislation for their own benefit. In his rhetorical defense of this objective he imputes to his critics a desire to shield "those who sit in high places and pour out their wealth in order to corrupt the pure streams of public thought." That, of course, is the bunk. A public outcry over the Lobby Committee's probing arose only because of abundant proof that, in its zeal to expose lobbyists, it was encroaching upon the privacy of telegrams, which in these days is equivalent to censoring the mails.

It may be true, as Senator Black contends, that the committee has no interest in private telegrams. But this disclaimer sounds pretty thin in face of the evidence of snooping. Legitimate Senate investigations can be conducted without creating the impression that the private affairs of individuals are being probed under the guise of a lobby probe.

Like the Black committee, the Communications Commission had good reason to examine certain telegraph records. The telegraph companies are required by law to keep a file of messages transmitted over their wires. Evidence brought out by the Black committee indicates that some telegram files had been burned. It was entirely legitimate for the FCC to make a check with the purpose of determining whether other irregularities had taken place. If, however, the telegrams so examined were turned over to the Black committee for an entirely different purpose, the FCC has clearly laid itself open to censure.

It is well that the Senate is determined to obtain all the facts. For even if the encroachment upon private records should prove to be trivial, stern corrective measures will be in order. In cases of this kind, the only safe policy is to prevent the camel of censorship from getting its nose into the tent.

A Citizens' Committee.

In the fight to obtain more adequate public health service, residents of the District have become keenly aware of the fundamental defects in the local governmental system. Equally important, there are increasing indications that Congress is also beginning to appreciate the unnecessary handicaps under which the District is forced to function. The time is ripe for a united community effort to overhaul machinery which is operating so ineffectively.

Chairman Norton of the House District Committee touched upon one of the most serious aspects of the problem in discussing the Ellenbogen rent-control bill. She told the House that "it is rather remarkable" when District bills are considered "fairly and on their merits" by that body. Washingtonians are taxed, but they have no right to vote. In the accurate words of Mrs. Norton, "they have to take what they can get." That arrangement, of course, becomes intolerable if one of the nonrepresentative bodies governing the District permits itself to be swayed by misrepresentation, prejudice, ignorance and filibusters conducted by members having personal interests in the issue under discussion.

In matters pertaining to the District the House seldom legislates. It indolently permits a recalcitrant clique to ride roughshod over vital community interests. The objections which may properly be raised against the rent-control bill, for example, do not in any respect justify the Blanton filibuster which prevented any consideration of that measure on its merits. It is just such arbitrary conduct on the part of a few Congressmen that prevents intelligent treatment of our most serious municipal problems.

Fortunately, the public-spirited citizens who are leading the campaign for adequate public health funds recognize their cause as part of a much larger problem. As pointed out by Dr. Prentiss Willson elsewhere on this page today, the same influences that have denied Washington adequate protection against disease have caused neglect of the schools, the Police Department and, indeed, of nearly all important municipal agencies. In short, the basic problem is one whether Washington shall possess a measure of that responsible government which should be the birthright of all American citizens.

Dr. Willson very appropriately suggests that the committee organized at the recent mass meeting on public health should expand its activities to cover the fundamental objective. This group, he says, might well become "the nucleus of a citizens' committee" entrusted "to provide the leadership and guidance so sorely needed in the present situation." Already the committee represents most of the civic, professional and business organizations in the city. With some additions to its membership it would become a truly representative agent of this disfranchised city.

The importance of civic organization of this sort can scarcely be overemphasized. The appointed heads of the District government are not in a position to make a determined fight for municipal reforms. They cannot even determine with any degree of accuracy what the people want. That handicap need not apply to a group representing virtually all the organized civic, professional and commercial interests of Washington. The proposed Committee of Fifty would be able to speak with the voice of the community and Congress could not fail to give heed.

By all means let the committee on public health broaden its plan of campaign. In so doing it will undoubtedly have the support of the people, the churches, the clubs and the press, as well as the hearty co-operation of the District government. Only with such united action can the cause of more intelligent and efficient government in the District move forward.

Government Leave.

Not only will the passage of the two Government leave bills be welcomed by their beneficiaries, but their general approval in the House suggests that they are a significant improvement in the Federal personnel policy. As the bills go to the White House, they allow Government employes 26 days of annual leave and 15 in case of sickness.

It is true that few private concerns give their employes as much as 26 days of vacation annually. But many Government workers are compelled to deduct every minute's time spent out of the office from their annual leave. This holds whether the absence is caused by personal business transactions, visits to the dentist, or any emergency. There is further inequity in this ruling because some departments allow only half an hour for lunch while others give twice that amount. Such discrimination means that those in the former class must charge every extra five minutes spent at lunch time against their vacation period.

President Roosevelt's signature to these measures, which is confidently expected within the next few days, will eliminate the last bit of restrictive legislation pertaining to Federal workers under the economy act. There is grave doubt that this measure ever really carried out the intent for which it was framed, since the saving obtained therefrom was relatively trivial compared with Government expenditures in other directions. Final inauguration of the more liberal leave provisions, therefore, will bring satisfaction far beyond the ranks of Government employes.

Federal workers have steadily maintained that the so-called economy act, as applied to them, did not accomplish its purpose. Now they have an opportunity to prove that longer vacations really promote efficiency. With more time for rest, recreation and "trips home," they will be expected to reciprocate by striving for more creditable efficiency ratings and less abuse of sick leave.

The Courage Of Despair.

The measured tread of German regiments entering the Rhineland, and the calculated defiance of world opinion involved in that illegal action, have strongly emphasized the seeming outward strength of the Third Reich. This impression of disciplined military power is intensified by the obvious reluctance of the other signatories of Locarno to reply in kind.

Actually, the dramatic step which Germany has taken is as much a sign of weakness as of strength. Unquestionably domestic suffering was one factor which induced Hitler to issue his historic order. For a time fluttering flags, blaring bands and marching men will assist the German people to forget the progressive decay of their national economy—but only for a time.

Everyone appreciates the heroic struggle made by Germany against a world of enemies from 1914 to 1919. Everyone pays tribute to the strength, the endurance, and the courage of the German people. But relatively few, outside of Germany, realize that the Reich today is only a shell of its former greatness; that it leans the more toward histrionic traditions and empty forms of power largely because under the Nazis the sources of national strength have been gutted, and the future rendered empty of any real promise of recovery.

For this reason, entirely aside from the essential dynamite in the situation, the British are well advised to temporize, and the nations more immediately affected must not let any crise de nerfs impel them toward hasty reprisals. When Hitler orders a military registration of all German citizens in this country, for instance, not self-confidence but palpable fear explains the foolish action. Those who have reason to love and respect their Fatherland, wherever they may live, do not need to be dragooned into its service.

Germany today is in a dangerously neurotic condition. Preparation against an outburst which may be prompted by that temper is obviously incumbent upon all her neighbors. But repression alone would be a very dubious solution of the tangled problem which will come before the Council of the League of Nations this week.

So far as this vanquished and tortured nation has a case, it should be heard with patience, toleration and good will. For behind the well-fed troops on the Rhine the haggard specter of social, economic and financial degeneracy is ever more clearly visible. Destructive pressures within the Reich, suppressed only by a ruthless dictatorship, must be remembered in any consideration of the desirability of punitive action from without.

Bountiful Breakdown.

Willard Huntington Wright has written nine books. S. S. Van Dine has written nine books. And between these two productive periods of Mr. Wright and his famous nom de plume there occurred a nervous breakdown which was perhaps the most fruitful on record.

It struck him down in the spring of 1923, cutting off short his 14-hour-a-day labors on books which ranged from studies of modern painting and French literature to surveys of Nietzsche and the shortcomings of a great encyclopedia. For two years, flat on his back, Mr. Wright could engage in nothing more arduous than the perusal of detective novels. But the imp of seriousness was in him. He read 2,000 such tales; he pondered their form and their rules, and when he got out of bed in the summer of 1925 he thought he could write a pretty good detective story himself. Several hundred thousand readers of the Philo Vance mysteries were soon of the same mind.

If we could all have nervous breakdowns like that, there would be a queue waiting outside every sanatorium. For the monetary reward of this metamorphosis was astonishing. The first Philo Vance case, the "Benson," outsold all other current detective stories in the first six months. The "Canary" case reached the national best-seller lists, a rare jump, indeed, for mystery tales. And the next case, the "Greene," went even higher, becoming in its first month the best-selling book in the country.

Every one of his nine murder mysteries, topsy-turvical as it may seem, brought Mr. Wright more money than all his 15 years of work on nine cultural books. He has repeatedly made the remark that some day he is going to forget clews, homicides, even the Regie cigarettes of Philo Vance, and go back to these cherished studies. But it does not seem likely that there will be a mutiny to this bounty.

In a theatrical magazine a crooner advertises that he is at liberty. This just goes to show what a tolerant people we are.

A Bid for Community Leadership

In the interest of promoting a real community enterprise the District Medical Society has granted The Post permission to publish the following editorial, which will appear in the next issue of the society's organ, the Medical Annals of the District of Columbia:

Recent activities of the Medical Society have been most successful in focusing the attention of the citizens of Washington upon the deplorable situation arising from inadequate financial support of the public health program of the Health Officer and Board of Public Welfare. This achievement is a most meritorious and commendable public service, and one that has received signal recognition from the public and press.

Since the lay friends of the Medical Society have thus so thankfully accepted its guidance, and so whole-heartedly acclaimed and co-operated with it in its efforts, it would certainly be deplorable if it should now slacken in its endeavor, or fail to take advantage of the position of leadership that the exigencies of the situation have thrust upon it. If we be agreed, then, that this is unthinkable, and that we must continue the leadership so promisingly initiated, it would seem well to take stock of the present situation in all its ramifications.

* * * *

The Medical Society is in the position of a specialist who has been asked to see an ill patient, complaining, mainly, of one very troublesome symptoms; it behooves it, therefore, not to make the mistake, all too frequent in special practice, of overlooking the whole picture of the disease in a too meticulous scrutiny of the symptom falling within its own sphere of practice. To do this means failing to attach due significance and weight to the whole clinical picture and to the psychological problems involved. As physicians we should realize that specific therapy can only be successfully directed toward fundamental conditions.

The present disgraceful inadequacy of the public health budget for the District is not the only symptom of the disease now threatening our corporate, municipal life. Some other symptoms, of almost equal importance in establishing the diagnosis, even if less distressing and obvious, are inadequate police and fire protection, inadequate facilities for public education, the overcrowded and congested condition of our police courts, the lact of adequate terminal facilities for air transportation, etc. Thus assembled, these clinical symptoms point very clearly to an underlying condition equally responsible for all of them, the diagnosis of which can now be made. The disease is at once seen to be properly classed among the malnutritions, and its basic etiological factor is readily discernible in the anomalous nature of the fiscal relationship between the Federal Government and the District.

Having thus visualized the clinical picture as a whole, the consideration of its treatment can be intelligently undertaken. If this is to effect a permanent cure, and not result in merely temporary alleviation of the more distressing symptoms, it must be directed toward the removal of the underlying cause; this is a fundamental principle of sound therapy. Furthermore, there is abundant evidence to support the contention that the municipality, like the individual, is mentally handicapped by financial considerations; it naturally wishes to be cured as cheaply as possible.

However, once the serious and critical nature of the disease is thoroughly realized, the usual trite demand of—"Doctor, please spare no expense"—will not only be heard, but will be meant. To overlook this fact is to underestimate the importance of the patient's psychology. As a community is it not possible that our attention has been too narrowly directed toward a few entirely negligible politicians in Congress, bent on making political capital at home by berating District citizens, and not enough toward the fact that Congress, as a whole, must be well disposed toward the city in which its members live a large part of each year?

Do we not tend to demand increased appropriations to support necessary and vital municipal activities with the same breath in which we demand no increase in local taxation? Would not the former demand come with better grace, and be more likely to be met with sympathetic consideration, were it coupled with an expression of willingness to pay our just share of the cost when, equitably determined? So far the Medical Society is the only civic group that, by formal resolution, has expressed the willingness of its members to meet increased taxation, should it be necessary to underwrite an adequate health budget. These questions are fundamental in the whole distressing situation.

Difficult as the details of an equitable fiscal accord between the Federal and District Governments seem to be, in the light of the history of the operation of the organic act, the general principles which should govern, in the circumstances, would seem to be of the utmost simplicity and so obvious as to merit immediate and well nigh universal acceptance. There would seem to be every consideration of sound political expediency to justify the provision of the Constitution that the Congress should have exclusive jurisdiction and control over the seat of the Federal Government. Acceptance of this autocratic authority, however, places a heavy moral obligation on the Federal Government, not only to the disfranchised citizens of Washington, but to the citizens of the whole Nation.

To the former the obligation is a matter of right and equity, an application of the golden rule; to the latter it is so to use its authority as to make the Capital of the Nation an illustrious example of what the fullest and best municipal life should be. Why should there be acrimonious discussion as to the equitable proportionate share of the cost of such an achievement to be borne by the local taxpayers and the Federal Government? The former are surely obligated to be cheerful when taxed as are the citizens of comparable urban communities. Is this figure one impossible of determination, with all the statistical data available to governmental agencies in the District of Columbia?

The latter is most certainly morally obligated to underwrite, not alone the additional expense of making Washington, in a physical sense, the greatest capital in the world, but the still further expense of making it a shining example of the potentialities of corporate, municipal life. And if there be those, within or without Congress, who wish, for personal reasons, to point out that in this latter respect the local citizen would be getting something for nothing, their blatancy is easily deflated. The citizen of Washington has paid the price; he has given up the most priceless boon of the free man—liberty—surely there should be some adequate recompense.

We hold these facts to be self-evident: What is bitterly needed now, and has been lacking far too long, is a fearless and aggressive civic leadership in their presentation not only to the Congress, but to any Governmental agencies concerned and even to the President. If it be true, as recently pointed out in the press, that District officials are kept impotent in this respect, by Governmental regulation, the remedy is obvious; the citizens should provide their own leadership.

For this purpose the committee elected at the recent mass meeting, and now organized and functioning, is an excellent start. But while its membership represents a variety of interests, it is concerning itself with one phase of a many-sided problem; persons having special knowledge of educational, fiscal, legal and other phases should be added to its roster. It might well be the nucleus of a citizens' committe of 50—or even 100—to provide the leadership and guidance so sorely needed in the present situation.

* * * *

To revert to our medical allegory—Washington is ill. The disease from which it is suffering is a chronic one, and most complicated and puzzling in many of its manifestations. Fortunately it is curable. To this end advice and treatment must be contributed by specialists in many branches. These must work in co-operation and accord if health is to be restored, but they must also avoid a merely symptomatic treatment and aim at eliminating the basic pathology; they must treat the patient as a whole, and not disease symptoms.

Agricultural Experiments.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In seeking a solution of the farm problem, we should review the underlying reasons for the several periods of booms in our industries. We will find that these have coincided either with discoveries of new natural resources such as natural gas and petroleum or new inventions that developed new industries such as electricity, radio, automobile, etc.

The Federal Government and most of the State governments have their agricultural experiment stations and have done good work. But this work suffers from lack of adequate appropriations. It is not spectacular largely because of the time consumed for its experiments. Science seeks to improve species by selection and hybridation and by shortening the time nature uses in evolution. Many agricultural products such as rubber, hemp, coffee, wood pulp and silk are imported. It is possible to develop hybrids of these imported products that will grow economically in this country. But the slowness of these experiments prevents enthusiasm of the masses, and makes unpopular their support by Federal appropriations.

It is possible to improve fast-growing species of trees to make wood pulp, or for lumber that would pay several times the cost of our local arboretum. The success of intensified research efforts is illustrated by the success attending such efforts during the late war.

If much of our imports were grown on our own farm lands in the South and West, the prosperity thus created would more than consume the surplus from our industries seeking sales abroad. Let us increase the appropriations for Federal agricultural experimental stations. HOWARD D. WOODSON.

The Lack Of Armories.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is noted that the District is getting a fine trimming in the matter of slashed appropriations.

Is it not about time, with buildings going up right and left, to do something for the National Guard, Naval Reserves and Marine Corps Reserve in the way of an armory? Armories dot the Nation from Puget Sound to Tampa and from San Diego to Kittery. They stop, respectively, at Alexandria, Hyattsville and Rockville.

The National Capital should be setting the example for preparedness and Americanism. The men are willing and ready. They drill in the streets in zero weather, slush and snow and stow their equipment in make shift buildings condemned to be razed.

Some day they'll march away to a lot of high class cheering and some of them will not come back. What they will have learned in the way of preparing themselves will have been gained in spite of a lackadaisical interest in armories of our civilian troops.

Actor's Heart vs. Actor's Mind.

Post Office, Wednesday.

THE other day we lightly wondered whether an actor ought to believe that he is the character he pretends to be, or whether he ought coolly to calculate what such a character would do. We suggested assent to each alternative—and expected trouble. Yet today we receive indorsements from two experts.

* * *

Mr. H. B. Hastings quotes a pair of personages of whom, although both were foreign-born, one lived and was loved in America for a lifetime, whereas the other, twice visiting the United States, conquered, not alone the hearts of American theatergoers, but their minds as well. These authorities are—or, alas, were—Sumichrast and Coquelin.

* * *

Frederick Caesar de Sumichrast was a professor of French who didn't consider that adjective as limiting, and limited by, the language. To him, a man of limitless culture, the word "French" embraced everything Gallic, including the French theater. He knew it as a student of its literature and as a critic of the histrionic art.

Well, he—so Mr. Hastings recalls—once formulated thus his idea concerning the question of how far the actor should "believe the role:"

"If an actor 'boo-hoos' in a pathetic role, no matter how pathetic the role is per se, his audience will laugh at him. But if he can keep the tears out of his eyes and put them in his voice, so that his listeners think the salty drops are just ready to fall, then his audience sympathizes with him—and the tears come into their eyes."

* * *

As for Coquelin—

* * *

But—doubt the question as may you readers who were 5 years old or over at the turn of the century—the Young Lady at the Next Desk asks us:

"Who was Coquelin?"

* * *

Dear child, Coquelin, called "The Elder"—to distinguish him from his clever, though not so eminent, brother—died in 1909, yet will live forever in the history of the world's stage. Your mother saw him here in Washington, with Bernhardt: Sarah Bernhardt, of whom you may have heard a rumor. During 22 years, he created 44 famous leading roles in as many plays at the Comedie Francaise, which is in Paris—from de Banville's "Gringoire" to Erckmann-Chatrian's "Rantzau." Wasn't he the first "Cyrano?"

* * *

Mr. Hastings fittingly recalls that Coquelin believed that "the actor should always keep himself in hand." He illustrated his contention from his own experience:

He said that, in a certain play, he was supposed to fall asleep on a sofa for five minutes, and, during its first production, the critics loudly commended his "sleep" as highly "natural"—notwithstanding that it was entirely simulated. On the first night of a revival of the piece, however, the star was worn out by long rehearsals and fell into a genuine slumber. He snored! The critics immediately denounced him for "over-acting."

* * *

Claus Bogel, whom we always admired as an actor, has long been this Column's First Consultant on these topics. He says: "An actor without imagination would be a very 'hack'; lacking imagination, good acting is impossible. Nevertheless, imagination alone cannot make an artist. We have all seen, too often, so-called actors giving free rein to their imagination, strutting, bellowing, full of fire—the 'ginger' of the stage manager; they believe they are something, but the results are simply offensive.

"There must be, in the actor, a master-mind which stands above the imagination and controls it without lessening it. The subjection of the imagination to the intelligent judgment: that is what makes the artist.

* * *

"The great actor's imagination may be so strong as to enable him to delude, not only his audience, but himself into the belief that he is in any mood. But he does not really feel. He merely thinks he feels—for the time being. When he leaves the stage, the cloak he has been wearing drops away. He is acting—and acting only.

We have still to receive Nelson Bell's considered opinion on this subject. Meanwhile, however, we pose a theater-question to theatergoers:

"Never mind whether the actor feels his role. Can you watch him and listen to him and the play in two ways at once? Can one half of your brain accept as reality all that is going on upon the stage, while the other half condemns the performance, or praises it, for its failure or success, as a work of art?"

Because that is the sole way, we think, of getting from the theater all there is in it.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Just In Case.

Vienna, March 10.

MOST Europeans have given some thought to the possibility of air raids involving the use of poison waves and high explosives. Gas masks, therefore, are recommended as standard household equipment within bombing range of theoretical enemies, and families' attempts to draw up little war plans of their own, deciding in advance which cellar they will try to reach when attack comes and how they will conduct themselves under various circumstances are to be commended.

In Vienna, however, they are much more explicit, for the possibility that the new Nazi civilization will sweep down from Germany without warning, according to Gen. Ludendorff's plan, is accepted as an imminent risk to the civilian population. For this reason the government has issued instructions governing individual conduct in many phases of such an emergency, and these documents form a charming little chapter in the story of daily life in one of the most charming cities in the world.

One of the posters which Viennese are invited to study in shop windows is faintly reminiscent of certain illustrated placards which are seen in some American cities warning pedestrians against the perils of automobile traffic. This chart contains 32 pictures, frankly acknowledging the danger of gas and high explosives from the air and illustrating the wrong and right things to do in 16 theoretical situations. First there is a picture of a bomb exploding on the sidewalk in front of an apartment house. A man is being blown to tatters because he didn't heed the warning to take cover, and a mother and child standing at a window on the second floor are being slashed by shattered glass and fragments of metal because they, too, violated the rule of conduct which is illustrated in an adjoining panel.

THIS one again shows a bomb exploding outside the apartment, but the man has taken refuge in the hall and mother and child upstairs have withdrawn from the windows and are hidden behind an angle of the wall. Therefore flying glass and iron chunks spend themselves harmlessly and all concerned are safe, beyond possible shock to their nerves.

What should people do who find themselves in a crowded department store having no gas-proof cellar? The natural impulse is to make for the basement, but instructions point out that gas seeks a lower level. Therefore a cellar which has not been especially equipped as a refuge from gas may become a man-trap, and the thing to do is to race to the top floor. There the air is likely to be pure and people will be safe from high explosives—unless, of course, the high explosive happens to come right through the roof.

THAT is an unhappy possibility which cannot be offset by precautions, and there's no need to dwell upon it. Women shopping in markets should quietly dive into the nearest hallway. People in movies should merely sit tight and ignore the harbingers of culture, and people riding trains are advised not to jump off or gaze out of windows but to flop to the floor and if possible hide under the seats.

A pedestrian caught in the open should remember to walk against the wind, not with it, because gas goes downward and he will be out of it sooner that way. The best stimulants for people who have been knocked out by gas are brandy and coffee, but artificial respiration is harmful and extremely dangerous.

Citizens are advised not to touch their eyes after handling objects which may have been exposed to gas. Tiny drops of poison deposited after the main clouds have passed may destroy the sight. It is particularly important to watch small children too young to remember their instructions, because they might pick up fragments of gas shell and put their eyes out in unguarded moments.

* * * *

OF course, there are other nations with which Austria might conceivably have a row, but the Nazis are the principal threat, for Hitler says that any land where German people live is German territory and must be reclaimed. And Ludendorff says war is conflict between the races, including women, children, invalids and the aged, rather than a restricted scrap between the armies. I should have mentioned that the Viennese must rely largely on their wits and improvised gas masks, because most of them are too poor to buy the manufactured kind. Perhaps next Christmas the children of the United States can be induced to buy gas masks for the children of Austria against the coming of civilization.

WPA Player Unit To Entertain Here

The local vaudeville unit of the WPA Federal Theater project, which has been touring CCC camps and other institutions in this area, will give its first performance before a Washington audience at the Y. W. C. A., 614 E street northwest, this afternoon at 5:15.

Robert Fechner, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, and local WPA officials will attend.

Nearly all members of the vaudeville unit were taken from District relief rolls. According to an estimate by Anthony F. Merrill, business manager, the unit has taken over practically every player or musician on District relief.

Yugoslavia Votes Army Budget of $46,000,000

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, March 10 (AP).—Parliament approved by acclamation today a budget of $46,000,000 for military expenses, an increase of $1,000,000 over last year.

War Minister Gen. Lyubomir Maritch said the international situation necessitated the increase.

Three Alternatives For Europe

War Over Rhineland Or German Boycott, Two Choices.

By Livingston Hartley.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE entrance of goose-stepping, gray-clad regiments into the Rhineland has created the most dangerous European crisis since the Armistice. Suddenly and without warning, Hitler has denounced the Locarno guarantee of peace in Western Europe and has ordered his troops into the demilitarized zone which formerly separated the French and German armies. Amid the resulting diplomatic earthquake now rocking the larger European capitals one fact stands out:—anything might happen in the next month.

This action of the German government is undeniably illegal and subject to severe penalties. The Versailles Treaty expressly stipulates that such action shall be considered as "a hostile act." The Locarno Treaty provides that the other signatories may regard this situation as "an unprovoked act of aggression." Consequently, Hitler's coup provides legal justification for a defensive war against Germany.

The German leader cites the Franco-Russian Pact as an excuse for his unilateral violation of treaties. This excuse is legally unsound for three reasons: first, the Franco-Russian Pact is not yet in force; second, it is open to German accession at any time; third, France has already offered to submit her right as a Locarno signatory to conclude this pact to the World Court, in accordance with the Locarno provision for the amicable settlement of legal differences.

Viewed from the standpoint of "power politics," Hitler's action has another aspect. The demilitarized zone obviously could not last forever, particularly since the first objective of Nazi foreign policy is restoration of unrestricted national sovereignty. Now that this last restriction of the Varsailles Treaty has been destroyed, Germany has secured de facto equality of status. She offers now, as the price she will pay for this new status, peace guarantees of tremendous scope.

* * * *

THE Third Reich has shown repeatedly that it has no regard for obligations assumed by Germany under duress. There is, however, a possibility that new peace guarantees accepted voluntarily by the Nazis themselves would prove more valuable than similar guarantees inherited from the past. Germany has now gained equality of status. Her new position in the Rhineland vastly improves her strategic position with regard to France. But it also creates a similar improvement in her diplomatic situation in Europe since it establishes a secure power foundation for German foreign policy. Whether the objective of Hitler's coup is a stable peace, as he himself claims, or the first step toward an offensive war, can only be determined by coming events.

Even if it were certain that Hitler's aim is peaceful, his action in the Rhineland would not be acceptable to the French Government, French foreign policy has utilized the Versailles system to seek two aims in postwar Europe—Security and diplomatic predominance on the Continent. German occupation of the Rhineland will prejudice both these aims, creating a new menace to French security and increasing the diplomatic power of the Reich in Europe relative to that of France.

The Quai d'Orsay, however, now finds itself in a difficult position, since its policy of refusing all compromise with Germany and clinging tenaciously to every juridical advantage is largely responsible for the present situation. Many observers trace the advent of Hitler to the French refusal to reach a constructive settlement with the liberal German Republic. Certainly the armament policy of France has brought the most unfortunate results. After holding up all progress toward disarmament at Geneva for eight long years, France refused to agree to a German army of 300,000 men in 1933. Thereupon Germany withdrew from the League, began to re-arm openly in 1935, and now maintains a mighty air force and an army of 600,000 men, some of whom are now on the Rhine.

France has further weakened her position toward Germany by Laval's uncertain attitude toward the war in Ethiopia. After upholding theoretical collective security at Geneva for years, the French government opposed systematically effective League action against Italy. This policy prevented a quick triumph of the League over Mussolini, which might well have influenced Hitler decisively against action in the Rhineland. As matters stand, Paris has furnished the British with an excellent case for obtaining from forceful action against Germany now.

* * * *

THE strategic role in the present crisis lies with Great Britain, not only because she is the principal guarantor of the Locarno Treaty, but also because Germany has clearly recognized her decisive position.

Hitler seems to have studiously avoided any attempt at a rapprochement with Italy, in spite of the moves Mussolini has made in that direction. Since such a rapprochement would have served to draw Great Britain more closely to France, Hitler preferred to placate Great Britain rather than to seek the questionable asset of Italian friendship. This motive may be seen in the readiness of Germany to accept the naval arrangements drawn up in London.

The official attitude of Great Britain toward the latest illegal act of Hitler, of course, has to be unfavorable and outspoken. The British foreign office has made the Locarno treaty a central point in its European policy, and will not see it torn up without vigorous protest. On the other hand, it is doubtful if the British public will react as strongly against Germany's occupation of her own territory as it did against Italy's invasion of the territory of another member of the League. It should be noted that the British government last September pointed out to France a clear distinction between "a positive act of unprovoked aggression" and "a negative act of failure to fulfill terms of a treaty."

Furthermore, British policy is essentially realistic, and realism must accept the fact that the demilitarized zone had some day to be replaced by some new form of German peace guarantee. Hitler has now offered far-reaching peace guarantees of particular interest to Great Britain. These include the western air pact, designed to prevent sudden aerial attack, which Great Britain and France sought last year; the return of Germany to the League of Nations, and a 25-year guarantee of French, Belgian and perhaps Dutch frontiers, backed by Great Britain and Italy, as was the Locarno Treaty. The British Foreign Minister has already indicated his desire to explore these proposed guarantees.

* * * *

THE French and Belgian governments have promptly referred Hitler's violation of the Versailles and Locarno Treaties to the League of Nations Council, as the second of these treaties provides, a move which affords the greatest opportunity for a peaceful outcome. At Geneva three broad lines of decision seem possible: military intervention in the Rhineland, which would mean war; economic and financial pressure against Germany, or negotiations for a general settlement of the Franco-German question.

Military intervention could be justified legally, but does not seem probable in practice. France was unwilling to use military force when Germany denounced the armament provisions of the Versailles Treaty just a year ago, when the German army and air force were far weaker than now, and when France, Italy and Great Britain formed a solid front.

France today, in the throes of a political and economic crisis, is in no condition to face a war with Germany. Great Britain would hardly be willing to participate in military measures with most of her fleet and part of her air force tied up in the Mediterranean, even if the British public were prepared to engage in war. Italy, weakened by the African war and sanctions, and with a substantial part of her army in Africa, is in no position to uphold the Locarno treaty by military force, even if Mussolini should be willing to fight for a treaty he has recently been threatening to denounce.

* * * *

UNDER the Locarno Treaty, its signatories, France, Belgium, Great Britain and Italy, are now obligated "to act in accordance with the recommendation of the Council" of the League. The Council might conceivably recommend economic and financial measures against Germany, for example, a boycott of German exports, similar to that in force against Italy, and joint financial pressure.

The action of the four Locarno signatories could be reinforced by the co-operation of Russia, the Little Entente and other European powers, either as a matter of individual policy or in accordance with a further recommendation of the Council under Article XI of the Covenant. Owing to the present shaky condition of German economy, such action might prove decisive enough to bring the German government to terms. The difficulties in the way of such economic action are two: the danger that Germany might respond with a military or aerial attack, and the difficulty of securing the unanimity of the Council necessary for such action.

The third possibility is a condemnation of Germany's action by the Council, followed by negotiations at Geneva and in European capitals for a permanent solution of the German question. In this case, Germany would "get away with it" once again, but would have to pay a price in security guarantees for her new status of equality.

The Once Over

Father and Son Talks.

"Popper, how much money has Washington got to raise by new taxes?"

"Between six and seven hundred million, my son."

"Is that a lot of money?"

"It used to be."

* * * *

"What's the Government got to have money for, popper?"

"I'm a little confused myself, son, but I think five hundred million dollars of it is for wrong guessing."

"Wrong guessing?"

"Yes. The Administration guessed that the AAA was legal."

* * * *

"How is the Government going to get all this money, popper? Isn't it a big problem?"

"Not any more."

"I thought the President said over the radio that there wouldn't be any more taxes."

"So did I. You'd better run out and play with the boy next door."

* * * *

"But, popper, what are the new taxes?"

"The main one is on corporation surpluses."

"What is a corporation surplus, popper?"

"But isn't it all right to save money for a rainy day, popper?"

"I dunno. I'm getting mixed up on things like that myself. Gwan outside and play, will ya?"

* * * *

"Teacher told us that everybody should be thrifty and put aside something for adversities."

"Your teacher must be old-fashioned."

"She said that lots of big corporations were able to pay dividends and keep running all through the depression because they had built up big surpluses, popper."

"Your teacher had better be careful."

"Why?"

"If it leaks out that she talks like that she will be recognized as a Republican or some other enemy of the Republic. Please go away. I hear the boy next door whistling for you."

* * * *

"Popper."

"What now?"

"If a corporation has to pay out a third of its surpluses in taxes, won't it gradually wipe out surpluses?"

"Uhuh."

"And when a corporation has no surplus what will it do when there comes a rainy day?"

"Aw, gwan out and play, please. Daddy's got a headache."

* * * *

"Popper, why is the Government so desperately in need of money?"

"Because it spent all its money."

"Including its surplus?"

"Oh, yes indeed."

"If it had a big surplus, it wouldn't be in trouble? Is that it?"

"Precisely, my lad."

"Then why does it want to discourage anybody keeping a big surplus, popper?"

Why Keep Them Alive?

PAUL de KRUIF is fighting mad. Here, for 25 years, he has been watching the miracle-makers of medical science at their work of conquering disease. In "Microbe Hunters" and "Men Against Death" he has told of the exhilarating combat, on one front or another, to make life safe for man on this planet. From the great Pasteur and Koch down, it was a tale of resounding victory over rabies, tuberculosis, diphtheria, syphilis, malaria, yellow fever and many another dread killer. Mr. de Kruif's stirring books were jubilant. Thousands of sufferers clutched at the hope that he held before them.

If you would save your child from the agonizing and literal heartbreak of rheumatic fevor, was one of his admonitions, take it to Florida or California. And he did not see the irony of advising this to a father supporting a family of five on $12 a week. Now, by the beard of the prophet, he does!

* * * *

IF you have an imaginative brain and a sympathetic heart, and wish at the same time to keep a comfortable mind in this world, you had better avoid, as you would the plague, Paul de Kruif's "Why Keep Them Alive?" (Harcourt, Brace, $3). But if you will be sufficiently honest to take your head out of the ostrich hole in the sand long enough to look at the picture he paints, you won't put it back.

It is a picture—how many times this has been dinned into our thick heads!—of our country, crammed with the greatest abundance on earth of the good things of life, and scarred with a welter of human misery such as a man can hardly look at. And Mr. de Kruif's picture is the more poignant and searing because he is concerned with the children, the red-nosed, morbidly pot-bellied, rickety children of the poor, with faces like little old men and eyes which are too stony calm and resigned for children to have. They live by a thread of vitality, three, four, five and six, crowded together, in close, dirty, smelly rooms not ten blocks from any single one of us.

* * * *

IN what he calls his "year of hell" the naivette slipped off Mr. de Kruif. Going into the charity hospitals, the slums, the dead mining towns, the waterless Northwest, and talking with doctors and social workers and investigators, he came to this fact (the one to which we are all so accustomed that we never think of it)—that the lives of children don't matter to us, but that dollars do.

All the noble advances of medical science, which were discovered by men who could not take them into the grave, who left them for the whole of humanity, are not for the poor fool with a family who is wicked enough to have no money. Let us, the world seems to say to the children, not be silly—if your father has $1,000 it will be fairly simple to cure you of rheumatic fever. But if he hasn't, says the world, ish-kibibble.

Then you die like 4-year-old Joan in this book, whose father had $1 to take her to a doctor (he advised plenty of milk and orange juice), and who, bleeding and in spasms of agony, had to be driven in her uncle's car 170 miles through a swirling snow storm to reach a charity blood transfusion. She smiled and seemed to enjoy the ride, between spasms. Rheumatic heartbreak children are notoriously cheerful. And then half-way through that snowy, bitter night her father had to take her out in the beam of the headlights to see why she was so still . . . Let the tender hearted avoid page 188.

BUT sob-stories are really so impolite, aren't they? Let us keep cool with finance. Detroit, Mr. de Kruif tells us, has all but conquered tuberculosis. What would it cost a year, he asks the doctors, to completely wipe it out in that city? They replied: "Two hundred thousand dollars a year, for not more than ten years—the total but one-seventeenth the price of a single death-dealing battleship—and they laughed at him for thinking it could be got. And we, with a kind of stunned amazement, must laugh that it can't. Because, you see, the fact is that the expenditure each year of but $200,000 would, within ten years, be saving the tax-payers of Detroit over $1,000,000 yearly in hospital support.

"But this," writes Mr. de Kruif, "is now what I saw, and understood clearly, that this decadent, alternately crashing and booming, but surely dying system that rules us, cannot even afford to be thrifty. I now saw the enemy . . . The plain people will ask: If, in war, there is always limitless credit to kill people, so that no war ever stops for lack of dollars, francs, marks, or pounds, why then isn't there limitless wherewithal to arm our science so that it will give life?"

It is not a question our generation seems able to answer. History, not concerned with our particular prides or pocketbooks, will assign us no enviable role. For even of our children we can only exclaim: "Why keep them alive?"

2 Children Heirs To Torre Estate

Andrew E. Torre and his sister, Beatrice D. Torre, surviving children of Mrs. Jennie E. Torre, who died March 1, were shown to be the only heirs of her $238,000 estate in the District Supreme Court yesterday when Attorney Godfrey L. Munter asked the court to appoint them as joint administrators.

Mrs. Torre left no will. She owned two apartment houses and 30 private homes, many of them in Georgetown. Included among the later is a house at 3134 Dumbarton avenue northwest and adjacent property.

Rodman, War Aid to Beatty, Praises Briton

'One of World's Greatest Naval Commanders,' Says U. S. Admiral.

By the Associated Press.

An American admiral who commanded a squadron of the allied fleet under Admiral Earl Beatty, who died last night, described the British officer as "one of the finest, most efficient and inspiring leaders I have ever known."

He was Admiral Hugh Rodman, U. S. N., retired, who during the World War commanded the Sixth Battle Squadron.

"He was a man of rare accomplishments, a natural-born, tried and trusted sailor, a gallant leader and one who would fight at the drop of a hat," said Rodman.

"He had won his spurs and been promoted to the grade of rear admiral while he still was in his thirties, and was given command of the Grand Fleet by reason of his tried and proven efficiency.

Honor and Pleasure.

"It was an honor and pleasure to serve under him in the Grand Fleet in command of our American Battleship Force and I shall always cherish the friendship and comradeship which was there engendered.

"Too much praise cannot be awarded to him. He was one of the world's greatest naval commanders and I wish to extend to the admiralty and the British nation my own sympathies and those of all the officers and men of the old Sixth Battle Squadron, composed of the American battleships which served under his command, at his irreparable loss."

Visited United States Twice.

New York, March 10 (AP).—Earl Beatty twice visited the United States, once in October, 1921, as adviser to the British delegation at the Washington Armament Conference, and again in October, 1932, in connection with the settlement of the estate of his deceased wife.

In 1921 he was formally welcomed in New York by the late Mayor John F. Hylan and representatives of the Governor, but immediately retreated from the spotlight and remained incognito, going about the city in civilian garb.

Earl Beatty was active at the Washington conference in bringing about reductions in the British fleet, but said on his later visit that the King's navy, although weakened, still remained supreme as a defense unit.

The one-time admiral of the fleet had small faith in the diplomats in Geneva to disarm the world, insisting "they can argue till the air is blue and never get anywhere."

"Even in peace-time maneuvers," he said, discussing the fleet, during his 1932 visit to New York, "we can bring down targets in a minute, and you must remember there is a vast difference between these and movements in war."

Ann Hewitt's Mother Suffers a Relapse

Jersey City, N. J., March 10 (AP).—Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt, charged with mayhem in California, today suffered a "bad spell" of such a nature that a hospital physician said "several others of a similar character would likely result fatally."

Dr. George O'Hanlon, director of the Medical Center, where she has been a patient since last February 21, said she had lapsed into a coma this morning, but rallied later in the day. Mrs. Hewitt was admitted to the hospital suffering from an overdose of sedative.

The mayhem charge was brought as a result of allegations of Mrs. Hewitt's daughter, Ann, that her mother had conspired with two physicians to have her sterilized.

2 Ships Collide in Fog In New York Harbor

New York, March 10 (AP).—Two inbound ships, the liner Pilsudski and the tank steamer Southern Sun, collided today in New York's fog-shrouded lower bay. Neither vessel was damaged.

Triplets, in Incubator A Month, Taken Home

The children, two girls and a boy, have been under expert care in a special "incubator" room at the hospital until they were taken home today. Their father, John Wyse Shelley, is a taxicab driver. They have two other sons, 4 and 2 years old.

Sound Housing Program Held Still Lacking

Roosevelt Says Experts Fail to Agree on Solution of Problem.

Repeated efforts to formulate a sound housing program to meet the Nation's extensive housing problem have failed thus far, it was indicated at President Roosevelt's press conference yesterday.

The President said that he had as yet been unable to find experts who agreed on any phase of the many-sided problem, and added that while the Administration is still trying to put together a housing program, it was doubtful if one could be formulated before he leaves for a Southern vacation, March 19.

He outlined again the two divisions of the problem, consisting of:

1. Low-cost homes for the Nation, on which the Government will not make any contribution.

2. Slum clearance, which cannot be carried out, according to Roosevelt, without Government financial aid.

In the latter phase, he said two problems dominated the thinking done thus far on the matter. First, how much Government financial aid would be necessary in slum clearance; second, what form such aid should take.

It was indicated that the answers to all the questions were as yet be fogged by conflicting opinions.

In discussing the matter of slum clearance, the President said that the chief problem presented was housing that section of the population in the very low income groups, around $1,200 to $1,500 a year, where people can afford to pay but a small monthly rental, on which private capital can make no profit.

He indicated that all sources concerned were agreed that slum clearance must be separated from the other phase of the problem, and stressed the strong demand for housing betterment in low-income groups.

Ship Passengers Denied Glimpse of Miss Garbo

Gothenburg, Sweden, March 10 (AP).—The S. S. Drotiningholm sailed on schedule for New York today, but her passengers were uncertain as to whether Greta Garbo was among them.

All they knew was that one cabin was reserved in the elusive actress' name, and that extra police were called out to control the crowd on the dock. But nobody saw Garbo.

Admiral Beatty Dies

at the end of the World War when he personally received the surrender of the German navy. It was then that he issued the famous order that the German flag be "hauled down at sunset and not hoisted again."

David Beatty, had he followed in his father's footsteps, would have joined the British army. He chose, instead, to become a sailor. The result was that he achieved a place in Britain's sea history where, in the minds of many Englishmen, he was second only to Nelson.

He was by far the most colorful sailor in the World War. Handsome, with a classic Irish profile, the manner in which he wore his uniform, with the cap pulled at a rakish angle over one eye, had a profound sartorial influence on American naval officers, who, when this country entered the war, looked very much like elevator operators, so stiff were they in their uniforms.

His career was meteoric, without parallel in the modern British navy. He was a rear admiral at 39, an age when few officers have reached the rank of captain.

He married "well," too. His wife was Ethel Field, daughter of the wealthy Marshall Field, of Chicago.

The short, barrel-chested man, who was to become admiral of the fleet, was born January 17, 1871, son of Capt. and Mrs. D. L. Beatty, of Borodale, Wexford County, Ireland. None of the Beattys had been sailors, and there was no reason to believe that David would lean toward the sea.

However, young David made known his inclination at an age when most American lads are in the fifth or sixth grade of grammar school. He was 13 when he joined the British navy. That was in 1884. It was still the old wooden-ship navy then—at least, that part of it that young Beaty knew in training. He was assigned to a barque-rigged ship, and he was taught to use a cutlass as well as a muzzle-loader.

He was 21 and a lieutenant when he fought his way up the Nile with Kitchener. This was the Sudan campaign of 1894-98. When his commanding officer was wounded, Beatty took over the command of a flotilla of gunboats which accompanied the advance. For his gallantry, he was awarded the distinguished service order and was promoted to commander over the heads of 395 other officers.

In Boxer Uprising.

Two years after this he had another chance to distinguish himself, in the Boxer uprising in China.

He was on board the battleship Barfleur, and he and his shipmates were ordered to relieve the beleaguered legations in Peking. Commander Beatty was wounded twice in attacking the Chinese batteries. Afterward he was made a captain, this time being jumped over the heads of 200 more officers. He was then only 29.

Oldtimers in the royal navy were by this time saying that the Victorian traditions were "going to the devil." More shocks were in store for them.

Beatty married the Field heiress, of Chicago. For a time thereafter he was an aid de camp to King Edward VII.

When he was 39, as has been narrated, he was made a rear admiral, the youngest officer of that rank since the days of Rodney, Keppel and Nelson.

Admiralty Disliked Him.

The admiralty had no use for Beatty because of his youth and he went into premature retirement. Having married a rich woman, he was not dependent on his navy pay. But when Winston Churchill became first lord of the admiralty in 1911, Beatty called at his office, as custom required, and asked if there was anything for him to do. Churchill made him his naval secretary.

When the World War broke out, Admiral Beatty was in command of the squadron of battle cruisers, a post second only to that of Admiral Jellicoe, commander in chief of the grand fleet.

There were many in the British navy at this time who regarded Beatty as a "fair-haired boy," a pampered favorite of those in power. In the next four years, he was to show them that they were wrong: that he was a real naval genius.

Heligoland Victor.

His first chance came on August 28, 1914, at the battle of Heligoland Bight, when Beatty sank three cruisers and one destroyer.

But the battle that made Beatty a hero in England was that near the Dogger Bank in January, 1915, when Beatty's cruisers raided the fleet of the German Admiral Hipper. The battle was a spectacular one. Beatty suffered heavy losses, but he also achieved his objective: He put an end to the German raiding activities.

For this exploit he was made a Knight Commander of the Bath. Also he was promoted to vice admiral.

The first phase of the celebrated battle of Jutland found him ready. In the face of great odds, he maneuvred the German fleet within range of the British grand fleet, the results of which are a part of history.

Admiral Beatty made a remark in the course of that battle that has often been quoted since.

Famous Quotation.

"There seems," he said to his flag captain, later Vice Admiral Sir Alfred Chatfield, "to be something wrong with our ships today. Just take us two points closer into the enemy, please."

For his brilliant work in that battle, Admiral Beatty was mentioned in dispatches and made a knight commander of the Royal Victorian Order and a knight of the Grand Cross of the Bath.

In 1916, Admiral Beatty succeeded Lord John Jellicoe as commander in chief of the grand fleet. He was never to take part in another battle. He was, however, to be the hero in a naval incident without parallel, the surrender of the German fleet as a whole after the war.

After bringing the German fleet into the Firth of Forth after the "great surrender" in November, 1918, he sent out the following signal from the Queen Elizabeth:

"The German flag is to be hauled down at 15:57 (seagoing time) today, Thursday, and is not to be hoisted again without permission."

Supervised "Burial."

It was his duty to supervise the burial of the German fleet at Scapa Flow. On that memorable day he was only 47. It was the highlight in his career. If his fame overshadowed that of Admiral Jellico, this was one of the reasons—forgetting Beatty's color and "dash."

It was in 1919 that he was created Earl Beatty, Viscount Borodale, of Wexford, and Baron Beatty of the North Sea and of Brooksby. Parliament voted him a grant of 100,000 pounds and he was awarded the Order of Merit.

In November, 1919, Earl Beatty became First Sea Lord. In this role he had to supervise the demobilization of the greatest naval force that the world had ever known.

The term of this office, according to the law, was seven years. So valuable was Beatty, however, that First Lord of the Admiralty W. C. Bridgman, insisted that Beatty stay on until a suitable successor was selected. The result was that he served 7 years and 9 months.

Like most seafaring men, Beatty's hobbies were on shore. His favorite relaxation was horses and fox-hunting. After his retirement in 1927, Earl Beatty devoted most of his time to hunting. In October, 1931, a horse kicked him in the jaw, and an operation was necessary.

His wife died in 1932. He is survived by two sons, the Viscount Borodale, David Field Beatty, who was elected as a member of Parliament in 1931, and Peter Randolph Louis Beatty.

Ursula Martin Bubble Dance Has Real Goods

Star Heads Entertaining Floor Show at the Dude Ranch.

By Chanticleer.

Now I ask you, did you ever see a real bubble dance? Maybe you think you have but they tell me the real goods in bubble dancing is on view this week at the Dude Ranch. She is Ursula Martin and in addition of bubble dancing Ursula knows a few things about toe tapping and acrobatic dancing.

It seems that a bubble dance, to be done correctly, requires a nice, big bubble (which is an oversize toy balloon), an engaging personality and lovely flowing tresses. Ursula lays claim to all of these.

Also on the billing are Dixie Dyer, singing mistress of ceremonies; Jimmy Staley, the crooning troubadour, and Ralph Garron and his orchestra. Whatever Milt Barrett may lack as a floor show entertainer he makes up as a delightful host.

• • • •

Since Ramon has added dancing nightly to the attractions of his Connecticut avenue gatherin' spot, a new piano has been installed. Rudy Schramm opens it up nightly and dusts it off with all the tenderness a papa gives his first born. Also two men have been added to the band in the last week, to wit—Bill Chisholm, singing drummer, and Maury Hanson, clarinetist and saxophonist. Rudy has just added another laurel as a composer. He did the theme for "Treasury Trails," now N. P. C.-ing coast to coast.

The "Dancing Debbies" are disporting themselves at the Lotus this week, being a collection of Broadway's gals of talent and comeliness. Among the featured boys and girls of the floor show are Bumps Mennetti, international comedian with a penchant for taking bodily punishment; Josephine Kay and Doris, dance team in sophisticated routines; Theodore and Wright, dancers direct from the Biltmore in New York, and Samey Sisters, in hot dance routines . . .

Lucille Wray is back at Maryland Club Gardens. Remember? She's the lady who does those ultra-modern dance things. In fact, they're so different, Lucille has special musical scores written for the act. That is, Lucille does those scores herself . . . That smaller cocktail lounge at the Mayflower has been done over. It was a little dark as originally decorated—but very, very nice now. Jack Campbell is on hand this week at the piano, Michael with his accordion, and Mil Christopher continues to amaze and delight with his magic . . .

Several of the boys from Xavier Cugat's band, who saw the Madrillon's Saturday midnight show and modestly refused to participate in the floor show, later broke down and did a little informal act all their own. Tomas Salinas, featured Cugat singer, staged an exhibition of how a Cuban dance should be done . . . It's going to be a Hollywood "Fashion Show" at the Shoreham Friday night. They do say the men are looking forward to that one as much as the women. The show will depict the "Celanese Mode of Elegance," including a grand march of gowns created by designers to Hollywood's stars. It will be repeated for a special luncheon Saturday noon and again in the ballroom Saturday night . . .

Consuelo Flowerton returned to the Heigh-Ho Club this week amidst a blaze of glory and all that sort of thing. Her last visit was a howling success and it looks as though she's going to top even that high mark. She has a new bag of songs—but still sings the old favorites, such as "Algebra." Archie Hawk is on the bill with her . . . Lila Zalipsky has one assignment only in the Club Volga Boatman floor show—but it's an important one. Lila closes the appearance of the gypsy chorus with a whirlwind dance that usually brings the customers to their feet. Her forte really is ballet but living here in the city, she loves to keep active—and take a bow.

Doranda and Barry, ballroom team, are heading this week's show at La Paree. They're just coming East for the first time after making a lot of hay in the Middle West. Also present are the Royal Duo, skating artists; Mona Alba, interpretative dances; Queenie King, modernistic dancer, and York and Lewis, tap specialists. More amateur contest Monday night . . . Friday night will be a premiere at the Russian Troika with advance notices advising that Manager Helen Hamilton's previous theatrical efforts will be put to shame. A brand-new show from beginning to end with a few new artists—including Michel Michon, Moscow Art Theater operatic barytone, and A. Stoyanovsky, tenor, recently of the Chauve Souris.

The Ambassador Hi-Hat's Paradise Islanders will be heard in their native land this afternoon. Yes, sir, they'll do a program for N. B. C., which will be carried through to the Honolulu station. The Islanders also were honored by a visit this week from the University of Hawaii debating team barnstorming the country.

One thing about the newspaper business: when you need a sudden new talent—you learn how to develop it. F'instance, the new saxophonist in Moe Baer's band at the Club Habana. He was a scribe and when scribing didn't turn out so profitable for the nonce, he grabbed himself a tooting job with an ace hand. Not bad, says I . . . You can't stop those Buddy Harmonizers at the Mayflower lounge. When the craze for swing music came along, they dug up all the old favorites and mixed them with the new hits. Then the folks asked for something still different. Now the band is specializing on "Comin' Through the Rye," "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean" and others of that type. The boys "swing 'em," too.

Baroness Von Thyssen To Sue Mdivani Heirs

Berlin, March 10 (AP).—A lawyer said today that Baroness Maud von Thyssen, companion of Prince Alexis Mdivani on the night he lost his life in an auto crash in Spain, intends to sue the Mdivani heirs.

The baroness, said Count Ludwig Carl von Strachwitz, the lawyer, will ask 1,000,000 marks ($400,000) damage for the loss of jewelry she claims was in the car of the former husband of Countess Barbara Hutton Haugwitz-Reventlow at the time of the crash last year.

Around the Town With the Night Clubs

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

CREDIT union laws and other matters of general interest to the dozens of credit unions in the various Government departments will be discussed at 8 p. m. today in Room 358, Farm Credit Administration, 1301 E street northwest, at a meeting of officers and members of Federal units.

BAKER.

The meeting, the first in a series, will be under supervision of the Credit Union Practice Committee of the District of Columbia Credit Union League, of which C. D. Franks, Veterans Administration, is the chairman.

Claude R. Orchard, director of the Credit Union Section, FCA, will give a brief outline of the history of the credit union movement. Miss Mae Helm, assistant corporation council of the District, will speak on the District of Columbia credit union law and its operation. William S. Kinney, chairman of the laws and regulations committee of the District of Columbia Credit Union League, will speak on the Federal credit law and its relationship to the District law.

The annual meeting of the District of Columbia Credit Union League will be held tomorrow in Room 400 of the FCA building to elect officers and hear reports for the closing fiscal year. Mr. Orchard also will address this group on "Work of the Credit National Association." He was recently elected secretary of CUNA.

Clarke J. McLane (P), Library of Congress, has a leading part in arranging these credit union meetings and programs.

All Georgians in Government service are minded by Clarke P. Cole 2d (F), who is secretary of the Georgia State Society, that the society's Leap Year Ball will be held at the Shoreham Hotel, March 17.

"Jinx" Party Announced.

Members of the Ladies Commissioner and Miscellaneous Bowling League will be hostesses at a "jinx" card party and entertainment at the All States Hotel at 8 p. m. Friday. Prizes will be awarded, according to Edna Van Fossen, chairman of the arangements committee. Other members of the committee include Irene Tyree, Emma Marke, Mae Noel, Arvilla Bickford, Garnet Miller and Clara T. Rollins (F).

A. J. Bartram is pinch-hitting for William P. Wright, assistant chief of the Foreign Service Division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, while the latter is taking a few weeks' rest in Florida.

Bureau of Public Roads.

Adrian C. Rapelje, senior highway engineer, was retired early this month, having reached 70.

Appointments, transfers and resignations are reported as follows:

M. G. Douglas Taylor, formerly a clerk in the Accounting Section, has been appointed junior accountant, with headquarters at San Jose, Costa Rica.

Mrs. Nellie T. Daniels, clerk, has resigned.

Harry F. Schlegel (C), has been appointed as clerk in Division of Designs.

Miss Lorena Daniel (C), clerk, will resign March 15 to accept a position with Soil Conservation Service.

Miss Adrienne Onderdonk has been appointed to a stenographic position.

Thomas A. Cox, jr., and William M. Danielson have been appointed as associate highway engineer economists.

Asa Harold Kidd has been appointed as highway engineer economist.

Another Punctuality Record.

Oh, I am what I am,
And I've worked for Uncle Sam
Forty years.

And it's now time for me,
With my "big" annuity,
To shoft gears.

But before I egress
There's a thing I must confess
(Like a dunce):

Though a conscientious clerk,
I have been on time to work
Only once!

Exhibit Is Planned.

Mrs. Catherine L. Manning, philatelist of the Smithsonian Institution, is preparing several exhibits to be shown at the Third International Philatelic Exhibition at Grand Central Palace, New York, May 9 to 17. One display will show the Government method of mounting stamps for museum display. The Smithsonian exhibit will be in addition to those of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and of the Postoffice Department.

Federal Design Listed.

Q. Who designed the new Texas commemorative stamp?—Ella L. Louis (P).

A. Alvin R. Meissner, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, made the finished design of the 3-cent Texas stamp, which was placed on sale at Gonzales, Tex., March 2. The original die was the work of four engravers: William B. Wells, frame and lettering; Leo Kauffmann, portrait of Stephen F. Austin; Carl T. Arlt, portrait of Sam Houston, and Frederick Pauling, the Alamo and sky.

Steamer Beached To Save Its Crew

Port Orford, Oreg., March 10 (AP). Safe ashore with his crew of 22, Capt. Victor Jacobsen disclosed today he had deliberately run the steamer Phyllis aground last night to save the crew when a leak was discovered in the vessel.

With engines at full steam ahead the 1,266-ton coastwise freighter of the W. R. Chamberlin Line crashed on a rockstrewn beach 5 miles south of here. The crew took to lifeboats just as the vessel struck and were picked up an hour later by Coast Guards.

Capt. Jacobsen said the Phyllis was about a mile off shore when 3 feet of water was discovered in the hold. The level was rising fast.

"We tried hard to make Port Orford, but it was just impossible," said the veteran skipper. "We finally had to turn to the beach, avoided rocks and jumped to lifeboats when the Phyllis struck.

"We sent up flares immediately and the Port Orford Coast Guard responded. We were picked up within an hour and had no trouble reaching shore."

Bandits Steal $18,000 Pay Roll of Florida Club

Hollywood, Fla., March 10 (AP).—Five bandits today invaded the Hollywood Country Club, swank night resort, and fled with between $17,000 and $18,000.

Binding the eight employes, after forcing them to remove their trousers, the bandits took the money from the safe and escaped.

Chief Deputy Sheriff Robert Clark said he was told there was a large amount of money, in excess of a normal night's receipts, because today was "pay day."

Voliva Sees Mussolini As Dictator of World

Zion, Ill., March 10 (AP).—Wilbur Glenn Voliva today predicted Benito Mussolini would probably become dictator of the world.

The overseer of the Christian Catholic Church, advocate of the theory that the earth is flat, reverted to the prophetic role on his sixty-sixth birthday.

He made this comment on domestic affairs:

"If the Administration remains, there will be little of American government left. We will probably have to get permission to go to bed."

Culbertson on Bridge

Opening Lead Formula.

I am continually asked for a formula for correct opening leading. One might as well seek a specific for a dozen different kinds of diseases.

Nothing can be more a matter of individual hand analysis than the opening lead. As I have pointed out on innumerable occasions, the bidding (or, negatively, the lack of bidding) often carries the vital clue. At other times the leader has only his own cards to guide him. In these cases, the best plan is to set up an arbitrary objective. Thus, if he holds tricks in the heart and diamond suits and the contract is four spades, it is obvious that he should attempt to establish a club trick on the opening lead. Trump tricks, if any, will require no establishment. In a sense, this method of preserving what one already has, and attempting to create what one has not, may be called a "formula for leading."

A Case in Point.

West, the opening leader in today's hand, followed the above policy to good effect.

East dealer.

♠ 7 5
♥ Q J 5 4
♦ Q 7
♣ K 7 6 5 3

WEST
♠ Q J 10 3
♥ A 10 9
♦ K J 9 6 2
♣ 8

EAST
♠ A K 9 8 2
♥ K 7 3
♦ 10 5

SOUTH
♠ 6 4
♥ 8 6 2
♦ A 8 4 3
♣ A J 4 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 spade	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 spades (final bid.)

South, on lead, wasted no mental effort in trying to visualize what was impossible. He had no idea as to the distribution of the other three hands, but he did know that he had at least two tricks in the minor suits. A trump lead had no particular object and it would lose time. The process of elimination led him unerringly to a heart lead.

He opened the six, intending later to lead the eight, so as not to mislead partner into believing it a doubleton opening. Dummy played low and North's jack forced the king. Two rounds of trumps followed, and then the diamond ten was led. South ducked, as did dummy, and North's queen won. A club put South on lead and he returned the eight of hearts. It did not matter now what dummy played. The contract was hopeless. North's queen of hearts had to win, either then or later, when South won his diamond ace.

Admitting that the declarer made an unfortunate guess on his first diamond lead, South still deserved full credit for selecting the only lead that had even a chance to defeat the contract.

Dawn Patrol

Ne York, March 10.

FOUR YEARS ago, at the Waldorf, Maestro Jack (French Casino) Denny started something . . . Denny invited Social Register misses to come to the hotel one night a week and sing with his band . . . That's why darkies are born, and that's how the epidemic of society gal singers was started . . . Denny's debutantes included Elsie Taylor, Gwendolyn Fiske, Mimi Kountz, Natalie Kountz, Lois Elliman, Timmy Dobbin and Teddy Lynch . . . But many are called and few are chosen . . . Of the seven who faced the Tin Pan Alley barrier, Miss Lynch and Miss Taylor alone survive. Miss Lynch giving out hot licks at the Stork Club, and the Taylor eyeful appearing on the radio under the nom de warble of Kathleen Barry . . . Later on, after the Denny experiment, Socialites Eve Symington, Margie Logan and Gay Adams joined the parade to the microphone, and there is a society trio at Armando's calling themselves the New Yorkers . . . Marion O'Neill and Mary Winston Powers are two of 'em . . . These society youngsters take their singing very seriously, and night club owners aver that these well-bred girls have little or no "ham" in them, work hard, attract business and are very proud of their weekly checks.

When I was a kid he was the Red Grange of his day, the greatest damn caballero in all of Pigskinville . . . But the years sped on, and, as Jimmy Walker pointed out, the cheers of yesterday have a short echo . . . I saw Elmer Oliphant, all-America at Purdue and West Point, sitting in the Hollywood a few nights back . . . Hy Blaine brought him over to the table, and the former grid great and the former sports writer chatted a bit self-consciously . . . I called over a couple of the chorines to meet him . . . When he left the table I asked the chorines if they remembered him . . . They shook their heads . . . "You don't remember Elmer Oliphant?" I said, "all-America in 1915, '16 and '17" . . . The chorines looked startled: "But we weren't even born then, Mr. Sullivan," one of them pointed out . . . And suddenly, ladies and gentlemen, I realized that I was getting old . . . I've felt blue ever since.

Two A. M. at El Morocco . . . Francis T. Hunter, Morton Downey, Harry Evans and myself at a corner table with Umberto Cervello . . . Hunter and I are recalling the epic day at Seabright, N. J., when he riddled the backhand of Gerald Patterson, Australian tennis champ . . . Evans is telling what a grand scout Lady Mendl is: "She's near 70 years old and exercises every day—hard as nails" . . . Downey is talking of Frank Murphy, Philippine high commissioner . . . He asked Commissioner Murphy to entertain Ben Finney and Dan Topping when they arrived there . . . Downey had just received a cable: "High on a mountain top, we are drinking to your health" . . . It was signed Frank, Ben and Percy Mendelsohn . . . Joan Blair and Charlie Barron, one of the sweller ballroom teams, drink champagne cocktails at a near-by table . . . The band plays a rhumba, and the floor fills with couples who shake and shudder delicately.

Caw "Colleen" Sunday night . . . Hugh Herbert was doing an imitation of Ed Wynn . . . Joan Blondell did a tri-cornered imitation of Bette Davis, Mae West and Gracie Allen . . . Paul Draper's grand tap dancing highlighted the flicker for me . . . And nobody has commented on the fact that Ruth Draper's talented relative, like Jane Frohman, has overcome the stammer which disqualified him from musical comedy

Senate Daughters to Hold Annual Dinner-Dance Tonight

By Elisabeth C. Taylor.

The "Senate Daughters", who will hold their annual dinner and dance at the Shoreham Hotel tonight, are an informal group, ignoring the usual rules and regulations of organizations, and having only one officer, the president, Miss Katherine Overton, daughter of Senator and Mrs. John H. Overton. The "Senate Daughters" are elastic in membership, always taking in members but never giving them up. Miss Peyton Hawes, Miss Julia Harris and Miss Jane Holt are three of the most active members. There are no dues and consequently there is no treasurer; no minutes of meetings, which are gay luncheon gatherings, and no secretary.

Miss Overton has crowded a great many activities into her short life. She was a student at Sweet Briar College for two years and then returned to her native State, where she attended Louisiana State University and was graduated with an A.B. She was a member of Phi Kappa Phi, honorary scholastic fraternity, and was selected as delegate from her class at the same time her father and uncle were delegates from their classes to a meeting at which all the classes of the university were represented from 1890 on.

She is interested in dramatics and public speaking and figured prominently in both while at the university, belonging to the Louisiana Players' Guild and also writing several plays which the Guild produced.

Her "literary career" has been abandoned for the time being, except for a voluminous diary in which she records her opinions of the things going on in Washington. "At first," she said," it was intended to be a serious affair, reflecting my impressions of politics and government events, but it seems to have turned into a record of my good times in Washington."

Miss Overton is also a member of Theta Alpha Phi, honorary dramatic society. Modestly, she did not tell how she had won the honor, but admission to the society requires playing either two major roles or four minor ones, or some outstanding contribution to dramatics.

After completing her college work, Miss Overton went to business school and is, at present, her father's private clerk.

The "Senate Daughters" have meetings whenever a group of them can get together for luncheon, and visitors are always welcome, the members being privileged to bring friends.

Including the three "Sons of the Senate," who will come stag, to tonight's party, Mr. Farley Smith, Mr. Ross Pope and Mr. Arthur Vandenburg, jr., and Mr. Forrest Caraway, who will escort Miss Rose Long, there will be about 30 members and guests present. Others of the group will be Miss Doris Gibson, Miss Jane Hole, Miss Katherine Harrison, Miss Noreen McCarran, Miss Beatrice Burke, Miss Kathleen Bulow, Miss Ruth Overton, Miss Selma Norbeck and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Lawton.

Miss English to Visit.

Miss Beatrice English, daughter of Mrs. Frederick English, of Philadelphia, who has been in Palm Beach for the winter with Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, will come to Washington late this month to remain for a fortnight. Miss English was a volunteer in the Translation Bureau of the Department of State, during the World War.

Notables Attend College Benefit At the National

A large and distinguished audience attended the benefit performance last evening of "Idiot's Delight" sponsored by the Bryn Mawr Club of Washington. Proceeds will be used to send a Washington girl to Bryn Mawr.

Among those who attended were the daughters of the Ambassador of Chile, Senoritas Maria, Graciela and Rebeca Trucco, the Counselor of the Hungarian Legation, Mr. Anthony de Balasy, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, Mr. Harper Sibley, with his daughter, Miss Elizabeth Sibley; Miss Olivia Stokes with her brother, Mr. I. N. S. Stokes; Barones Korff, Gen. and Mrs. William Cruikshank, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Norman Smith, Mrs. Mark Bristol and Miss Elizabeth Eastman, sister of Mr. Joseph Eastman, Federal Co-ordinator of Transportation.

Mr. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, chairman of the United States Tarriff Commission, and Mrs. O'Brien entertained at dinner last evening and took their guests on to the theater. Their guests were Senator Arthur Capper, the Military and Air Attache of the German Embassy and Frau von Boetticher, Solicitor General and Mrs. Stanley Reed and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman.

Mr. and Mrs. Vinton Chapin also entertained a small party at dinner before the theater last night.

Mrs. Bickelhaupt To Honor Alumnae

Mrs. Ivan Bickelhaupt, of Richmond, who is at present residing in Chevy Chase, will entertain at dinner tonight for the Washington alumnae members of Gamma Phi Beta. The guests of honor will be Mrs. William H. Weed and Miss Helen Turnbull, both of Baltimore, who are province officials of the sorority.

Following the dinner, motion pictures will be shown of the summer camps for underprivileged children in Denver, Vancouver and Virginia Beach, which are operated as a national project by Gamma Phi Beta. Plans will be discussed with the province director for co-operation by the Washington group in the operation of the Virginia camp this summer.

Friendly Sons Leader Arrives for Session

Col. Arthur O'Brien has arrived from Seattle to attend the annual meeting of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, of which he is president.

He will be present at the second performance of the "Prodigal Son-in-Law," the musical comedy written especially for the Friendly Sons by Mr. Thomas W. Brahany and repeated at the Willard Hotel March 18 for the benefit of the milk fund of the city-wide group of the Ladies of Charity.

TWO ON SAFARI

By GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

Ballard Mallory, young American explorer, accepts a commission to find the young Honorable Laurence Morland, who has disappeared in Africa. Aboard ship he meets Josephine Cascoden, enigmatic young Britisher who calmly announces she is going with him. He tries to prevent her, their wills clash, she outwits him and at last he agrees. At a hotel in Lourenco Marques she receives a cable that distresses her. They go aboard a ketch, arrive at Machiche and Mallory tells friends there he goes into the veldt at once. They start on safari.

Chapter XIX.

Ibn-ben-Dur.

"THOSE women!" gasped Josephine. "It's ghastly. I won't have it."

"Neither will I," said Ballard, "as soon as I can make a switch, but not for your reasons. Forget that stuff and nonsense about the weaker sex. The only thing that keeps the women from heading the line into camp is because they hang back so they can carry some man's load as well as their own. Do you want to know why I don't want them along?"

"Why?"

"Because at night they're so full of pep they'll start a dance, and a dance always stands for trouble."

MacIntosh returned to invite them to luncheon in place of the grand dinner. It proved a silent meal, the Britishers thinking of the afternoon's work still to do, Ballard absorbed in going over details in his mind. Josephine, though excited at the thought of departure, kept her head enough to resent the general gloom. Ignored by her hosts, she awaited her chance and when they lined up to say good-by she addressed them correctly by name and gave to each a smile so ravishing it produced an astonished awakening, super-charged with instantaneous regret.

They entered the smaller compound where the carriers stood, each by his load. Mallory waved a signal and at a shout from Negrito they stooped and lifted.

The men broke into a staccato chant, the women vibrated the tips of their tongues in such a cry as Josephine had never before heard. The safari was off. The first short march was marked by disorder, but Ballard, intent on thoughts of his own, seemed not to mind. The sun sank low, yet he pressed on. Arriving at a cross-roads in the trail he called a halt, summoned Ali for a murmured conference and gave orders for a partial setting of the camp; then he turned to Josephine.

"I've got to strike across to Inhambane and I may be gone half the night. Take my advice and stay here." She shook her head. "All right; come on, then."

Mood Is Dampened.

Touched by a spur, the gray plunged at a gallop down the crossroads; the brown, following, almost whirled from under her, but not quite.

The stocky brown horse needed no guide; without urging he held to a full gallop until a huddle of huts along the shore line of the bay loomed in his way. On his own account he slowed to a canter, then to a trot and quickly dropped into a running walk. Josephine glanced back over her shoulder and watched Mallory's approach through the gathering gloom. Presently he drew up beside her, started to remonstrate, but left the words unspoken.

"There are moments," he said quietly, "when you're the loveliest thing on earth, and this is one of them."

She made no answer, and while he was bickering for a skiff to cross to the peninsula, the syces emerged from shadow to resume their charge.

The sail across the bay proved uneventful and a few minutes after reaching the landing ramp they were walking along the streets of the ancient town.

Ballard paused to orient himself, then turned a corner and presently plunged into the deserted Indian quarter. At a solid door he stopped, knocked and knocked again.

At last a muffled voice spoke from within. He answered, giving his name and adding the appellation bestowed upon him by the natives — He-Who-Laughs-at-Women. A loud grunt issued from behind the door and after the clanking of a lifted bar and the rasping of a huge lock it unfolded in the middle and swung open. Ballard slipped in, dragging Josephine with him. In pitch darkness the bar was replaced, the key turned. A match spluttered and was touched to the wick of a hanging lantern. As the flame slowly grew bright, Josephine became aware of a long counter and shelves packed with every variety of cheap prints and tinned comestibles. Then her eyes fell upon the person who had admitted them, and forgetting her manners, she stared.

Unexpected Compliment.

"Mem-sahib?" he asked amazedly. Ballard nodded. "Ah!" exclaimed Ibn and promptly advanced to a ponderous small door at the back of the shop.

He tapped lightly on it in an odd rhythm. A bolt was drawn within and it swung open. He stood aside and waved them in. At first Josephine perceived nothing except a heavy odor of sandalwood, incense or essential oils, perhaps a mixture of all three. But presently the suffused light emitted by four pierced lamps grew in intensity until she could make out a fantastically luxurious interior in the Oriental manner. Rugs, couches, cushions and curtains, like Ibn himself, breathed of their faraway Persian derivation. A tiny figure, veiled in clinging black draperies, slipped from behind the door, flitted across the room and curled cross-legged in the deepest corner of the divans. Huge black eyes devoured Josephine who saw in return only a child of 11 or 12. Had she known she was regarding Ibn-ben-Dur's lawful wife she would have shuddered.

Since Ballard and his host were already seated she looked around and sank into the nearest chair, a strange contraption of curved teak slats, joined in the shape of the letter X with a saddle in between.

She grew drowsy, dozed in spite of herself, and when she awoke it was to prompt realization of a change in the tempo of the talk. Ballard was asking slow considered questions and getting thoughtful replies, over each of which he pondered. Immediately what the two men were saying became as important to her as her cable had seemed to Mallory. She felt her ears stir under her hair in her eagerness to decipher the jargon, but names defeated her—strange names. Polissa, the Inhasune, Mecokane, the Inhasune, Gcocwambe, and again the Inhasune. What was the Inhasune? Gumbo, Maoia, Nyagulaze, Nyamekelengue—her head whirled but something in the suppressed eagerness of Ballard's manner steadied her; he was like a hound with nose to the ground and she must follow. He leaned forward and murmured, "Quando?"

Ibn shrugged his shoulders, threw out his pudgy hands, palms up. He arose, crossed to a carved cabinet—half desk, half chest of drawers—opened it, and extracted a dog-eared ledger. Adjusting brass-rimmed spectacles, he began pawing its leaves backward. The stub of his thumb ran up the columns from bottom to top and came to a first stop; over his shoulder he tossed an announcement, Ballard nodded. Ibn resumed his search; three pages back he spoke again and again Ballard nodded. The process continued for some time. Abruptly Ballard spoke.

Beaten At Her Game.

"Morland — Laurence Morland; does that mean anything?"

It was as though a torpedo had burst inside Josephine's head. She sank back, collapsed, saved herself by the sides of the chair only just in time. She knew the blood had ebbed from her face and felt as though it had been drained from her body. But what held her fascinated gaze was Ballard's face. It was transformed, smiling a detestable smile that told her she had been trapped, ignominiously beaten at her own game. In that moment she hated him with an intensity surpassing any emotion she had ever known.

"Thanks, Ibn," he said in the easy manner of one who concludes a lengthy negotiation.

A weight seemed to lift from Ibn's rounded shoulders; business over, he could play the host. He smiled, pivoted to look at Josephine, and smiled again. Crossing to a cupboard, he opened it, produced a tin of biscuits and a long-necked bottle from which he poured Greek wine, sickeningly sweet. Josephine nibbled at a biscuit and sipped from her glass, nervous under Ibn's tiny, measuring eyes. Ballard also made a mere gesture of partaking of the proffered hospitality, then rose to his feet.

"Sorry, Ibn, but we have to go." He produced a notebook, jotted down a few words, tore out the leaf and handed it over. "Here's my order; better send it to Wemba."

Color of Eyes Used as Guide For Makeup

Jumble No Longer Necessary as Economical Box Assures Harmony.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WHAT'S IT ALL ABOUT—this new beauty principle "choose your make-up by the color of your eyes?"

Just that. Nature has given every woman a definite personality color—a color that stays the same from childhood on. That's the color of her eyes.

It was this line of reasoning followed by one widely known beautician who strongly advocates the new matched make-up theory. He has made four complete ensembles of make-up and keyed them to the four major eye colors—blue, brown, gray and hazel.

Naturally this is a definite answer to a long-felt need. Look at any woman's handbag. Look on her dressing table. There's powder she bought one day in a hurry. Rouge of another brand. Lipstick that doesn't match. All in all, a mixed up jumble of make-up.

Now this beautician rescues us from this mumbo jumbo make-up menace by offering us kits containing rouge, lipstick, powder, eye shadow and mascara all harmonized to our eyes.

Think of what a boon it is to go in and buy your complete make-up in these blended groups. And don't think it didn't take time and constant experimentation to perfect these packages. Color and colors and more colors were tried on women with brown, hazel, gray and blue eyes until just the right shades were found to highlight their coloring.

You'll be bowled over with surprise when you see the stunning kits and learn they cost only 55 cents.

Metal Paper-rocks.

"SLOOP" is the highly appropriate name for one of the most convenient little items ever to take its stand on a shop counter.

"Sloop" is really a paper-rack but it's also a metal frame twisted into the shape—or should one say "outline"—of a little sailing boat.

It has ornamental as well as practical value. When you want to read your paper during breakfast you simply fold it in the middle and prop it in the rack. It's held in pace and in just the right manner for easy reading.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THEY ARE a conservatively modern young couple who have bought conservatively modern furniture, and now they are wondering about what rug and draperies to get to go with it. Their sofa is a solid colored jade green mohair—the club chair is brown mohair and a smaller chair is in striped eggshell mohair with brown piping and brown fringe. The material has a beautiful sheen. The furniture is all in walnut . . . the walls and blinds are eggshell . . . the fireplace mantel is in walnut and eggshell. She had thought of a jade rug and draperies in brown and eggshell . . . What do we think? And what material and color for a desk chair?

The jade rug with brown and eggshell draperies would work out very nicely, we would say. Then possibly the desk chair in citron yellow. Or have the rug in beige and the draperies in jade lined with beige . . . then use rust for the desk chair. Still another idea if they want a warmer and more daring effect would be to have the rug in powdery red, the draperies in eggshell, lined with powdery red . . . have the desk chair in eggshell.

Married Writers Refute Belief Only 'Opposites' Should Wed

Mr. and Mrs. Marquis James Find Successful Career in Same Profession—She as Author of Children's Books—He as Biographer.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"CERTAINLY IF I COULD help it, I would never marry a wife who wrote," once declared Robert Louis Stevenson.

Yet, today there are numerous writers wedded to writers, apparently much happier than components of many marriages where wives tend strictly to their tatting.

For example, there are Mr. and Mrs. Marquis James. He is the author of best-seller biographies of Sam Houston and Andrew Jackson and is now collating notes for Bernard Baruch's memoirs. She—Bessie Rowland James—has written three books for children, has edited The Diary of David Brainard, and is now working on the biography of a pioneer feminine journalist, Anne Royall.

On her way to her home in Pleasantville, N. Y., from Florida, where she and her husband have been vacationing, Mrs. James stopped in Washington to do some research at the Library of Congress. Yesterday she found a few minutes free from pouring over old manuscripts to tell something of how she and her writer-husband manage their work and their marriage.

Common Interests.

Contrary to what some persons think, she believes a husband and wife absorbed in the same type of work "have so much in common they find each other more interesting than they might otherwise. I have a better understanding of my husband's problems because I am working out the same kind myself. Having a competent critic so close at hand is a tremendous advantage. Sometimes he helps me; occasionally I help him. We always have something to discuss, something to figure out together."

While the Jameses have never actually collaborated on a book, Mrs. James has done some research for her husband's biographies. "Anyone doing that type of writing needs some dependable person to help collect facts," she said. "You have no idea how much research goes into any life story; and when the subjects are as colorful as Houston and Jackson you can't imagine what a enormous task it is to check up on everything."

But while these two authors sometimes help each other, their writing is done separately. A room in their home at Pleasantville is Mrs. James "work shop." Mr. James writes in a "study over the garage." "So we don't disturb each other at all while either is writing," she said.

Both are at their desks early in the morning. "Our 12-year-old daughter, Cynthia, has to get off to school, so we are up about 7 o'clock. Immediately after breakfast, my husband goes to his study. Then, as soon as Cynthia is off to school and I have arranged my daily household schedule, I start writing and stay at it most of the day. Sometimes I see my husband at lunch; sometimes I don't. That depends on how hard we are working."

Plans for New Book.

Since both must do so much research for their books, reading is not a favored recreation for either of the Jameses. "We like something a bit more active, such as tennis or ping-pong. We manage to get in one of these—or a game of backgammon rather often. Our social life is reduced to almost nothing during our working periods. Yet, after about three months of grinding work, we drop it all and skip off for a real vacation—such as the one we have just had in Florida."

While three of her books have been for juveniles, Mrs. James admitted she "never particularly planned to write books for children. My start in that field was purely accidental," she explained. "After the success of my husband's book, 'The Raven,' publishers wanted Houston's life written for children. The writer who first agreed to do this changed his mind, and I was asked to write the book."

This volume was called "Six Feet Six." The Jackson book for children followed, and more recently Mrs. James wrote "The Happy Animals of Atagahi," an adaptation of Cherokee myths for children.

By working hard, she believes she can finish the biography of Anne Royall in 1937. She has been interested in "this woman who interviewed every President from Washington to Lincoln," for about eight years, but has been "really working" on the biography for only two.

In Mrs. James opinion Anne Royall was "quite a person." "She was tried in Washington for being a 'common scold,' but her disposition apparently didn't deter any famous persons of that time from giving her interviews. Furthermore, she really got around. From 1832 to 1854, despite the fact traveling was tedious, she covered the country from Niagara Falls to Alabama.

Disciplining Child Not Easy If Done Right

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

EFFECTIVE discipline is not and should not be too easy. If a child is intelligent, and punished with some appeal to his reason, very little discipline should be necessary, even when he is small.

For tiny children, still unable to talk or to understand, the discipline, if it is necessary, should be as nearly as possible like nature's. If a child persists, for example, in doing dangerous things, such as reaching for knives or scissors, going too near the stove or fire, playing with matches, or leaning out of windows, a sharp and sudden slap every time he repeats the offense will soon teach him that these particular actions hurt.

Nature would hurt him far more were he allowed to persist in running risks, and the natural consequence might be fatal. The words "No, no," repeated each time the punishment is given, will eventually establish in the child's mind an association between the words and the pain, and before long only the words will be necessary.

Whipping, however, should only be used when the child is endangering his safety—not when he is being troublesome. If used too often it loses its effect.

If the child insists on annoying others, say by pulling books out of the bookcase, or emptying the wastepaper basket, or committing any of the minor destructive faults of babyhood, removal from the scene of action is probably the best cure. He can be put into another room, or fastened into his high chair for a while every time he proves himself a nuisance. No scolding is necessary. If the same penalty follows the offense every time he will soon draw the inevitable conclusion.

It requires wit and persistence on the part of the parent to punish reasonably, but it pays in the end.

New Styles Ideal for Modest Budgets

Tailored Suits Combine Economy, Smartness and Variety.

By Frances Mangum.

HOW TO DRESS smartly and economically too, is a problem facing nearly every woman. But it's a problem easily solved by this season's styles.

The tailored suits of simple, classic lines are ideal costumes for modest budgets. They offer a wide scope for variety and turn into two, three, even four costumes with extra skirts, blouses, and accessories.

Take, for instance, a navy blue jacket and skirt. That's the starting point. Add to this a flannel skirt of white, or ivory. That's outfit number two, and a stunning one for sports. Add another skirt of light blue crepe, or even crepe de chine, and there's outfit number three. An informal outfit with a touch of "dressiness."

Needless to say, the linen jacket and linen skirt in one dark solid color are perfect for town wear and hot midsummer traveling. Just how this can be varied may be easily seen by a change of accessories. With a white hat, white tailored blouse, white gloves, and white shoes there's one effect. Change to a canary yellow blouse and match this with hat and gloves and wear navy blue gabardine sandals, and there you are! Equally striking and modish for spring would be that suit with cherry red or flame accessories.

One designer who feels that fashion pitch may be set with black and white suggests an all-black linen suit, jacket double breasted and trimmed with white pearl buttons. A black hat with white band for traveling and for around town a white hat with black band. White gloves and either white or black linen or gabardine shoes.

It would be smart economy, she says, to begin with this foundation and build up with other skirts, blouses and accessories. And even smarter to add a little white linen, single-breasted jacket to combine with the black skirt.

Such costumes may be called upon to serve not double but triple service. They are splendid for the office—cool, comfortable, conservative and smart. They make excellent street costumes and, of course, have a degree of perfection for summer cocktail parties and bridges and luncheons. They're "right" for picnics and outings of almost every kind.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

The Gods Reserve Their Gifts of Happiness for Those Who Have the Audacity to Demand Only the Best and the Strength to Reject Second Best Offerings.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: It occurs to me after reading the letter from "Puzzled" in your column of March 9, in which she tells of her mad love for a man who will not be in a position to marry her for several years, that it may help her to know that I have been in practically her same position. In fact, I went through the same miserable experience when I was just 17.

Mary Haworth.

• • • •

And I wish to say to her: You are acting very wisely, Puzzled, in stopping at this point to think before you get involved more deeply. The only thing to do is to follow the advice of Mary Haworth and see no more of the man with whom you are madly in love, no matter how hard he may beg and plead, and even if your own heart may be broken for quite a while afterward—as mine was.

• • • •

I wish to say: Just smile gallantly and make a resolution to forget him completely. Several years later, when you fall just as deeply in love with a truly honorable man, you will be forever afterward thankful—as I am.

• • • •

DEAR EXPERIENCED: If "Puzzled" will draw upon her reserves of courage, common sense and endurance to live up to the advice which I have given and which you indorse, I am sure she will eventually enter into a greater happiness built on a finer love than any she has known to date. Somewhere long ago I read a line to the effect, "when the half gods go, the gods arrive." What "Puzzled" must realize, if she is to save herself from a lifetime of regret, is that the gods reserve their gifts of greatest happiness for those who have the audacity to demand only the best and the strength to reject any second-best offerings. M. H.

Woman Issues Call for Volunteer Street Cleaners.

DEAR MISS MARY HAWORTH: You are constantly being called upon to clear up people's lives. Won't you help me to clean up the streets of Washington? It can be done by the citizens, if the money is lacking for employes to do it. Probably you, who live here, do not notice the litter any more. But the dirty foreground spoils dignified buildings, beautiful vistas and what should be the serene and orderly quiet of the residential districts. Newspapers and broken milk and whisky bottles are the only flowers which grow under the trees.

• • • •

Utilize the Boy Scouts. Give them civic pride and the ideal to make their city the cleanest in the country. Children love to work for an ideal. Let as many Boy Scouts as necessary be assigned to each block. Have each boy choose a girl aid. Have the Scout masters superintend several blocks. Then divide the city into sections and ask the representative public spirited women to act as patronesses for each section, such patronesses to make a weekly inspection tour of their section to approve the results obtained.

• • • •

In the residential sections there are many vacant lots, some wooded and park-like, but all full of old papers, weeds and trash. No doubt the owners in most cases would be glad to give permission to the Boy Scouts to clear up the lots. Citizens would soon be shamed into taking care of their own sidewalks if they saw children clearing away trash.

Once a year there should be a parade of all the volunteer street cleaners. I am sure the President, as head of the Boy Scouts, would review the Scouts. Let their slogan be: "A clean city for our Chief." Prizes should be awarded each year for the best work done. I shall be glad to contribute $10 to start such a fund . . . Your sincerely, Movement Needs Indorsement of Civic-Minded Group.

DEAR M. G. G.: It occurs to me the District Federation of Women's Clubs might be willing to give ear to your sensible and detailed suggestions for inaugurating a much needed clean-up of Washington's streets, and to advise with you concerning what organizations, if not their own, might be the logical groups to push such a movement to successful conclusion. Why don't you telephone or write Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, 125 Baltimore avenue, Takoma Park, Md., telephone Shepherd 2434, and discuss your plan with her? As president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs Mrs. Biddle heads a group of women who exert a tremendous influence for good on the community life of this city; women who understand the mechanics of promoting city-wide undertakings which make for civic improvement, and women with a reputation for getting done those civic tasks they undertake to do. M. H.

Varied Recipes for Lent Entered in Post Contest

Six Prizes Awarded for Best Meat Substitute Dishes; Winners of Weekly Prizes Eligible for Grand Prizes at End of Series; Many Entries.

MANY NEW and interesting ways for varying Lenten menus are suggested in the hundreds of recipes submitted in The Post's contest on meat substitute dishes. This contest, held last week, was the first of a series of six weekly contests to continue until Easter.

Winners in the weekly contests will be eligible for the four grand prizes to be awarded at the end of the series. These prizes include an electric waffle set, an electric iron, an electrically heated casserole and an electric clock. The contest this week is on chocolate desserts.

Six $1 prizes for the best recipes for meat substitute dishes were given to the following:

Mrs. J. W. Dorsey Cooke, Shellfield-on-the-Potomac, Potomac Beach, Va., for Shellfield omelet. The recipe Mrs. Cooke submitted has been a favorite at Shellfield for 24 years and is especially recommended with hot biscuits and marmalade.

Mrs. Robert Callen King, 118 Madison street northwest, for stuffed eggplant.

Mrs. Dorothy P. Hulsizer, 3212 Newark street, for California chicken.

Mrs. Agnes E. Howard, 4851 Brandywine street northwest, for mushrooms and cheese.

Mrs. Robert Knowles, Prince Frederick, Md., for ring of plenty.

Mrs. M. A. Coleman, 2630 Adams Mill road, for cheese monkey, which she recommends to be served as a luncheon dish accompanied by a green salad and tart jelly.

The prize-winning recipes follow:

Shellfied Omelet.

6 eggs
1 teaspoon baking powder
1½ tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1 pint milk

Filling.

½ cup very sharp American cheese, chopped fine or
2 raw tomatoes, diced

To the baking powder and flour add enough milk to make a smooth paste. Add salt, pepper and yolks of eggs. Beat until eggs are well blended with the paste. Add remainder of milk and fold in the whites which have been beaten until light but not stiff.

Pour the mixture into a piping hot omelet pan or skillet that has been greased with one half teaspoon butter and one half teaspoon lard or substitute. (The butter makes the omelet a golden brown when folded over.) Bake in a very hot oven (475 degrees F.) about five minutes or until doubled in bulk and firm, but not brown on top. Remove from oven, sprinkle with cheese or the chopped tomato, fold over and turn into a warm platter. Garnish with parsley and serve at once. This recipe will serve five.

Stuffed Eggplant.

1 medium-sized eggplant
1 cup buttered bread crumbs
½ cup chopped English walnuts
2 tablespoons of fat
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 egg, well beaten
Salt and pepper

Boil the eggplant in a large amount of water for 15 minutes. Drain, cut in halves lengthwise and remove pulp, leaving a shell one-half inch thick. Cook onion in fat about three minutes, not browning. Add pulp and other ingredints except egg. When mixture is thoroughly heated remove from fire and add egg. Stuff the shells. Place in oiled pan and bake about one hour in moderate oven, 350 degrees Fahrenheit. Baste once or twice with a little melted butter.

California Chicken.

1 large can tuna fish
3 or 4 potatoes, sliced thin
3 or 4 stalks celery, chopped coarsely
Large bunch carrots, sliced thin
2 cups white sauce

Arrange layers of tuna fish, potatoes, celery and carrots in baking dish and pour over all the well seasoned white sauce. Cover with fine bread crumbs and bake in a moderate oven.

Mushrooms and Cheese.

Select medium sized mushrooms. Remove stems but do not peel. Turn upside down and fill bottoms with grated cheese (sharp). Sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs. Place in buttered pan and add a very little water. Bake in a hot oven (375 degrees F.) for about 20 minutes. Serve hot.

Ring of Plenty.

1½ cups cooked macaroni
1 cup diced cheese
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1 tablespoon minced parsley
3 tablespoon minced pimientoes
3 tablespoons melted butter or substitute.
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 cup scalded milk
1 egg, well beaten
1 tablespoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Cut macaroni into short pieces. Combine ingredients in order given. From bowl transfer to ring mold rubbed with fat. Place in pan of hot water. Bake in hot oven (375 degrees F.) until firm—about 45 minutes. Unmold on large plate. Serve hot.

Fill ring with creamed salmon or tuna fish to which has been added one-half cup sliced stuffed olives. Surround mold with vegetables, using a pretty color combination, such as carrots and peas, or green string beans and beets.

Cheese Monkey.

Take three slices of bread cut rather thickly and butter well. Cut in cubes and heap in casserole or individual casseroles. Sprinkle with sharp cheese (grated or thinly sliced) and season with a dash of salt and pepper. Beat one egg and fill cup with milk and pour over mixture. Bake for about 20 minutes in a moderate oven. This will blow up like a souffle and should be served immediately.

Time to Put 3 R's in Place, Educator Says

THE THREE R'S are not the fundamentals of an education and it is time they were put in their place. This opinion, which will probably shock old-time pedagogues, is advanced by Carleton Washburne, leader in progressive education and superintendent of schools in Winnetka, Ill.

"The real fundamentals of learning," says Mr. Washburne in the current issue of the Parents' Magazine, "include mental hygiene and the development of each child's special aptitudes and interests so that he may choose his vocation wisely, use his leisure wholesomely and make his own unique contribution to social progress.

Sense of Interdependence.

"They include laso the awakening in each child of a deep sense of his interdependence with his fellow man, a realization of his social responsibility in his family, his community, his country and in the world of common humanity."

The old school spent its whole time on the three R's. The new school recognizes that ways must be (and are being) found of teaching them so efficiently that they do not occupy a disproportionate share of the child's time. It demands that the three R's be simplified. Or, as Mr. Washburne puts it:

"Progressive education must find out which items are useful and must throw out those which are not; which items will actually be used by the great majority of children in their recreation, work, home and community.

Things People Don't Do.

"Most people don't use the ability to spell pthisis, to bound States, to extract square root, to name the Presidents in order, or the Kings of England, to solve a quadratic equation, to write prose composition in Latin, to prove geometrical theorems."

According to Mr. Washburne, the mind-training idea was long ago exploded. Logical reasoning in geometry does not carry over into politics; nor discipline in Latin carry over into discipline in morals. On the contrary, the habit of self-discipline is more readily acquired when one disciplines himself for a direct and known use. He continues:

"The newer approach to education is to make children see the function of each thing they learn—to help them feel the need for it. Unless children do things, make things, they will not feel a need for learning the three R's. This is why progressive schools are active places—even the desks are movable."

OYSTER RECIPES.

DOROTHEA DUNCAN'S four prize-winning recipes in the national contest sponsored by the Oyster Institute of North America are now available for Post readers in booklet form. These recipes—all original—include Torch Bearers, an oyster cocktail; Oyster Artesian, Oyster and Mushroom Barbecue and Oyster Fried Pies. Send a stamp to Miss Duncan, care of The Post, for one of these leaflets.

Stimulus to Jaded Spring Appetites

When you are contemplating salads to tempt spring appetites don't forget that old favorite made from cold potato cubes, diced beets, chopped pimiento, hard-cooked eggs and chives. If properly marinated and chilled and served on a bed of crisp lettuce with additional dressing it is a prime favorite and an excellent accompaniment for cold sliced meat loaf or broiled frankfurters and hot, buttered finger rolls.

Salad Days Come With Lenten Season

By Dorothea Duncan.

A VISIT to any restaurant these springlike days will convince you that appetites are ready for a change. Busy waitresses are pushing salads under eager noses by the hundreds.

Asparagus tip and hard cooked egg salad served on a bed of crisp lettuce with a garnish of red tomato slices and a smothering of mayonnaise, French or Russian dressing, is a popular balmy weather special. Balls of snowy cottage cheese flavored lightly with chopped chives or sliced stuffed olives served on beds of shredded lettuce or bright green cress is another favorite.

Fruit salads, too, come in for their share of popularity at this time of year. Citrus fruit combinations—orange and grapefruit segments—have been in demand all winter, but they are no longer being served on small dishes as an accompaniment to the meat course. Now, the salad lover wants his orange and grapefruit salad in large portions—not as a side dish, however, but as a main luncheon course.

Canned fruits, too, properly drained and chilled share their part of the popularity as salad ingredients, for there are few fresh fruits on the market so early in the season. Fresh, red, ripe strawberries scattered through a pleasing combination of well-chilled canned fruits makes an ideal luncheon salad for this time of year. Cooked salad dressing, French dressing or cream mayonnaise is especially attractive with the assortment of fruit combinations.

Fish, meat and eggs in salad form are replacing the hot versions of these three types of food that have been popular during the cold weather.

Flaked canned fish combined with crisp vegetables or even fruit makes attractive and palatable salads which serve as the main luncheon dish. Meat and chicken leftovers find popularity through the medium of salads rather than in hot dishes when the first touch of spring is in the air. Sliced hard cooked or deviled eggs served with cold vegetables and a smattering of salad dressing are more popular than any of the hot dish versions.

Before long you will see the first cold meats of the spring season accompanied by that prime favorite—potato salad. There is hardly a food to be mentioned, in fact, that won't be more popular today or within the next few weeks, if served for luncheon in the form of a crisp salad.

Is your salad calendar ready for the meals ahead? If not, you will appreciate these attractive recipes, for as soon as the weather man says fair and warmer you can rest assured that salads will be the most popular of all main luncheon dishes.

Apple and Tuna Fish Salad.

2 apples, pared and diced
2 cups tuna fish, flaked
Juice of ½ lemon
½ cup celery, diced
¾ cup mayonnaise

Sprinkle apples with lemon juice. Add tuna fish and celery, then mayonnaise. Toss together lightly. Arrange on crisp lettuce. Garnish with additional mayonnaise and strips of green pepper. Serves 8.

For a balmy day in March try this salad as a main luncheon dish. Hot bran muffins with currant jelly and tea with lemon slices make ideal accompaniments. Serve creamy rice pudding for dessert.

Bolivia Potato Salad.

2 cups cold boiled potatoes, cut in ½-inch cubes
2 tablespoons pimiento, chopped
½ tablespoon onion or chives, finely chopped
3 hard cooked eggs, chopped
½ cup cold beet cubes (size of potato cubes)
5 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 tablespoon vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of white pepper

Rub bowl in which salad is to be mixed with cut-side of clove of garlic, if desired. Add potatoes, pimientos, onion and eggs. Combine 1 tablespoon mayonnaise with vinegar, salt and pepper and add to potato mixture. Toss together lightly and chill 1 hour or longer. Add remaining mayonnaise and beets and blend. Beets may be added with potatoes, but the color of the beets may give the potatoes a pinkish color during the marinating. Arrange in crisp lettuce cups and sprinkle with chopped chives. Serves 6 or 7.

Accompaniments to enhance the above salad are toasted, buttered finger rolls, broiled frankfurters, milk, strawberries and cream.

Attractive vegetable salad combination are chilled cooked string beans and new peas, diced cucumber and minced onion; marinated and chilled and served on beds of crisp lettuce with more French dressing, if preferred—or flowerets of cooked cauliflower, marinated, and served on crisp escarole with the following dressing:

Lorenzo Dressing.

½ cup French dressing
1 tablespoon chili sauce
2 tablespoons water cress, chopped
1 tablespoon Worchestershire sauce.

Combine ingredients and blend. Chill. Mix well before using. Makes ½ cup dressing.

Favorite fruit salads include large cooked and seeded prunes stuffed with a mixture of mayonnaise, whipped cream and cream cheese and chopped sweetened moist coconut, served on crisp escarole with additional mayonnaise and chilled pear halves stuffed with cream cheese and chopped walnut meats served on crisp water cress with raspberry mayonnaise.

Raspberry Mayonnaise.

2 tablespoons raspberry jam or jelly
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Dash of salt
¼ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup cream, whipped.

Break up raspberry jam or jelly with silver fork. Add lemon juice, salt and mayonnaise. Fold into whipped cream. Makes ¾ cup mayonnaise.

Your Favorite Dessert May Win Post Prize

Have you a chocolate dessert that your family always hails with delight? If so, you may be able to win one of the six $1 prizes offered in The Post's recipe contest for this week.

You also may have a chance to win one of the four beautiful grand prizes to be given at the end of The Post's series of six weekly recipe contests. These prizes include an electric waffle set, an electric iron, an electrically heated casserole and an electric clock. The final winners in the contest will be selected from among the winners of the weekly contest.

Entries for this week's contest on chocolate desserts should be mailed to reach Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor of The Post, not later than Saturday morning.

The Thyroid Gland.

THE thyroid gland has probably received more attention and its products have been studied longer than any of the other internal secretions. It consists of two lobes, one on each side of the neck below the larynx (voice box). For centuries the peculiar looking child born without a thyroid gland has been regarded as one of nature's mistakes. Through some fault in the development of the embryo, thyroid tissue fails to grow and as a result the child presents the typical squat, diminutive figure, expressionless face, thick lips, and thick, coarse hair of the cretin. It was not until relatively recent times that it was found that improvement could be brought about in some of these children through the feeding of thyroid substance.

More recently still it was shown that the rate of metabolism (the use of oxygen by the body) is a fairly accurate index of the activity of the thyroid, 15 or more per cent over normal indicating excess production of this secretion, and the same percentage below normal showing an insufficient amount. It is necessary in many cases to remove a large portion of the gland when it begins to elaborate its products in such amounts as to become poisonous to the body.

Modern surgery has greatly reduced the hazard of thyroid removal, particularly if small doses of iodine are administered for a few days preceding the operation. We must understand that the giving of iodine does not cure the condition, although the patient improves.

The tiny glands which lie adjacent to the thyroid, called the parathyroids, govern calcium metabolism. If these glands are not working up to standard, calcium will need to be administered regularly and in large quantities. If the parathyroids are overactive, minerals are drawn out of the bones with resulting formation of cysts (spaces which weaken the structure of the skeleton). Lime from the bones is transported to parts of the body where it does not belong and may be deposited in the kidneys, the bladder, etc., with great damage to these organs.

The thymus gland, also in the lower portion of the neck, is present in children and has much to do with the rate of development. Some years ago it was quite common to make a diagnosis of a greatly enlarged thymus gland and to attribute many cases of sudden death to this condition. We do not know all that we should about this gland, and while it is thought not to be as dangerous as formerly supposed, it does play an important part in growth and its function should not be destroyed through the use of X-ray without good cause.

If the pancreas fail to behave properly, diabetes may ensue. This is the gland that supplies natural insulin to the body, which in turn maintains sugar in the blood at the proper level. There is probably a close relationship between the pancreas, the liver and the muscles. At any rate, we now have in insulin, extracted from the pancreas of animals, a means of combating diabetes.

Emergency Supply Of Jelly Suggested

New Recipe for Pineapple Sweet Is Afforded.

"And when she got there the cupboard was bare——" It must have been in March, April or May that old Mother Hubbard visited her cupboard. Otherwise there would have been some jelly or preserves on the shelf.

Around this season our preserve shelves look bare—no matter how heavily they were stocked for cold weather. Why not prepare an emergency supply of pineapple jelly? Wholesome Hawaiian pineapple juice may be purchased in cans and with a little fruit pectin and some sugar, a good supply of delicious jelly may be made up.

Here is a recipe that many women will be glad to use during the next few months:

Pineapple Jelly.

3 cups canned Hawaiian pineapple juice
6½ cups (2¾ lbs.) sugar
1 bottle fruit pectin

Measure juice and sugar into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once. Makes about 9 8-ounce glasses.

'Continental' Breakfasts Include Beer and Caviar

Tastes Vary Greatly in Different Countries; Germans, Russians Heaviest Eaters; Spanish, French the Lightest; English Need 'Fortifying' Meal.

The author of the following article has returned from a two and a half year visit in Europe, where she kept house in several countries.

By Roberta Beer.

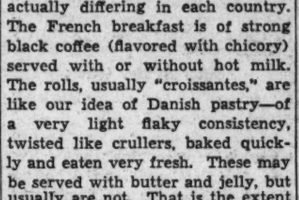
BREAKFAST is an important event in the day for everyone. If you don't believe it, note the difference in your temper after cold coffee and burnt toast. Everyone feels very possessive and insistent about his or her own breakfast tastes. It is easy enough to see it is an individual matter, because breakfasts differ more from family to family and country to country than any other meal.

The American first meal may include anything from pancakes to scrambled eggs, with or without fruit and cereals, coffee, milk or cocoa. There are favorite jams, muffins, French toast, waffles and vegetable and fruit juices—in fact, it seems an endless array. And yet, if we glance at the breakfast menus in other countries, we can see a still wider range of choices, even though some of them will seem very unorthodox to us.

The "continental" breakfast that has achieved quite a name for itself is really a composite menu, actually differing in each country. The French breakfast is of strong black coffee (flavored with chicory) served with or without hot milk. The rolls, usually "croissantes," are like our idea of Danish pastry—of a very light flaky consistency, twisted like crullers, baked quickly and eaten very fresh. These may be served with butter and jelly, but usually are not. That is the extent of the meal, but when both coffee and rolls are fresh, the effect is a pleasant one.

In Germany, a similar fare is served for the first breakfast. (Yes, the hearty Germans have two distinct meals in the morning.) In this case the rolls are of our hard-crusted bread variety, but always freshly baked as in France. The coffee is not usually of as good a quality, however, so a boiled egg and jam are added.

In case the second breakfast is eliminated, as with simple country people, the first meal is augmented with cheeses and a variety of sliced "wursts" or bolognas. But the urban custom is to partake of a second morning meal, and this offers a wide variety indeed. There are little rolls of pickled herring called "Rollmops," herring salad, Swiss, Camembert and sour peasant cheeses and even hot "white sausages," kraut and salami. All these morsels are eaten with buttered "black" and rye bread and usually beer. One shudders to think of a single person consuming all this, but the Germans are very serious about their food.



The popular Russian breakfast is not unlike the later German meal. There are fresh "black" and rye breads, bits of smoked salmon and pickled fish, a fine array of cheeses and large glasses of steaming tea, served with lemon and sugar. Also there are large bowls of caviar, so common in North Russia, but expensive on west European and American tables.

Among our English cousins we would partake of oatmeal porridge, followed by hot sausages or bacon and eggs, boiled haddock or herring with 3-minute eggs, and Indian tea with dry toast and orange marmalade. We would eat about half as much as the English cousin, who must fortify himself against raw fogs and an underheated house and office.

Finally, although a breakfast in an outdoor cafe in sunny Spain appeals to our romantic side, the fare will seem very inadequate to us. The black coffee is served half and half with hot goat's milk and with sweetish soft bread rolls. These are crumbled or dipped into the beverage and eaten as a sort of sop. Although Spanish fruit is delicious and inexpensive it is not, usually served with the breakfast. The most that can be said for the Spanish taste is that where the climate is so warm and sunny the early meal is light and treated with indifference. And this is fortunate, because even at its best this soft, soupy breakfast is tasteless.

New Russian Design.

Lenten Menu Again Brings Eggs to Fore

Wise Housewife Will Use Them Frequently; Here Are Ways to Cook.

THE ARRIVAL of Lent and the approach of Easter bings the egg into prominence again on the daily menu. Eggs are of good quality now and becoming increasingly abundant and the wise housewife will use them as much as possible in her cookery.

Eggs are among the most important protein foods and supply valuable elements to the diet. But a large part of their value depends on whether they are cooked properly. Eggs, like most other protein foods, are hardened if cooked in too high a temperature, the Bureau of Home Economics in a recent bulletin on egg cookery points out. Here are some of its suggestions for cooking eggs:

"If you beat white of egg to a foam and gently fold into the egg a white sauce made of fat, flour and milk, with the yolk of the egg to enrich it, and something to give it flavor, you are making a souffle. You bake it slowly in an oven with low heat. A fluffy omelet is made in the same way, but cooked in a frying pan. A meringue or a fruit whip follows the same principle—that is, cook with low heat and just long enough to be tender and not 'fall.' When someone tells you she can't make a meringue that isn't leathery or watery or scorched on top, you can be quite sure she has cooked it at too high a temperature, probably in the broiler oven instead of the upper oven.

To poach an egg you drop it into boiling water. It cools the water instantly, to a little below boiling and you keep it at that temperature. The outside of the egg has been coagulated by the sudden heat while the inside cooks more slowly. A little salt, or vinegar, or both, in the water, helps to keep the egg whole.

Cooking eggs in the shell takes more time than poaching, because the shell is a poor heat-conductor and the heat cannot penetrate the egg itself so readily. But again, you don't let the water boil after you put in the egg. You hold it at simmering temperature for the time that experience has shown will result in a soft, medium, or hard-cooked egg. When you fry eggs, you break them into a pan containing a little fat just moderately hot. Keep the heat low, so the eggs will be tender, and have no little frills of albumen around the edge. If you like the tops coated with the white albumen, cover the egg while it is cooking. Some cooks add about a teaspoonful of water and then cover the pan so that the steam will cook the top of the egg. This gives a more tender and delicate result than turning the egg over, and there is less chance of an accident to the yolk.

Similarly, a "boiled" custard is never actually boiled, but kept at low even heat in a double boiler over water that is not boiling hot, stirred gently throughout the cooking to give it a thick, smooth, creamy consistency. As baked custard cannot be stirred, it is set in a pan of water and cooked at low oven temperature until it is delicately firm. Overcooking makes a baked custard watery.

Yodelers at Home On Florida Sands

Palm Beach, Fla., March 10 (AP).—If you have a spare yodel, you can use it in Palm Beach atop a white sand dune looking over the blue Gulf Stream.

Lack of mountains and snow have in no way cramped Tyrolean styles strongly influencing women's spring wear here.

Gay red and blue checked blouses, full peasant skirts of white linen decorated with embroidery and edged with sawtooth flannel matching the blouses, and white felt alpine hats with heart-shaped crown banded in blue all suggest the land of the Edelweiss and Alpenstock.

On the beach it's the same. Laced and embroidered shorts are worn with alpine-fashioned sun hats.

Washington Bible Shown at Museum

Powder Horn and River Stone Also Exhibited.

Baltimore, March 7 (AP).—George Washington's Bible and powder horn have been placed on exhibit in the Peale museum here, together with a stone upon which he is said to have stepped as he entered his boat for the famous crossing of the Delaware.

The museum, which also displays an apron said to have been worn by Martha Washington, received the additional relics as a permanent loan from the Maryland chapter of the American Revolution.

Anything, Nothing: Either Can Adorn Spring's Headgear

New York, (AP).—You can have anything or nothing on your new spring hat. It may be a mannish Homburg, completely unadorned, or it may be laden with flowers, fruits, even vegetables.

One actually sees a cluster of artificial bananas on a new yellow hat, and a few carrots find a place on a large tan sailor.

It may be years and it may be forever before women have another chance to wear orchids, tiger lillies and violets in such profusion on their headgear. A spring hat with real charm is the "Margot Bonnet," which has a point like a widow's peak on the forehead, and is often outlined with narrow white ruching.

Expert Tests Prize Oyster Recipe

Simple, Tailored House Gown Necessity for Modern Woman

It's No Longer the Thing for Housewife to Wear Negligee About the House, But She Must Be Prepared to Receive at All Times.

PARIS.—The modern woman goes at such a pace that she must be prepared to be presentable at all hours of the day or night. Twenty-five years ago it was all right for a woman to languish about the house in a frothy, feminine negligee which was bedecked with flowers, embroidery and other ornamentation. That is changed today, and the modern woman wears a house gown that is simply tailored and is appropriate for receiving guests.

The charm of these garments depends upon beauty of material rather than any elaborate sort of style. Uncrushable velvets, untarnishable lames, rich satins or heavily ribbed ottoman silk are the favorite fabrics and the house gowns are usually cut on a similar pattern with loose, comfortable flowing sleeves, a long graceful skirt and front opening caught together by round buttons covered with the same material, or a surplice or side fastening.

Similarly, negligees have become more and more simplied. The favored robe is in satin or Chinese silk, all in one tone or in a flowered design. If pastel shades are used, very lovely effects can be had in the combination of two different colors or the combination of two tones of the same color. These robes are tailored with the lining extending over the outside to form revers and deep cuffs.

Jade Buttons Shown.

Paris (AP).—Large carved jade and coral buttons with matching belt clasps are used to ornament new Paris day dresses. They create bright spots of Chinese color especially effective on black frocks.

Black Trims White.

Polka Dots Return.

Paris (AP).—Polka dot silks flourish again in spring fashions. They appear in taffeta afternoon suits, in blouses, and in crepe ensembles for hot weather wear.

Sending of First Phone Message Observed Here

Thirty-Five-Year Employes Club Marks Sixtieth Anniversary.

To commemorate the sixtieth anniversary of the first telephone message—Alexander Graham Bell's words to his assistant, "Mr. Watson, come here. I want you."—the Thirty-Five-Year Employes of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company held their second annual luncheon at the Hotel Washington yesterday.

Lloyd B. Wilson, president of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, spoke on "The Spirit of '36". Taking as his text the phrase "neither storm nor flood nor fire nor any other emergency shall stay the words of men," Mr. Wilson mentioned the opportunity the thirty-five-year employes have of setting an example to younger men now starting in the industry.

Frank E. Bullock, general buildings and supplies superintendent of the company, and Paul G. Burton, former general plant manager, gave reminiscences of early telephone days. Information Director Edwin F. Hill, who presided, traced the development of telephone communication in a chronological presentation of "Great Moments in Telephone History."

Present were Walter P. Blamire, Frank E. Bullock, Joel H. Carpenter, Thomas B. Clarkson, Horace M. Craven, Bessie M. Glass, Hanse Hamilton, Edwin F. Hill, J. Russell Y. Savage, Harold B. Stabler, Lloyd B. Wilson, Herbert G. Woodford, Paul G. Burton, Lida Q. Godfrey, John H. Miller, Bessie M. Smith.

Study of World's Eating Habits Reveals Vitamin, Mineral Lack

Health Committee of League of Nations Reports Diet Deficient; Skimmed and Separated Milk Not Properly Appreciated, Is Belief.

DESPITE the widespread concern with diet, peoples of the world are not eating the food they ought to eat. A study of the world's eating habits, made by the health committee of the League of Nations, shows that the average diet is deficient in mineral and vitamin bearing foods.

The report which was made public by Dr. Mary Swartz Rose, of Columbia University, a member of the committee, shows that both in the United States and Europe skimmed and separated milk are not properly appreciated, and too much sugar and flour are consumed. In the place of sugar and white flour, the nutrition experts urge greater consumption of potatoes.

In almost every country studied insufficient protective or vitamin bearing foods were consumed. Some of the protective foods recommended by the committee for wider use are milk and milk products, eggs, green leaf vegetables, fruit, fat, fish, meat and cod liver oil.

Whatever the age of a person milk should form an important part of his or her diet, according to the nutritionists. Consumption of as much as a quart a day is advocated. Greater use of skimmed and spearated milk is advocated, for "although deprived of Vitamin A through removal of the fat, such milk retains the protein, the B and C vitamins, the calcium and other mineral elements." The committee deplores the wide wastage in many countries of this valuable food.

For the pregnant or nursing mother the nutritionists outline a diet to yield approximately 1,400 calories of protective foods—milk and milk products, eggs, green vegetables, fruit, meat and fish. Cereals, fats, sugars and other foods that are sources of energy may be added. The pregnant or nursing mother with household duties should consume a total of about 3,400 calories a day. Other adults may use this diet with modifications.

Lettuce Seed Icing Aids Germination

Planting in Cool of Evening Also Is Recommended.

Most women, and many men as well, know that lettuce placed in cold water or wrapped in a cloth and placed on ice before if is prepared for serving, tends to be more crisp and tender.

But how many realize that lettuce seeds will also react to icy moisture? Scientists advise gardeners, particularly those in warmer sections, to store lettuce seed in a moist state on ice for a few days if they desire speedier germination. Before planting, dry sufficiently so that handling is easy.

They also recommend the planting of the seed in the cool of the evening with the temperature somewhere around the 60 to 65 degree mark—the temperature best suited for the germination of moist varieties of lettuce seed.

Widow of Folger Leaves Bulk Of 2-Million Estate to Library

The will of the late Emily C. J. Folger, filed for probate yesterday at Mineola, Long Island., leaves the bulk of her $2,000,000 estate to the Folger Shakespeare Library here, the Associated Press reported last night.

Mrs. Folger died February 21 at Glen Cove, Long Island.

The Shakespeare Library, an imposing structureon Capitol Hill, was bequeathed to the Nation by her husband, the late Henry C. Folger, one-time president of the Standard Oil Co.

The library houses the $4,000,000 Shakespearean collection which Folger spent a life-time in assembling. Before his death, he set up a $10,000,000 fund for its maintenance.

Mrs. Folger shared her husband's enthusiasm for the work of Shakespeare and her action in swelling the endowment for the library was not surprising.

The Folger collection of Shakespeareana is the most prized in America. The library cotnains 93,739 books, 37,257 manuscripts and 217 oil paintings.

Its valuts contain 18,000 precious folios and manuscripts, gathered by Folger or his agents in all parts of the world.

Typical of Folger's passion for Shakespearean material was an incident in 1904. A New York newspaper printed a story about an obscure Swede who had in his possession an editor of "Titus Andronicus" published in 1594. Folger saw the item and went into action. He cabled his London agent and the latter soon was crossing the North Sea with $10,000 in cash in his pocket. Other dealers were on the scene with similar offers, but Folger's agent had the cash and "Titus Andronicus" came to America.

Other treasures purchased by him were the Halliwell-Phillips collection in Warwick Castle. These included quarts of Romeo and Juliet, 1559; the Merchant of Venice, 1600, and the manuscript of both parts of Henry IV.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Ida May Henderson, of Potomac, Md., and Mrs. F. R. Waterholter, of Takoma Park, Md., and three sons, A. W. Cowell, of Silver Spring, Md.; John C. Cowell, of Four Corners, Md., and S. C. Cowell, of Los Angeles, Calif.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2:30 p. m., at the home of John Cowell at Four Corners. Dr. Ralph D. Smith, pastor of the Woodside Methodist Episcopal Church, will officiate.

Relief Tax Upheld By Welfare Board

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., March 10.—Members of the Prince Georges County legislative delegation today were urged by the county welfare board to work for passage of tax legislation which will continue in effect the present relief setup.

In telegrams addressed to State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer and the six members of the House, the following message was sent the legislators:

"The Prince Georges County Welfare Board wishes to urge that the members of the delegation use every effort to pass legislation that will continue by some form of taxation the relief program now in force."

The telegrams were signed by Mrs. J. Enos Ray, chairman of the board, and Capt. Vinton D. Cookey, vice chairman.

Campbell, Last Of City's 1865 Defenders, Dies

Vteran of Stand Against Gen. Early Succumbs to Pneumonia.

Maj. Edward R. Campbell, the last known survivor of h Uietnon cmf known survivor of the Union Army that turned Conferedate invaders away from Washington, died last night of pneumonia in Mount Alto Hospital.

He was 92 years old and until the brief illness that caused his death, had been in excellent health.

As recently as last July, Maj. Campbell took part in ceremonies observing the seventy-first anniversary of the Battle of Fort Stevens conducted on the grass-covered remnants of the fort in Brightwood.

Maj. Campbell was a member of the Sixth Army Corps that was rushed up from City Point to the Capital to meet 18,000 Confederate soldiers under Gen. Jubal Early, fresh from a victory at Monocacy and destined, it seemed to its terrified residents, to capture the Union Capital.

Memory Clear.

Maj. Campbell's recollections of those stirring days were unusually clear for one of his age. Here is how he once recounted details of the Capital's saving for a reporter:

"We arrived in Washington on the morning of the twelfth (August 12, 1864). President Lincoln was there to meet us. He shook our hands. The population was certainly glad to see us.

"When we reached the place where New Hampshire avenue now crosses Georgia avenue, we heard the firing of musketry and were ordered to the fighting double quick."

Maj. Campbell was among those deployed as skirmishers near the fort. But he saw Lincoln mount the ramparts in the enemy fire and heard Gen. H. G. Wright, commander of the fort, order the commander-in-chief of Army to come down and take a position less vulnerable.

Was Unwounded.

Maj. Campbell fought throughout the war's four years without being wounded. He saw action at Getysburg and in dozens of other campaigns and battles. He enlisted from Vermont, where he was born at Londonderry in 1844, with Company G of the First Vermont Volunteers.

Relatives of Maj. Campbell last night were making arrangements for him to join his comrades; the 40 Union soldiers who died in defense of the fort and who were buried where they fell. The spot has since become kown as the Battleground National Cemetery and it is here that Maj. Campbell will be buried.

It was over this same hallowed ground that Maj. Campbell walked in the unsteadiness of advanced age last July and where he walked many times before when citizens of the Capital found occasion to venerate the place and its dead. A boulder bearing a bronze plaque occupies a place on the rampart, marking the spot where Maj. Campbell saw the war President standing.

Maj. Campbell lived with members of his family at 30 Elm avenue in Takoma Park, Md. He fell sick there on Washington's Birthday.

Surviving are his daughter, Mrs. A. B. Goorich; a granddaughter, Mrs. Marion G. Nevitt, and two great grandchildren, Robert and Jack Nevitt. All live at the Takoma Park address.

Retired in 1915.

Following the war, Maj. Campbell returned to Vermont and entered business. After a few years he returned to the Capital and took a position with the Pension Office, retiring in 1915 after a service of 43 years.

It was while employed at the Pension Office that Maj. Campbell met for the first time since the successful defense of the fort the boy who so won the soldier's admiration that he shared with him his blankets and rations.

The boy, later identified as Ed Byrne, was driven from his home in Silver Spring by the Confederates. The enforced evacuation so enraged him that he salvaged a rifle, crossed into the Union lines and sniped at the Grey from behind trees.

Campbell and Byrne met next as employes in the Pension Office in 1882.

Maj. Campbell came by his title as major of the Fourth Battalion of the District National Guard. As a Union soldier he served as private.

He was past commander in chief of the Sons of Veterans, a member of the G. A. R., a thirty-second degree Mason and a Shriner.

Wilson High Is Dedicated Before 1,500

America's great peace crusader, Woodrow Wilson, was extolled last night as 1,500 persons attended the dedicatory exercises of the new high school named in his memory.

The program, in which several notables participated, was held in the vast auditorium of the $1,000,000 school, built on the site of old Fort Reno, on the highest ground in the District, at Nebraska avenue and Chesapeake street northwest.

District educators and officials figured in the dedicatory ceremonies, followed by a program devoted to the memory of the war-time President and marked by reminiscent speeches by men who knew him well.

A martial touch was added to the occasion through the playing of patriotic airs by the Government Printing Office Post, American Legion, band and the presence of cadet ushers resplendent in blue uniforms.

Wilson Anecdotes Told.

Several eulogies of the former President were punctuated with anecdotes of his private life. Wilsonian gifts presented to the school included his portrait and a collection of his books.

Thompson, former Federal Trade Commission chairman and a student and football player at Princeton when Woodrow Wilson was president of the institution, lauded his departed "chief" as "a fighter" who would not sacrifice his principles.

Wilson's immense popularity with Princeton students, Thompson said, was attributable to his "brilliant mind, his marvelous imagination, his rare oratorical gifts, his kindness and his spiritual strength."

Laughter ran through the audience as Dr. Dabney described the school-boy Wilson as an orator who could make speeches "far and away better than those of members of Congress."

Dr. Dabney praised Wilson on his sense of humor, his intellectual qualities and his strength of character. He declared the former President was temperate in his habits.

Gift From D. C. Alumni.

Wilson's works were tendered by La Roe in behalf of the Princeton University Alumni, District chapter.

Mrs. Wilson, the former President's widow, was in Florida and unable to attend.

"The life of Woodrow Wilson," he said, "exemplifies the individual possibilities of a capable and purposeful man under the political, economic, social, religious and cultural institutions of the United States of America."

While Dr. Ballou made no direct mention of the controversy over the teaching of Communism in the schools, he did say:

"Neither ignorance nor visionary schemes nor suppression of truth will ever bring order out of the present chaos; only intelligence and high purpose among our citizens can.

"We must never permit ourselves to forget that what we want the citizens of the next generation to know or to be able to do or to be must be provided for in the current educational program."

Hazen Presents School.

Commissioner Hazen expressed his gratification over construction of the school and pointed to the strides made in education since his youth when he attended a one-story frame school in rural Virginia.

"It gives me great pleasure," he said, "to present this temple of education to the school board."

The audience applauded as Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Board of Education president and presiding officer, responded:

"I accept it and in doing so I wish to thank the members of Congress and school officials for their splendid services to the District."

Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, engineer commissioner, told of consrtuction of the building in time for the beginning of the school semester last fall. He described its facilities, including 47 class rooms, a gymnasium, a library and numerous laboratories.

Norman J. Nelson, school principal, and Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the Women's Club of Chevy Chase, also spoke.

U. S. Agents' Chief Aid To Speak at McKinley

Inspector W. H. Drane Lester, chief assistant to J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation, will address the McKinley High School forum on "Crime Prevention" tonight at 7:30 in the school auditorium.

The lecture will be the fourth in a series presented at the school during the winter.

Revamped Bill On Lunacy Unit Offered House

Norton Measure Provides For Nine-Man Board in Sanity Tests.

A revised District lunacy commission bill was introduced in the House yesterday by Chairman Norton of the House District Committee upon request of the District Commissioners.

While entirely rewritten for the sake of clarification, the bill differs in only one major respect from the measure submitted but not acted upon last year.

Whereas the old bill set up a commission of three psychiatrists and a lawyer, the new proposal provides for a commission of nine members, eight of whom shall be physicians and one a lawyer.

Only two of the physicians shall serve at the same time, however, and only for a three-month period. They will then be succeeded by two other physicians previously named. The doctors will each be paid $750 for their services and are specifically permitted to continue their private practices.

The lawyer shall be paid $5000 a year and must devote his entire working time to the job.

The physicians, who are to be appointed by the justices of the District Supreme Court, must have been residents of the District for three years and have had not less than five years' experience in the diagnosis and treatment of mental diseases.

Mrs. Norton became actively interested in the lunacy commission bill after a visit to the court last week to witness the trial of lunacy cases of juries, a method the Commissioners have sought to eliminate for several years.

Slash in D. C. Appropriations Assailed by Citizens' Groups

Reduced Funds, Leaders Assert, Will Deprive City of Needed Health Facilities and Fire Fighting Equipment.

Citizens associations meeting in several different parts of the city last night assailed the slash in the Federal appropriation to the District. The reduced contribution, they say, will deprive them of needed health and fire-fighting facilities.

The Burleith Citizens' Asssociation, meeting at Gordon Junior High School, considered that the Federal Government should contribute an amounte commensurate with ernment's property here. bui r t the taxable value of the Government's property here.

They adopted a resolution requesting that the Federal contribution be restored to at least the figure set by the Budget Bureau.

A bill for compulsory inspection of motor vehicles in the District was endorsed by the association. The group requested the Board of Education to construct an assembly hall and gymnasium for the Fillmore School and also asked for a permanent playground in the section.

Willard A. Driggers spoke on the advantage of constructing a proposed airport near Benning. The matter was referred to committee.

The Randle Highlands Citizens' Association, meeting at 2407 Minnesota avenue southeast, opposed the slash in the Federal contribution and appointed A. W. Lee to appear before the Senate Sub-committee in an attempt to secure additional fire apparatus for this section. The present apparatus, they claimed, proved inefficient at a recent fire.

The group asked that no more licenses be granted to District liquor stores and announced themselves against the legalizing of racing in the District. Forty-one new members were admitted.

Stating that "health and schools are closely allied to the development of our youth," the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Associatoin, meeting at St. Alban's Church parish hall, adopted a resolution urging the Senate sub-committee to restore the amount asked by the Budget Bureau for health and education.

Beatrice M. Clephane, director of the Legal Aid Society and president of the District Women's Bar Association, addressed the meeting on work done last year by the Legal Aid Society. She said that most divorce cases in which the society has given assistance ended in amicable settlement.

The Northeast Boundary Citizens Association, which met at Burrville School last night, decided to ask the Senate sub-committee for an increase in the public health allotment. Residents, they said, are miles fro many hospital.

Funds also were requested for a public library and for flood control of Watts Run, a creek in the neighborhood. The association opposed any change in the present zoning law, and also went on record as favoring the location of a proposed airport at Benning, D. C.

Tuberculosis Survey Indicates Grim Humor of Blanton Stand

With public health items sharply reduced in the 1937 District supply bill that has passed the House, the campaign for adequate appropriations now veers to the Senate. The Washington Post desires that this city have the best public health conveniences in the Nation. This is one of a series of articles designed to show Congress the District's health needs.

By Gerald G. Gross.

Preliminary plans announced yesterday for the annual early diagnosis campaign of the District Tuberculosis Association, and Health Officer George C. Ruhland's opening report on the Health Department's recent fact-finding survey, lend a grimly humorous slant to the following exchange of words between Representative Thomas L. Blanton and Dr. J. W. Peabody.

In the course of the House subcommittee hearings on the 1937 appropriations bill, Chairman Blanton quizzed the superintendent of Upshur Street Tuberculosis Hospital on the number of afflicted Washingtonians waiting for hospital accommodations.

Blanton—"A 'long waiting list' is too general; how many?"

Dr. Peabody —"I cannot tell you how many, sir."

Pertinent Information.

Blanton—"Do you not think that is a very pertinent piece of information, with which you should be definitely familiar? There is a big 'hullabaloo' raised by Dr. Ruhland and his medical society here—and I use that word because no other word would express it properly—about the President and his budget having been inhumane and cruel in closing up the 227-bed Upshur Street Hospital January 1, when we then occupy the new 396-bed hospital at Glenn Dale.

"If there are only 227 patients in the Upshur Street Hospital now, and if you are going to have 396 beds available in Glenn Dale on the first of January, it is very pertinent to ask you where you are going to get other patients?"

Dr. Peabody—"I think they can be found. I think they will be found."

And now, reporting on the case-finding campaign financed by a WPA allotment, Dr. Ruhland reports that approximately half of the 800 persons found to be active or potential tuberculosis cases are in need of hospital care.

They cannot be hospitalized, because the city has no beds for them. The financially independent minority cannot enter private hospitals here at their own expense, because only municipal institutions accept tuberculosis cases.

Appraising Situation.

To make matters worse, in this manner of appraising the situation, many more new cases are expected to be discovered when the Tuberculosis association opens its annual case-finding campaign the latter part of this month.

The drive will be inaugurated with a meeting, it was learned yesterday, at which one of the principal speakers will be Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, chairman of the House District Committee. Mrs. Norton has ardently championed the Capital's campaign for adequate public health and hospital appropriations.

The 1935 "E. D. C." as the drive is popularly known, was launched with a "pep talk" by Mrs. Roosevelt. Association members were addressed also by Dr. Francis Trudeau, chest specialist, whose father established the first tuberculosis sanatorium in the United States.

Canadian House Ratifies Treaty

Ottawa, Ont., March 10 (U.P.).—The United States-Canadian reciprocal trade agreement was ratified in principle by the House of Commons tonight by the overwhelming vote of 175 to 39.

Thirty-nine conservative members stood alone against the agreement. They were forced by the government side to submit to a recorded vote.

Announcement of the result was followed by a long demonstration from the Liberal benches.

The vote was called tonight after debate extending over two weeks on a resolution asking the house to sanction the treaty. Now that the basic resolution has been adopted, a bill will be introduced and in the course of its discussion details of the agreement will be examined.

Travelers Aid Society To Hold Meeting Today

The Travelers Aid Society will hold its annual meeting at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Y. W. C. A. Building, Seventeenth and K streets northwest. Two hundred persons are expected to attend.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of the Supreme Court Justice, will preside, and the principal speaker will be Dr. Esther Loring Richards, psychiatrist of Johns Hopkins. She will talk about "Youth in Motion."

Rain Is Predicted Here Today, Storms on Coast

Rain in Washington today was predicted by the Weather Bureau last night when it issued a warning that a storm of considerable intensity was southeast of Wilmington, N. C., and moving slowly northeastward.

Senate Group Plans Hearing On Funds Bill

District Measure Likely to Be Taken Up Next Wednesday.

Public Invited, Thomas Says; Lump Sum Increase Seen.

Hearings on the District supply bill before the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations probably will begin next Wednesday, Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the sub-committee, stated yesterday.

Senator Thomas conferred with the District Commissioners before fixing a tentative date. He learned that Commissioner George E. Allen will be out of the city this week and Senator Thomas will be away next Tuesday.

The sub-committee will hear spokesmen for the District Medical Society or any civic organizations who wish to make pleas for larger public health and welfare appropriations, Senator Thomas said.

Washingtonians Welcome.

"The people of Washington know they are always welcome before our sub-committee," he said.

Predicting that "a good bill" will be reported to the Senate, Senator Thomas said he intended to sit as juryman and listen to the arguments of the Commissioners and Washington residents for adjustments.

"We will take the House bill as a basis," he explained. "If the Commissioners or others can convince us that certain items should be increased, we will increase them.

"I haven't the time to make personal investigations of all these local matters, but I'm sure we can rely upon the good judgment of the Commissioners."

Restoration of the Federal contribution to at least the Budget Bureau estimate of $5,700,000 is certain, and it is probable that the sub-committee will accept the District estimate of $8,310,000, as it did last year.

Copeland Promises Aid.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, another member of the sub-committee, has promised to restore the character education fund deleted by the House and plans to insist upon its retention in conference.

The entire sub-committee has indicated sympathy with the requests for more adequate public health and welfare appropriations, and it is believed these items will be raised even above the Budget Bureau estimates.

Senator Thomas said that no civic organizations have made requests to be heard yet, but he added that they are aware they will be welcome.

Shepherd Statue Given A Long Overdue Bath

Monument Is Tribute to D. C. Governor Who Beautified City.

The statue of Alexander (Boss) Shepherd, one-time Governor of this city, is being given a bath—at last.

Once a gleaming copper, the massive statue in recent years has taken on a dirty, greenish color, the result of corrosion and neglect. Passersby long ago had given up hope that it would receive any attention.

But yesterday a workman from the office of the National Capital Parks appeared on the lawn of the District Building, ran a ladder up to Shepherd's broad back, and then mounted with a bucket of soap and water.

It appeared that he had a difficult job ahead of him.

Would Have Scoffed.

Alexander Robey Shepherd, in his latter years, probably would have scoffed had anybody told him his statue would one day look out on Pennsylvania avenue. Yet no local citizen ever was more entitled to a statue.

It was Shepherd more than any one else who, back in the days just after the Civil War, started Washington on the way to being the world's most beautiful capital city.

So unsightly, so uncomfortable and insanitary was Washington at the time that there was serious talk of moving the National Capital to St. Louis or some other city.

"Boss" Shepherd, first as executive officer of the board of public works and later as Governor, set out to clean up and beautify the city. His methods were of the strong-arm variety, but they bore fruit.

Hundreds of miles of streets and sidewalks were built, a costly system of sewers was installed, 3,000 gas lamps erected, Old Tiber Creek was filled in, and 60,000 trees planted along the streets.

President Grant was able to say that "Washington is rapidly becoming a city worthy of the Nation's Capital." But the public turned against Shepherd. Taxes to meet the improvements had piled up to the point of confiscation, and charges of corruption were made against him.

Charges Unsustained.

He was virtually driven from the city, although an investigation failed to sustain the charges against him. In 1874, the territorial form of government was abolished, and was followed by the present form with three commissioners.

Shepherd went to Mexico and made a fortune in a silver mine. He died September 12, 1902.

The statue of him, which is now being given a bath, was unveiled May 3, 1909. The cost of its erection, $10,192, was raised by grateful citizens of a transformed Washington.

Bill Proposes Teacher Leave For One Year

Connery Measure Aimed to Permit Sabbatical Vacation Period.

Teachers could take one-year leaves of absence and school children would be free from compulsory vaccination or inoculation under House bills introduced yesterday.

Representative Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, championed the sabbatical leave bill at the request of the Teachers Union. He explained that while away the instructor would receive only the compensation above his basic pay. The basic pay would go to a substitute.

"There is a growing practice throughout the country to establish such leave for teachers in service so that they may grow professionally," Connery said.

"While I am aware that over 30 cities in the country pay the teacher on sabbatical leave of absence at least one-half of his salary, I do not feel that at this time I can ask Congress to appropriate additional money for this purpose."

By providing that the absentee's place shall be taken by a temporary teacher, Connery explained, the bill saves any additional cost to the community and at the same time assures the teacher on leave of his return to the position.

Representative Lemke (Republican), North Dakota, introduced the anti-vaccination or inoculation measure. It would apply to all public and private schools in Washington.

The measure reads that such vaccination or inoculation shall not be made a condition of admission or any right or privilege in the schools.

Gassaway Admits Offer To Play Judge in Films

By the Associated Press.

Representative P. L. Gassaway disclosed last night he was "considering" an offer to play the role of Judge Roy Bean in a film dramatization of the "Law West of the Pecos."

"A fellow from a movie outfit came down here from New York and started talking to me about it, but we didn't talk terms or anything like that," the cowboy Congresman said. "I sure know one thing, and that is I haven't got time to fool around with anything like that till we get our business done up here."

Relief Funds Used, District Aid May End

Commissioners Ask for $608,000 to Carry on to June 30.

Program to Be Scrapped April 1 If Congress Fails to Act.

Relief payments to District clients will be discontinued at the end of this month unless the Budget Bureau approves and Congress appropriates funds for relief payments, the District Commissioners told Daniel W. Bell, head of the Budget Bureau yesterday.

Statement of the District officials was made in support of the proposed supplemental appropriation of $608,000 to carry the relief program to June 30—the end of the current fiscal year.

Under existing regulations, promulgated by the President, the Commissioners would be barred from asking Congress for the money if the Budget Bureau disapproved. What the bureau's decision will be Director Bell refused to indicate at the conclusion of the hearing.

Allen Urges Approval.

Commissioner George E. Allen, formerly in direct administrative charge of local relief, urged the bureau to give speedy approval. Unless prompt action is had the entire relief program must be scrapped without notice or adequate time to prepare a substitute plan to ease the burden of the city's needy, Commissioner Allen said.

At the end of February there were on the relief rolls 9,924 active cases as contrasted with 9,706 on the relief rolls at the end of January. The active cases at the end of February represented 30,326 persons actually receiving direct relief. Expenditures for relief for February were $300,722.47. This does not include administrative and other expenses for aid not included in the direct relief payment total, it was said.

Administration costs are estimated at $50,000 for last month. The sum of $25,000 was allotted to the works dvision. This left a balance of $489,505 available for relief at the beginning of this month.

Increasing numbers of families on relief and the increasing costs of food and other necessities for which they are allotted money will, it was estimated by Elwood Street, director of public welfare, bring the balance available at the beginning of next month down to something like $100,000 when other than direct relief expenditures are counted in.

Must Scrap Program.

This balance, officials said, is so far below the needs of the current relief program that the program must be scrapped and a severely restricted program of lessened aid extended only in cases of dire emergencies.

Those now on relief rolls include about 4,500 so-called unemployables and another 1,000 who are ineligible for works progress jobs because they were put on relief only after November 1, the dead-line fixed by Federal authorities for WPA job eligibility.

During February the number of persons put on relief was as high, officials said, as a year ago, although the total number of cases is about half that of a year ago, due primarily to the fact that some 13,000 persons have been assigned to WPA jobs since that program was launched.

"Voice of Bugle Ann" Is the Picturization of Missouri's Saga of Houn' Dog

Running to Fox Adds Action to HumorlessPlay

Lionel Barrymore Is Star; More About New Play; Theater Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

If it was contrast at which the Loew executives were aiming in the formulation of the program to be presented for the week beginning Friday at Loew's Fox Theater, their efforts certainly were crowned with success. I can think of no two more divergent items than the chief screen feature, "The Voice of Bugle Ann," and the sophisticated brand of urban—not to say urbane—humor to be expected from Jack Benny, Mary Livingstone and their radio associates who will provide the vaudeville half of the entertainment.

Mr. Benny already has been amply celebrated in these columns and is probably known to everyone who ever gives the theater or radio a serious—or should it be frivolous?—thought. "The Voice of Bugle Ann" is something else again.

Here is a story of a simple Missouri hill people, whose lives are wrapped up in thier tranquil rural pursuits and the harmless night sport of running their hounds to the foxes. Their hounds are their chief pride and joy. Finally, into the neighborhood moves a crotchety trouble-hunter by the name of Jacob Terry, who hates both dogs and people.

Starts Trouble.

Intent on raising sheep, he throws wire-mesh fences around his property that result in the injury of several of the dogs running at night.

It is made to appear in course of time that Terry has killed Bugle Ann, favorite of the Spring Davis pack, and he pays the penalty of his own life for his violation of the code of the neighborhood.

Out of this situation is built a homespun drama of homely devotion, gentle pathos and youthful romance that frequently exerts a powerful tug at the heart. It will make an especially strong appeal to dog lovers. In fact, in the trial scene, the testimony hinges so completely on dog's faithfulness to man that Lionel Barrymore is afforded opportunity, as the defendant, to recite Senator Vest's famous tribute to the dog as a part of his plea for the understanding and leniency of the court.

Fine Film of Its Type.

This Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the book by McKinley Kantor, with screen adaptation by Harvey Gates and Samuel Hoffenstein, which was previewed by the drama desks in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange yesterday afternoon, is picturesquely staged in a rugged hill country, remote from metropolitan civilization. The action is completely devoid of comedy. Its most thrilling intervals are those devoted to the fox chases, with reynard in full view a great deal of the time, with the pursuing packs in full cry through a rolling timber tract.

It will be interesting to observe in what manner the audiences attracted by Mr. Benny, whose methods and reputation are anything but pastoral, will react to a film feature which may be said, in the last analysis, to represent the saga of the Missouri houn' dog.

"The Voice of Bugle Ann" is a fine picture of its type and may turn out to be just what the doctor ordered. The fact that the Fox screen is going to the dogs next week does not necessarily mean that it is "going to the dogs," if you know what I mean.

Bert Granoff, popular Washington tenor, will be featured in a special overture by the Earle Theater Orchestra, under the conductorship of C. Frederick Clark, beginning Friday. Mr. Granoff will be heard in three numbers—"Please Believe Me," "Lovely Lady" and "Life Begins When You're in Love." The feature picture will be "Desire," starring Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper in their first joint vehicle since "Morocco." the first American-made film in which Miss Dietrich ever appeared. The stage headliner will be June Knight, fresh from her engagement in "Jubilee."

Afterthoughts on Premiere.

As the only dissenting voice in the otherwise unanimous chorus of superlative praise heaped upon Mr. Robert E. Sherwood's new play of "Idiot's Delight," this column was both applauded and soundly spanked yesterday.

Perhaps it might be well to set down an afterthought or two that may have emerged from the swirl of a harried and hurried midnight review, following the fall of an 11:15 curtain.

Instead of being announced as a "new play," it seems to me that "Idiot's Delight" might better be proclaimed an "Alpine Chauve Souris." Its first act establishes no definite premise, its second provides a practically complete vaudeville show and its third a pseudo-romantic climax that harks back to far-away days in Omaha rather than to anything that has been developed in the preceding two acts and four scenes.

As to the indecisiveness of the play's characterizations, Miss Fontanne's part could do with a bit more definition and the German scientist might well be a little more on the side of blood and iron than to abandon a life's work in the eradication of cancer to devote his learning to the annihilation instead of salvation of his fellow men.

Is Vastly Amusing.

I have no quarrel to pick with the fun of the piece. It is often high-speed and hilarious honky-tonk, with Mr. Lunt doing no only "a Harry Richman," but even interpolating a dash or two of Al Jolson on occasion.

Lee Simonson has given the single setting required by the five scenes the full benefit of his mature skill as a designer of effective stage illusions.

One wonders if he unconsciously had in the back of his mind the general contour of the penthouse apartment utilized in the last act of Noel Coward's "Design for Living," in which Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne also appeared with the author. Remember the general locations of the stage-left entrances and the winding stairway, down right? Practically identical.

At any rate, let it be understood that this department has no grudge against "Idiot's Delight." I had a swell time Monday night.

It is simply one of those strange anomalies of the theater—not quite topnotch drama, but unbeatable box-office.

Yesterday's transient visitor to the drama desk was that veteran and able avant courier of the living drama, Sam Stratton, in the Capital to do a little provocative cymbal-whanging on behalf of that gay Broadway revue, "At Home Abroad." This is the Howard Dietz-Arthur Schwartz American approximation of a London music hall show, in which the stellar luminaries are Beatrice Lillie, foremost of the lady clowns; Herb Williams, next to Victor Moore the drollest of the stage's comics; that amazing young dancer, Mitzi Mayfair, and Ethel Waters, leading songstress of her race. All this comes to the National, following "Porgy and Bess," the week of Monday, March 23.

Mr. Stratton, prior to his present assignment, had just completed a brief tour with "Love on the Dole," which he describes as excellent theater. He had not as yet had an opportunity to see the Lunts in the new Sherwood play at the National, but had heard opinions concerning it not far removed from our own.

Nice to have all these amiable ladies and gentlemen dropping by and convincing you still further from their reports of other cities that Washington is, in fact as well as claim, the best "show town" in America outside of New York.

U. of M's. "Extra."

The Footlight Club of the University of Maryland will present "Oliver Oliver," by Paul Osborn, as its second play of the season. The play will be offered on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights, March 18, 19 and 20, in the auditorium of the university's agricultural building.

This production is the club's "extra" play, produced outside of the university's appropriation from the Footlight treasury. This policy of an "extra-curriculum" play, so to speak, was inaugurated last season with the club's presentation of "The Vinegar Tree," by the same author.

Dr. Charles B. Hale, veteran dramatic coach, is directing "Oliver Oliver." Raymond Leighty is in charge of the settings.

Congratulations are being showered upon Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. MacQuillen, upon the birth last Saturday of their second son, weight 7 pounds. The baby will be christened Richard Daniels MacQuillen. Mr. MacQuillen is manager of the Warner Brothers Savoy Theater, Fourteenth and Irving streets northwest, and formerly was assistant manager of the Earle in the days when Harry E. Lohmeyer was manager. We hereby add our felicitations to those under which Mr. and Mrs. MacQuillen already are smothered.

CCC Boys Are Guests

Forty young men of the Citizens' Conservation Corps were guests of the Belasco management last night to view "Soak the Rich", the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur satirical comedy, starring Walter Connolly.

Manager Jack Thoman of the Belasco arranged for the CCC boys' theater party at the behest of officials connected with the office of the Director of Education of the Citizens' Conservation Corps in Washington.

It was originally planned to entertain the boys at tonight's performance, but that was prevented by the special preview showing of "Arrowsmith," the Ronald Colman revival, which will be presented immediately after the final projection of "Soak the Rich".

The "Arrowsmith" preview, it might be well to note, will begin at an earlier hour than is customarily the case. Consult the Film Tables on this page.

Having sat through the current stage bill at Loew's Fox Theater for the first time last night, it seems exceedingly to behoove this column, as a consistent booster of merit, to point out that there are two attractions on the living program that are worth the trip to the theater. One is the especially facile few moments occupied by Roger Pryor out on the ramp in front of the orchestra; the other the orchestral interlude provided by Fats Waller and his Swing Orchestra from the C. B. S.

Those who remember Roger Pryor as leading man with the National Theater Players some years ago, in such worthy stage plays as "Up Pops the Devil" and "Blessed Event," and in the numerous screen plays in which he since has appeared, will know about what to expect—except for the singing. This Pryor fellow can sing and last night had to do several encores from the stage. Wish I had "caught" him sooner.

As for Fats Waller, a great deal that he does strikes me as harking back to the early cacophonies of the old-time "jazz band." There is a blatancy in his brasses and a shriek in his reeds that get terrifically monotonous. But, then, there come along his own piano solos and the legato numbers—like "I'm Going to Sit Down and Write Myself a Letter" or "Honeysuckle Rose"—that are alive with genuine musicianship and lovely melody. In these lilting numbers the lad really "has something." But if he would shout "Yeah!" into the microphone about one-quarter as often as he does, that still would be plenty.

Crack-o'-Dawn Note

Plans are afoot—or by this time, possibly afoot and a half—to meet Jack Benny upon his arrival at Union Station at 8 a. m., Friday morning, breakfast the ace comedian and otherwise tune him up for the day. This, of course, is an enterprise of Carter Barron's and his associate Loew executives.

Thanks a million. It's a little out of my way, but I'll be glad to stop by the deppo on my way home!

Relief Load May Raise Cumberland Tax Rate

Cumberland, Md., March 10.—Mayor George W. Legge has sent a letter to State Senator Robert H. Kimble and Delegate C. William H. Baer, asserting that if the General Assembly does not provide revenue for relief the tax rate in Allegany County and Cumberland will have to be raised approximately 10 per cent to meet the relief load for the year.

Mayor Legge stated the representatives of the Eastern Shore evidently did not realize the need for relief in Western Maryland and Baltimore City. The letter also said the city has already contributed to local relief following the curtailment of funds for February and March, but that in order to raise the estimated $169,500 that will be needed for relief in Allegany County for the ensuing year, the county will have to resort to increased tax assessments.

Road Contracts Awarded.

Luray, Va., March 10.—Nelson H. Clark, Luray, has been awarded a contract to build one-tenth of a mile of macadam road in Shenandoah district, this county. The contract price is $3,820.36. Mr. Clark also has been awarded the contract for building four-tenths of a mile of macadam road in Frederick County at a cost of $16,662.32. The contracts were awarded by the State Highway Commission.

Love Interest in Horror Drama

In association with Warren Hull, that attractive young actress, Marguerite Churchill, will supply the romantic interest on the screen of the Metropolitan Theater when "The Walking Dead" opens there as major attraction of the film bill on Friday. Miss Churchill is pictured above in one of her less placid moments during the action of the picture. As might be suspected by the seasoned picturegoer, Boris Karloff appears in the leading and title role.

In his enthusiasm to take advantage of the current headlines as a source of timely and exciting drama, Robert Emmett Sherwood temporarily has abandoned that singleness of purpose and directness of attack in shaping his dramatic structure that made his "Reunion in Vienna" and "The Petrified Forest" models of dramaturgic integrity.

For the moment, he has lost the knack of concentrated attack on his chosen subject and permits his plot to ramble through entertaining, but unrelated, paths of theatrical effort.

"Idiot's Delight" launches a vitriolic attack on the munitions makers and sprays those who inspire international strife and world war with a machine-gun fire of explosive verbiage and then conveniently converts itself into the simple consummation of an obscure romance that began in the Wm. Bryan Hotel in Omaha, Nebr., many years before.

The play is loosely woven, ardent in its condemnation of war, indecisive in its characterization and prolific in the extraneous elements of musical comedy which it is able to introduce without too great a strain upon the credulity of the spectator, thus taking rank as the least efficient and least effective of the Sherwood plays that have come along since Jane Cowl captivated the theater-going world in the same author's "Road to Rome."

There is a great deal of entertainment here—thanks principally to the individual capabilities of Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne, Sydney Greenstreet and their associate players—but precious little sound drama, marked by those qualities of inevitability and conviction that grip an audience and cause them to think they have seen a reflection of life rather than imagination's gossamer mirage.

Played in One Setting.

The single setting of the play is in the cocktail lounge of the Hotel Monte Gabrielle in the Italian Alps, near the frontiers of Switzerland and Austria. Here assemble an American "grifter," in the patois of the easy-money world, with six beautiful blondes in tow, with whom he has been touring the Balkans in a song-and-dance act; a munitions maker and his inamorata—until it comes time for the passports to be signed—a young English couple on their honeymoon and a German scientist, who is on the high road to a cure for cancer, but abandons it when the world bursts into flame again, as it did in 1914, and bombing planes unload their murderous cargoes from overhead, even in this out-of-the-way spot.

During the action of the play, Harry Van, the American impresario, finds it possible to "put on his show" and also to discover that Irene, the mysterious consort of Achille Weber, the munitions salesman on a grand scale, is the girl with whom he had had that affair in Omaha years before.

It also is made possible for a young French pacifist to denounce war in such vehement terms that he is politely taken out and shot by the Italian military.

It is all very melodramatic, a few steps in advance of what current events may bring forth and explicitly frank in its pointing of the finger at certain nations and what their policies may evolve.

Is Splendidly Played.

The piece, of course, is flawlessly played. Last night's performance was letter-perfect on the part of every member of the cast and revealed Alfred Lunt as a "song-and-dance-man," who may not be a match for George M. Cohan's, but who still can hold his own with the best of the second-raters—which is precisely what he is supposed to be in the play.

Miss Fontanne, in the role of the ostensible spy, who belatedly revives that Omaha romance with Harry Van, plays with a strong Russian accent, that is particularly well assumed, and a long-bob, blonde wig that causes her to look amazingly like Garbo.

Whatever qualities of suspense "Idiot's Delight" may be said to possess are traceable directly to Miss Fontanne; 95 per cent of the melodrama's humor stems from the surprising capacity Mr. Lunt betrays for encompassing the complete mental and social picture of a typical small-time, honky-tonk artist, who feels that he is wasting major talents on minor activities. There can be no complaints laid at the feet of the costars of the Guild's newest production that they did not turn in superlative individual performances. Whatever delinquencies may be found in the play are Mr. Sherwood's, not theirs.

Greenstreet, Whorf Score.

In the role of Dr. Waldersee, the German scientist, Sydney Greenstreet contributes a finely drawn characterization, although one that places no great stress upon those known abilities that have carried him to triumph in roles of far greater demands and importance. In the part of Quillery, the young worker who decries the whole ghastly business of war and is shot down for his candor in saying so, Richard Whorf acquits himself of one of the finest character portrayels in the entire cast. He was accorded a vociferous round of applause after his "big scene" last night.

Barry Thomson, as an American "greeter" in the Alpine hotel; Edward Raquello, as Capt. Locicero, who enforced the embargo on visas and the privilege of crossing the border; Bretaigne Windust, who directed the play skillfully, and Jean McIntyre, as Mr. and Mrs. Cherry, the newlyweds, and Francis Compton, as the hated munitions maker, who deems himself a benefactor for affording a quick and ready means of ridding the earth of the distraught, the poverty stricken and the unhappy at the hands of those able to buy his wares, all efficiently perform the tasks allotted them by the author, although many of those tasks fail to ring true.

Those Six Blondes.

Jacqueline Page, Connie Crowell, Frances Foley, Etna Ross, Marjorie Baglin and Ruth Timmons are the six blondes who aid and abet Mr. Lunt in his efforts to bring cheer to a marooned band of wayfarers patiently awaiting the worst.

That "Idiot's Delight" possesses the essential potentialities of vast public amusement was evidenced last night when the curtain was raised and lowered 13 times at the conclusion of the last act in response to the audience's acclaim of the piece as an entertaining evening in the theater. These 13 curtain calls were shared by the entire company, Mr. Lunt and Miss Fontanne refusing to take any personal credit for a performance that attracted the largest standing-room audience of the season.

Mrs. Whiffen, 'Grand Old Lady' Of the Stage, Is 91 Tomorrow

Former Operatic Star, on Farm Home in Blue Ridge Hills, Recalls Theater Life of New York in the Civil War Days.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Roanoke, Va., March 10.—"I wish everyone as good health and happiness as I have had," said Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, "America's grand old lady of the stage," who Thursday will celebrate her ninty-first birthday at her farm home in the Blue Ridge foothills of Virginia, near the little village of Montvale.

Once the bright star of the theater world, friend of Daniel Frohman, dean of producers, Mrs. Whiffen has had a career replete with hard work and play, and still is enjoying life to the limit.

Sixty-eight years ago, then the bride of Thomas Whiffen, a singer, the gracious lady reached New York from London, for her American debut as a member of the Gaiton Opera Company, which played at Wood's Museum and Metropolitan Theater, at Twenty-eighth street and Broadway.

Of her early impressions of New York, she says:

"On rainy days I never left the Spangler House, where we stopped. The streets were muddy, and blue-coated soldiers back from the Civil War were on the streets, begging.

"Times Square then was country. The city was not impressive when compared with London, nor Paris, where I was educated. But it was vastly more exciting. There was something happening all the time. Parades! The volunteer firemen in their red shirts, it seemed to me, were always parading.

"But I suppose you want to know about the theater in those days. To me the physical aspect of the theater may change, but actors, plays and the spirit of the theater, never. We had gas footlights in New York, but in the provinces they still clung to kerosene. And when I played in the movies—oh yes, I played in the movies—I was amazed by the intricacy of the lighting.

"I never played with Edwin Booth, but my husband did. We met Booth near Twenty-third street once, and he seemed sick. 'It's indigestion,' he told us. 'I've tried everything but it's no use.' There was a little black pipe protruding from one pocket, and my husband said, 'Why don't you try giving that up?' Booth shook his head. 'No, not my pipe.'

Common sense has always been her health recipe. She has always eaten sparingly, and when her work was strenuous, observed regular hours of rest. With a skin as smooth as a school girl's, she frankly admits that "laundry soap often did the trick when I could get nothing else."

On the stage she starred as "Buttercup" in H. M. S. Pinafore and in "Esmeralda," "The Rajah," "The Private Secretary," "The Charity Ball," "Brother Officers," "Cousin Kate," "The Great Dive," "A Scrap of Paper," and "Rosemary."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation presents the Pro Arte String Quartet, of Brussels (Alphouse Onnou, Laurent Halleux, Germain Prevost and Robert Maas), at the Library of Congress Tuesday afternoon. Program: Quartet No. 1 in C (Walter Piston), Quartet No. 4, Op. 32 (Paul Hindemith), Quartet in E flat, K 428 (Mozart).

So frequent have been the American visits of these four consummately skilled musicians that they have long since ceased to be strangers; indeed, they have been virtually adopted into our musical family circle. Their return to Washington yesterday was the occasion for a warm reception from a large audience, which took it as a foregone conclusion that what it was about to hear would be clearly and persuasively presented.

Walter Piston's panegyrists claim that each successive room-work of his shows an increasing mastery of both form and substance. I am not familiar enough with his entire output either to echo or challenge this statement, but his first string quartet, now three years old, could be revised to its advantage. Excess of contrapuntal ingenuity makes the design seem overcrowded, and a simpler treatment of the instrumental voices would have resulted in greater transparency. There are passages, too, where the energy of one voice dominates to the point of obscuring the others, as the violoncello does in the adagio.

Paul Hindemith's music is apt to be bewildering to those hearing it for the first time, because of his deliberate distortion. This quartet, for example, does not sound on a straight plane, but as though reflected from a concave mirror. It takes some time to adjust the ear to the unusual angles of impact, and to realize the actual relations of parts in the harmonic texture.

After these adventures in modernity, the Mozart quartet had a grateful intelligibility, although it is one of the set of six which astonished and even dismayed his contemporaries. Our ears have been assaulted by such weird sounds in the last three decades, that it is hard to understand how Mozart could have been violently criticized for having written this patently beautiful music.

Newark Building Strike Expected to End Shortly

Newark, N. J., March 10 (AP).—Efforts toward general arbitration of the strike of service employes of downtown office buildings progressed far enough today to encourage predictions of an early peace.

James A. Moffitt, United States Labor Department conciliator, after conferring with strike leaders and representatives of some of the building managements, predicted that "a peace parley" would be held within 24 hours.

Liquor License Restriction Up To ABC Board

Commissioners Decline to Approve Limit of 300; 400 to Be Allotted.

The District Commissioners yesterday refused to approve a proposal of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to limit the number of class A retail liquor licensees to 300, but told the Beverage Board fixing of such a limit would be a matter of policy for board decision.

The question is to be considered at a conference between the board and E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, and is expected to be brought up again before the Commissioners Friday.

Meanwhile the Beverage Board made it clear that it would adhere to its previously announced plan to limit the number of licensees to 400 during the current license year.

Investigation also was begun by the board into reports that transfer of licenses from one person to another had become something of a "racket" because of the fixed limit on the total number of licensees. Holders of licenses, the board has been told, are holding on to unprofitable licenses in the hope of getting large sums for transferring them to others who would like to have licenses but who may not get them under the limit rule.

In their formal reply to the Beverage Board yesterday, the Commissioners said they "are not inclined to favor reduction of the number of class A licenses from 400 to 300, but it is felt this lies within the province of the Alcohol Beverage Control Board."

Womens' Group Praised By Secretary Perkins

New York, March 10 (AP).—Nationwide organizations of women, formed not only to advance their own interests but to promote the general welfare were credited tonight by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins with vastly increasing opportunities for women in general.

Miss Perkins spoke at a meeting of the Women's City Club of New York, which also heard Mayor F. H. LaGuardia warn of the dangers of another war unless selfish ambitions for national expansion are curbed.

The Labor Secretary said from 1910 to 1930 numerous new occupational doors were opened to women and that in the decade from 1920 to 1930 the number of women in professions increased half a million to more than 1,500,000, while the number in clerical pursuits on the latter date totaled 2,000,000.

Bar Group to Dine.

The Federal Bar Association will hold its weekly luncheon at 12:30 o'clock today in the Hotel Harrington. W. W. Couliette, attorney of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, will speak on income taxes.

D. A. R. Banquet Tonight.

Hagwood Ouster Inquiry Asked by House Member

By the Associated Press.

A House invesitgation of the removal of Maj. Geu. Johnson Hagood from his command of the Eighth Corps Area following his criticism of WPA funds as "stage money" was sought yesterday in a resolution introduced by Representative May.

Whether the resolution would reach the floor became a matter of speculation, however, after the House leadership referred it to the Rules Committee instead of to the Military Affairs Committee, of which May is a member.

Some Hagood supporters in the House previously had expressed hope that with Chairman McSwain and other Military Committee members favoring the general, the investigation proposal would fare better there than did a similar measure voted down by the Senate Military Committee.

WPA Clamps Down.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 10.—The Works Progress Administration clamped the lid down upon further requisitions for workers from the National Re-employment office here. Only men now employed may be used on new projects and if any of these drop out or are discharged their places cannot be filled. Farm and other seasonable labor is expected to absorb surplus employables here soon.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, March 10.

KATHARINE HEPBURN is now making the flicker version of Maxwell Anderson's play, "Mary of Scotland," and the director is John Ford. This is an interesting study in temperaments, for Miss Hepburn is known to be a lady who wants her own way, and Mr. Ford represents the male of the species. A visit to the set found everything peaceful, however.

Miss Hepburn, dressed as Mary of the Scots, was climbing out of a boat which had landed at the Town of Leith, under the protective veil of the dark night. Queen Elizabeth, if you recall the play, has given orders to have the boat captured and prevent Mary from getting to her Scotland.

In addition to Miss Hepburn, this picture features the return of that prize-winning combination, John Ford and Dudley Nichols. It was Director Ford and Writer Nichols who won the Academy and Critics' Awards for "The Informer." The screen play of "Mary of Scotland" hasn't any of the blank verse of Maxwell Anderson's stage play.

• • •

Hepburn and Director Ford have been getting along "charmingly" so far. There is no reason why it shouldn't continue. They have great respect for each other's ability.

Director Ford said to me: "Let me tell you, she's a great actress. And what's more, a hard worker. A director can't ask for much more."

And the yarn is told of Hepburn meeting her former director, George Cukor. "Why, you're hoarse," said Cukor. "I'm working in a John Ford picture," answered Hepburn, "my voice is changing."

• • • •

W. C. Fields has come back to work—and that is good news. The greatest comedian of the talkies is now making the flicker, "Poppy." For this particular sequence, Fields stands in front of a small town hardware store, and is entertaining and shellacking the yokels with the shell game. Or, as Fields calls it, "the old army game."

Director Eddie Sutherland endeavors to "take" the sequence as quickly as possible. He doesn't make any unnecessary "takes." for Fields is not a strong man. After the scene is filmed, Bill Fields walks out of the sound stage and sits in a chair in the sun. Here he rests between setups and confers with his favorite writer, Jack Cunningham, who is generally on the set with him.

Fields works until he gets tired. He generally works until about 3:30 in the afternoon, and then he quits shooting. It is not temperament with him. It is exhaustion.

• • • •

Bill Fields is still the same guy. An amusing incident is told about him when he first became sick. The doctor told Fields that he would have to stop drinking, and the doctor was going to see that Bill did. It became a contest between the doctor and Fields.

Fields decided to teach the doctor golf. They would go on the golf course, and Bill would instruct him how to hold the club and swing it. "You've got to keep your eye on the ball," said Fields. While the doctor kept his eye on the ball and hit it, Fields would hit the bottle which he secretly carried. However, Fields is obeying his doctor now.

On the set of the flicker "San Francisco," Director Van Dyke is getting ready to film a scene with Jeanette MacDonald, Jack Holt, Margaret Irving and a group of extras. The setting is the Lynn Hall, a cabaret of the period, and it is the night before the now famous San Francisco quake.

Director Van Dyke has been shooting very fast. The new technical crew with him is amazed. Director Van Dyke often makes one "take," says that is enough and hurries on. He says to Jeanette MacDonald, "All right, honey, we're ready. Let's make it."

Miss MacDonald, Holt and Miss Irving start to play the scene. It is a long scene. Everything seems to be going fine, when Director Van Dyke suddenly shouts: "No, no, end it." The camera stops turning. Director Van Dyke goes over and talks quietly to Miss MacDonald. Then Director Van Dyke paces up and down. Miss MacDonald leaves the set. For a moment I wonder what it is all about. Then I learn that Director Van Dyke didn't like Miss MacDonald's hairdress. It made her face photograph too long. She left to change it. It was the first time I saw Van Dyke excited on a set.

Shirley Temple, making the flicker, "Poor Little Rich Girl," has a new stand-in. She is Mary Lou Isleib, and she was Shirley's playmate before Shirley went into pictures. She was especially hired because Shirley could play with her on the set.

It is interesting to watch Shirley and Mary Lou on the set. Often they can't get together on what games to play. Mary Lou, the stand-in, is really interested in acting and wants to be an actress. That is the game she wants to play. Shirley, the actress, really wants to play children's games.

Games Plans Are Pushed At Berlin

Crisis Has No Effect on Preparations, Says Olympic Official.

Belgium Has No Idea of Withdrawing, Asserts Committeeman.

By the United Press.

BERLIN, March 10.—Arthur Fensch, secretary of the German Olympic committee, said today that plans were continuing for holding the Olympic games in Berlin this summer, despite the European crisis.

He said German athletes were being trained at "specializing" camps such as long distance runners at Wittenburg and boxers, wrestlers and weightlifters at Denneckstein.

"Germany is concentrating on climbing from sixth place, where it finished in 1932 at Los Angeles," Fensch said, "to second place this summer."

Fensch virtually conceded the team title to the United States.

Brussels, March 10 (U.P.).—Belgium has no intention of withdrawing from the summer Olympic games at Berlin, Dr. Boin, member of the Belgian Olympic committee, said today.

"It must be remembered that the Olympic games are organized by an international committee and not by Germany," he said.

"The question of whether Belgium should remain an Olympic competitor hasn't even been considered and won't be considered unless the situation becomes much more grave or the greater part of public movement favors withdrawing from the Olympics."

Paris, March 10 (AP).—France's participation in the Olympic games is "up to the government," Armand Massey, president of the French Olympic committee, said today.

"The question is one of diplomacy now, not sports," Massey said. "We are awaiting the government's attitude."

Officials said the cabinet probably would consider the question at Friday's meeting.

New York, March 10 (AP).—Despite obvious concern over the political situation in Europe, International Olympic authorities today generally manifested their intention of going ahead with plans for holding the games in Berlin this summer as scheduled.

While British officials announced at London that contributions to the Olympic fund were "coming in nicely," Count Henri Baillet-Latour of Belgium, president of the international Olympic committee, said at Honolulu there was no possibility of transferring the games to some other country.

"The only thing that can stop the games is war," he said, "and if there is war there won't be any games."

Walsh and Cox Turned Back On 37th

Macfarlane, Klein Rally to Win; Revolta and Picard Triumph.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., March 10.—Defending Champions Johnny Revolta and Henry Picard, served notice today they were still the team to beat in Miami's annual $4,000 international four-ball golf matches.

Playing the 30 holes their match lasted in 11 strokes under par, the Milwaukee star, P. G. A. champion, and his Hershey, Pa., teammate overwhelmed the Deal, N. J., combination of Vic Ghezzi and Craig Wood, 7 and 6, to enter the semi-finals of the invitation classic.

Their opponents tomorrow will be Willie Macfarlane, the former Tuckahoe, N. Y., schoolmaster who now registers from Old Oaks, N. Y., and Willie Klein, of Wheatley Hills, Long Island.

Walsh, Cox Beaten.

Trailing throughout their quarter-final match with Frank Walsh, of Chicago, and Wiffy Cox, of Washington, D. C., Macfarlane and Klein managed to square matters at the thirty-fifth hole, halved the thirty-sixth in birdie 4s and ran it out at the thirty-seventh, where both their opponents' putts for the half rolled off line.

In the other semifinal match, Gene Sarazen, of Brookfield Center, Conn., and Jimmy Hines, of Garden City, Long Island, face the all-Scotch combination of Tommy Armour, of Boca Raton, Fla., and Bobby Cruickshank, of Richmond, Va.

After "blowing" the three-hole lead they held at the end of 27 holes of their match with Harry Cooper, of Chicago, and Jimmy Thomson, of Ridgewood, N. J., Sarazen and Hines just pulled it out at the thirty-sixth where the "old maestro," his youthful partner's putt having missed, sank an eight-footer for the needed birdie 4, winning 1 up.

Armour and Cruickshank, who rallied in unparalleled fashion to save their first round match, got out in front of the favored team of Horton Smith, Chicago, and Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., and, refusing to let down, won 3 and 2.

Brown, Harvard Fives Resume Feud Tonight

Providence, R. I., March 10.—Brown and Harvard will meet in the twentieth varsity basketball game of a series that dates back 24 years to 1908 tomorrow night, with the Crimson favored to win. Brown has won six of the 19 games of the series, and Harvard has won 13. Brown's last triumph was in 1933 when they won, 46 to 14.

Lookouts, Irked, Hie to New Camp

Leave Sanford, Set Up Selves at Daytona.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orlando, Fla., March 10.—Bag and baggage, the entire Chattanooga baseball club took with them painful memories of Sanford, Fla., and suddenly transferred their training camp to Daytona today.

Tirading against the town as a training site and declaring that three players and himself were taken down with ptomaine poisoning, Manager Clyde Milan received permission from Clark Griffith to make the change. The Chattanooga team, owned by Griffith, set up its camp in Sanford on Sunday.

Mangin Holds His Indoor Net Title

Wins 4th Crown In Five Years, Turning Back Leonard Hartman.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Gregory Mangin stood off his final challenger tonight and retained the United States indoor singles tennis championship with a 6-1, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3, win from Leonard Hartman, former Columbia University basketball star. It was Mangin's fourth triumph in the championship in five years.

Mangin, who won the title in 1932, 1933 and last year, was squarely in command of the first two sets and then tired from the swift pace of his fiery volleys and booming drives. Hartman, an unorthodox player in style, quickly seized the opening and for a time threatened seriously to end the champion's tenure.

Hartman, the conqueror of the highly-favored Frank Bowden and Gilbert Hall in the preliminary rounds, took the play away from the titleholder and appeared to have a better-than-even chance of copping the fourth set when Mangin suddenly ended the stampede in the eighth game by breaking through Hartman's delivery after the former Columbia University basketball star had gotten away to a 30-love lead.

Mangin Tires Badly.

Breaking through Hartman in the fourth game, Mangin led, 4—1, in the third set. The champion played his finest tennis of the night in this stretch, counting heavily in the forecount with acutely angled volleys and deep backhand drives that landed on the baseline.

With Hartman apparently resigned to his fate, Mangin suddenly showed signs of his terrific pace and wilted rapidly. Buoyed by Mangin's physical relapse and the simultaneous recovery of his own form, Hartman spurted brilliantly to win the third set after winning the four-times deuced sixth game. He found Mangin's generally feared backhand a vulnerable shot and drilled away at it to a fair-theewell.

Refreshed by a ten-minute intermission, Mangin returned to the court, with his confidence restored but Hartman was just as formidable. The big test for the champion came in the third game when he was forced to the utmost of his skill to overcome a 15—40 deficit to hold service. Games followed service thereafter until the eighth when Mangin broke through. He scored a spectacular placement for the winning point as he dove into the corner to dig up the ball with his backhand. Mangin won the ninth and final game on service as Hartman frittered away at least two chances to keep the match alive.

It wasn't an all-victorious night for Mangin, however. Teamed up with Mrs. John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, who won the national singles crown last night, they were beaten by Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, and Karle Schroeder, of Sweden, 7—5, 7—5, in the finals of the mixed doubles championship.

Miss Wall Upset In Belleair Golf

Mrs. Lake Wins on Final Hole; Mrs. Vare Victor.

By the Associated Press.

Belleair, Fla., March 10.—Last year's winner, Bernice Wall, of Oshkosh, Wis., was upset in the first round of the annual Belleair Women's Golf tournament today by Mrs. Marion Turpie, of New York.

Mrs. Lake's 5 on the home hole was the deciding factor of a nip-and-tuck struggle.

Other favorites advanced, with Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, national champion, playing the best golf of the day in defeating Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., 5 and 4.

Mrs. Vare carded a 3-under-par 37 on the first nine.

The medalist, Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews, of Miami, had little difficulty in ousting Mrs. Helen B. Stetson, of Philadelphia, 1926 United States title holder, 7 and 6.

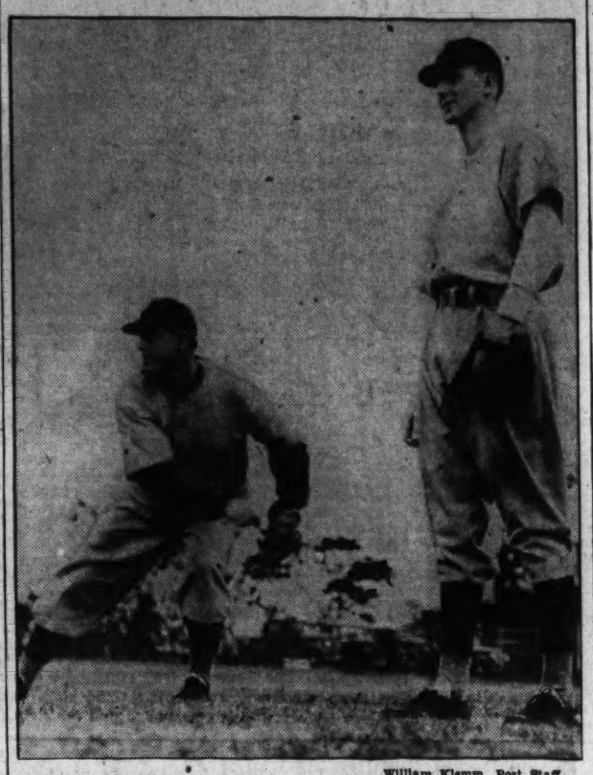
Mrs. L. O. Cameron, of Chevy Chase Club, Washington, lost to Mrs. Mark McGarry, of St. Petersburg, 1 up, in a first-round match.

Workman in Capital, Plays Round of Golf

Raymond (Sonny) Workman, ace Washington jockey, was out on the Kenwood Club's golf course yesterday shortly after arriving in this city for a visit after a winter's saddle campaign in Florida. Workman played several holes, but did not keep a score.

He will report next week to the C. V. Whitney farm at Lexington, Ky., to help educate sons of the light blue and brown 2-year-olds. Workman plans to return to this section toward the end of the month and will ride at the Bowie meeting.

Nat Hurlers Still Go to Extremes



William Klemm, Post Staff.

Here's the long and short of the Washington pitching staff and it amounts to just 7 inches. Left (need we tell you) is Ed Linke, 5 feet 10. The monumental gentleman is Mr. James Hutchinson, just 6 feet 5.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla., March 10.

THERE'S a strange alliance between the Washington and Albany clubs that even Joe Cambria doesn't understand. There's absolutely no sense to the inner workings of their working agreement that gives the Nats the pick of Cambria's Albany talent, you gather from Cambria, yet he's content with the entire arrangement.

POVICH.

Up and down the land, searching the Nation's sandlots with pen and contract handy, roams the Albany club owner, whose Baltimore laundry business has now become an avocation, taking title to young ball players who might be diamonds in the rough. With teams at Albany, at Harrisburg and at Mayodan, N. C., he has nigh onto 100 players under contract every season, and it is from this group that Griffith is entitled to take his pick.

And, to hear Cambria tell it, the only consideration he receives in return beyond the "dollar and other valuables" required to make the transfer of the contract binding, is Griffith's sage advice and counsel in baseball matters. A peculiar habit of running afoul of organized baseball's contract formalities has resulted in Cambria's receiving the official wrath of Judge Landis in the past—and in such matters Griffith is his mentor.

The paradox of the alliance is that, as a scout and judge of talent, Griffith rates Cambria slightly below a blindfolded tailor's dummy. But he gambles heavily on the law of averages that some day Cambria will turn up with a genuine "find" among the hundreds of youths he shepherds into organized baseball. Not one Albany player, Jake Powell excepted, has ever found his way into the regular line-up of the Nats, and over Powell's past Griffith and Cambria are in dispute.

Griffith points out with great pride that by devious means he retained title to Powell for five years until he finally deemed that the former Washington sandlotter was ripe for the big leagues. Cambria will tell you that Griffith, Scout Joe Engel and everybody else in the Washington organization gave up on Powell when they released him from Chattanooga to Dayton in the Middle Atlantic League and that only his foresight saved Powell for the Washington club.

Anyway, the Nats did Cambria no favor when they took back title to Powell in 1935. The New York Giants were currently offering $35,000 for him, but Cambria was bound to give him up to Griffith. And it was a cool $25,000 that Cambria lost, too, when the Nats claimed Freddy Sington, who led the league in hitting and whom the Giants would have accepted as an alternate at the same figure. Powell, of course, stuck with the Nats and Griffith undoubtedly rewarded Cambria, but Sington, who proved a flop, was still worth 25 grand to the Albany exchequer.

Griffith first took notice of Cambria when, in 1933, the Baltimore laundryman, hearing that the Chicago Cubs were anxious to dispose of their Albany holdings, flew to Chicago and bought the franchise, players and all, for $7,500. Griffith, who a few years before had paid $150,000 for the Chattanooga franchise in a lower class league, was forced to admire Cambria's business acumen and in that admiration was born their alliance.

Cambria's interest in baseball is a curious mixture. He is both an incurable fan and an avid seeker of financial profit. And, despite the lowly standing of his Albany club, he has never failed to show a profit. Among the group of players he bought for his $7,500 were Babe Phelps, a catcher, and Harry Taylor, a first baseman, whom he sold the following season for $28,000. Phelps, curiously, he sold back to the Cubs.

In Short——

Roberto Estallella, the colorful Cuban Cambria sent up to the Nats last fall, all but kissed "Poppa Joe" on both cheeks during a reunion scene at the Nats' field today . . . Cambria, only a week out of Baltimore, arrived here from Havana, where he signed up ten Cubans, mostly pitchers . . . He will scatter the lot throughout his farm system . . . He picked his Cubans with an eye to business . . . They answer to such names as Jonas Comellas, Rafael Suarez, Manuel Fortes, Adrian Zallala, Tomas de la Cruz, who beat the Cardinals, 3 to 1, in six innings; Fermin Guera and Regino Otero . . . Cambria acclaims them all as wonders, which is about the worst recommendation they could have . . . American born of Italian parents, Cambria played the infield and outfield for Berlin, Ontario, in a small Canadian league . . . During the war anti-German feeling caused the town to be renamed Kitchener, Ontario.

Huck Prefers Play in Minors To Bench in Major Leagues

(This is another in a series of stories from the Nationals' training camp at Orlando, Fla., written by Huck Wynne, Washington sandlotter whose trial is being financed by The Washington Post.)

By Huck Wynne.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 10.—Mr. Griffith was telling me today that the rules of organized baseball do not permit a big league club to sign a player direct from the sandlots. Under the rules, the minor leagues have the first choice of the sandlotters.

That's all right with me. I'd rather play regularly in the minor leagues than sit on the bench in the big leagues. I know I won't improve as a catcher unless I get the experience that comes from being in there and catching every day.

I've found out it's entirely up to the ball player himself as to how far he goes in baseball. From what I have observed around the Washington club, there's always a job for a ball player who can make the big leagues. They are not spending all that time and money looking for young talent unless they wanted it pretty much.

There's nothing in baseball, apparently, to keep back a ball player who has the ability. If big league clubs are willing to pay those fancy prices for minor leaguers that's a pretty good sign, too, that a fellow with ability has a great chance to graduate from the minors.

I don't care what league they send me to. Of course, I'd like to get with a good club, but I have found out that you can work your way up in this business. Every player I've talked to down here without an exception got his start in some little league.

Nats, Red Sox Aces Clash On Slab

Newsom and Ferrell to Start in Saturday's Exhibition.

Linke and Grove Also to See Service in First 'Battle' of '36.

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 10.—Scenting an excellent moral effect on his young ball team if it can beat the heavily reinforced Boston Red Sox in the Nats' opening exhibition game here on Saturday, Manager Bucky Harris is grooming his best available pitchers for the fray.

The game will be the opening test of the season, too, for the Red Sox, with Manager Joe Cronin presenting for the first time his new crop of high-priced stars—Jimmy Foxx, Roger Cramer, Eric McNair and perhaps Johnny Marcum.

In an effort to gain the desired end, Harris today nominated Buck Newsom and Ed Linke as two of the Washington pitchers who will work three innings each. Earl Whitehill would nominally be the third hurler in Harris' attempt to present his strongest pitching front, but he does not desire to hurry Whitehill's conditioning program.

Appleton Due to Hurl

The third Washington pitcher of the day probably will be Pete Appleton, the 31-year-old rookie from Montreal whose pitching in batting practice today was a revelation to Harris. The aged right-hander was displaying a sharp-breaking curve that bothered every hitter he faced although he had not yet rounded into top form.

At the end of the workout today, Harris was firm in the belief that even if Appleton by some manner would fail to make the grade as a regular hurler, he would be a powerful factor in the club's pitching role.

No less eager than the Nats to win Saturday's game is Joe Cronin. The Boston manager, presented with his every desire by Millionaire Owner Tom Yawkey, must produce a pennant-winning club or suffer a sharp loss in popularity and managerial reputation.

Thus Cronin has announced that he will start his pair of prize pitchers—Wes Ferrell and Lefty Grove. They will work three inings each and their success will determine the identity of Cronin's third pitcher. If it is necessary to send Marcum, the expensive buy from Philadelphia, into the game in the late innings, Cronin is prepared to do it.

Intermittent showers which permitted only snatches of practice spoiled Manager Harris' plans for a dress rehearsal of the finer points of play today. Harris had planned an afternoon session at drilling on double plays, double steals, cut-off plays, run-downs and throwing to bases, but despite sessions in the morning and afternoon he was unable to carry out his program without interfering with batting practice.

Counting the Nats' need of brushing up on defensive plays as greater than their need of other work at this time, Harris has postponed the regular-yannigans game scheduled for tomorrow and will drill the team along scientific lines, instead.

The regulars and yannigans will meet on Thursday in a six-inning battle, with rookie pitchers and catchers to be used exclusively.

A co-star of the pitching practice with Appleton today was Dick Lanahan, who is finally rounding into the form that last fall stamped him as the brightest of the Nats' young prospects. Lanahan had complete control of the ball this afternoon and was uncorking his curve for the first time.

Labor Unit Backs Norton Race Bill

Would Provide Work for Many, Williams Says.

The Norton bill to legalize horse racing with pari-mutuel betting in the District, was given the stamp of approval by the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor yesterday. J. W. Williams, president of the department, was enthusiastic about the bill.

"A great number of building trades mechanics and laborers who have been unemployed for a long time and who are badly in need of work will get employment if this bill is passed," he said.

"This project will cost in excess of $2,000,000 and will be financed from privately-owned money, we understand. If unemployment is to be relieved, it is necessary that funds from private interests are extended.

Walter O'Hara, New England sportsman, has proposed to build a modern racing plant on the site of the old Benning track in the event the bill is passed.

Maj. Miller Broadcasts.

The possibility of a Sarron-Miller bout in the District for the world featherweight title will be the subject of Maj. Heinie Miller's broadcast tonight over Station WMAL at 6:30.

World Champion Skater Retires

'Accuser' Gone, Carnera Quiz Is Delayed

King Attacks Committee, Says Gastanaga Was Out of Condition.

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, March 10.—The New York State Athletic Commission's investigation into the charge that Primo Carnera, of Italy, former heavyweight champion, and Isidoro Gastanaga, of Spain, were technically under the same management when they fought in Madison Square Garden last Friday night was postponed until March 27 because of the absence of Solly King, who holds a contract on the Spanish fighter.

King, who flew to Miami to be with his wife and daughter on the latter's second birthday, was represented at today's meeting by his attorney, Abraham Segall, but the commission decided it could not go on with the investigation without King.

The commission received the following telegram from King: "My lawyer will represent me possessing sufficient evidence to definitely prove Louis Soresi has an interest in both Carnera and Gastanaga. Your attitude in making me a defendant instead of a witness to the investigation at your last meeting was unfair. My purpose in appearing was to clear up a terrible situation conflicting with the rules and regulations of the boxing commission.

"Not only did you illegally refuse to recognize my legal contract with Gastanaga, but you sanctioned and allowed the fight to go on with Gastanaga weighing 15 pounds above his best fighting weight and obviously in the worst condition of his career. He could not shadow box, let alone fight a big man like Carnera for five rounds. For what purpose only Soresi can explain. Everybody in New York knew of the situation weeks before it finally reached the ears of the boxing commission.

Skating Queen Eyes Career In Movies

Sonja Henie Is Certain She Won't Marry Soon; May Turn Pro.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Sonja Henie, queen of the world figure skaters, arrived in New York today with some very definite and some not so definite ideas regarding her future.

The Norwegian girl, holder of the world title since 1926 and winner of three Olympic crowns, is sure she's through with competition. She's just as certain she is not going to get married right away—at least not to her friend, Jeff Dickson, an American, who is well known for his European sports promotion.

But she doesn't know whether she will go into the movies or turn professional. She's leaving that up to her manager and her parents. Sonja has had several offers; she plans to take a screen test this week before going to Hollywood.

Wants to Take a Rest.

"Sure, I'd like to be another Greta Garbo, but who wouldn't?" asked Sonja smilingly. "Maybe I'll be lucky and get in the movies, but right now I am more interested in taking a long rest.

"I'm tired of keeping in condition all the time. After all, I've won ten world championships and three Olympic titles. What more is there for me to do? I always want to skate, but only in exhibitions."

Sonja is not sure that she'll appear with the American champions, Maribel Y. Vinson and Robin Lee, in the charity ice carnival at Madison Square Garden, March 22 and 25. It all depends on what "papa decides."

She hastened to add, however, that she had brought her skates along, just in case——. She'll probably have them on before she has been in New York 24 hours.

Board Leader Says Faber Will Stay

Is Silent, However, on Rumor He Will Get Executive Post.

Ex-Richmond Mentor to Take Reins at Spring Drills Today.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

FRANK DOBSON, "field coach" of the University of Maryland's 1935 football team in name, and head coach in fact, yesterday arrived at a satisfactory agreement with the school's athletic board to serve as head coach, on and off the field, of the 1936 Terrapin eleven.

Dobson's appointment was not officially announced, however, as Dr. L. B. Broughton, chairman of the athletic board, said the lanky football strategist had not been signed for the year, but merely had agreed to handle the squad in spring practice while Jack Faber, "head coach" last autumn, assumed charge of the lacrosse squad.

But from a reliable source close to the president's office, The Post learned that Dobson would succeed to full authority in the fall. Dr. Broughton said Dobson "very likely will be" appointed head coach, but added quickly that Faber "would be taken care of."

Mum on Rumor

Another rumor that Faber would be given an executive office similar to director of athletics was neither denied nor affirmed by Broughton. He indicated that the athletic organization plans were not far enough advanced to discuss that phase. Faber, he declared, will be associated with football if he cares to be.

The Post further learned that Dobson would return at a substantial increase in salary, which, however, will be considerably less than the $7,000 he asked. Dr. Broughton refused to comment on this, pointing out that salaries are not revealed or discussed.

There will be no violent eruption of the coaching staff at the Old Line school, inasmuch as it has always been the policy of H. C. Byrd, recently appointed president, to maintain a policy of senority regarding athletic positions, and even though Byrd is supposed to have severed all connection with sports, he will not approve the advancement of

THE SCOTCH THAT CIRCLES THE GLOBE

Popular Scotch from CALCUTTA to CLEVELAND

All over the English-speaking world, McCallum's Perfection Scotch Whisky is the password to friendly and superior drinking. The uniformity of this Scotch whisky is proverbial. It has been made by the same Edinburgh family since 1807. Every golden drop of it is eight years old before it is sold. McCallum's Perfection Whisky comes from Scotland in taped, sealed, tamper-proof bottles with distinctive jigger measuring top.

Merritt Rides Bright Haven to Victory in Tropical Inaugural

Third Choice To Score in 5 Events

Returns $6.20 Mutuel; 8,000 Fans Witness First Program.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 10.—The third and final lap of Florida's successful racing season got under way as the first of 23 days' sport opened the Gables Racing Association's session here today. Top honors went to the Sage Stable's highly fancied sprinter, Bright Haven. Under Bobby Merritt's hustling handling, the New York-owned 5-year-old easily captured the purse in the Pan-American Handicap of 6 furlongs.

Two lengths back came W. C. Stroube's fast filly, Bay Bubble, which lasted to save the place by a half-length from Quel Jeu, Arden Farms veteran. Eight horses went postward, with Bright Haven, recently victorious at Hialeah Park, paying $6.20 for $2. The son of Bright Knight was the third choice to score in five races.

Despite week-end storms the racing strip had packed down to fast condition for the opening program. Bright Haven, under 120 pounds, skimmed home in 1:11 flat. It was an ideal day and some 8,000 fans welcomed the horses back to the "friendly track."

Governor Looks On.

The crowd included Florida's Governor, Dave Sholtz, an ardent admirer of the sport, after whom the fourth event was named.

Spectators had a scare when Go Home tossed Apprentice R. Kastner at the far turn, but the boy arose unaided, lucky to escape injury.

Bay Bubble, the one expected to give Bright Haven a stiff tussle, outbroke the favorite, but was unable to outrun him. Merritt swung his mount into a clear advantage around the bend and did not take any chances in the short stretch, pumping Bright Haven along until he reached the wire by himself. Bay Bubble could not menace the winner and was hard pushed to save the place.

The victor's share of the $1,500 added purse was $1,145.

with Bill Bennings.

Tropical Park, March 10.

Dear Al:

Officials here have not yet decided upon the type of "electric eye" they will use permanently. At present there are two cameras in operation and, while the judges are referring to their pictures, the men are placing the numbers as usual. In a day or two, the track will pick one camera or the other. A check-up on the profits of the Hialeah meeting reveals a sum of about $300,000 on the right side of the ledger. It cost in the neighborhood of a half million dollars to conduct the 45-day meeting. Jockey Johnny Gilbert will end his Florida riding for the season Saturday. He is scheduled to report to his contract employer, John Hay Whitney, at Washington's Benning track on Monday. Gilbert will gallop horses for Trainer Healey. He will swing into saddle action again on opening day at Bowie. The Whitney firm has some good juveniles which it hopes to have ready by that date. Bennings, Inc., will have an important announcement to make in this column tomorrow morning. BILL.

First race—Moane Keala, Regula Baddun and Balmacan seem destined to battle it out for the day's opening purse. These horses are all dead fit and should make a merry contest of it. Clocker Mike says Slave will like the shift of tracks and may awake.

Second race—Fanle has a slight edge on the maiden fillies to match speed in this sprint. She draws Ira Hanford for the saddle assignment and should graduate in this company. Byrdyne and Count Ten to take care of the others.

Third race—Waterset gets in this with only a steadying 110 pounds and appears ready to win. Kawagoe must give the top one 9 pounds, but will be a serious contender. Starogan may go well under Coucci's urging.

Fourth race—Sciva gets an inside post position for the juvenile test and deserves the call despite the 116-pound assignment. Wall will do the riding. Dark Friend and Legion have good races to recommend them. It might be well to remember that the juvenile races here start at the far turn and are not run on a straightaway as is the case at Hialeah.

Fifth race—Gentlemen jockeys at Carnera weights will ride the platers booked to march postward in this event. Big Red, with C. Bassett, the steeplechase jockey, aboard, seems the best suited. Buzzing Around and Wizard for the other awards.

Seventh race—Dark War, Prince Drake and Phildia is the way I prefer them in this sprint. Light weight gives the first named the edge.

Eighth race—Cachalot has that fine performance at Hialeah to recommend in this event. Seawick and Jubilargo will be the other money horses, I do believe.

Best bet—Crinoline.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRETTY BUSY, $11.20, $5.10, $3.90; MISS SUBWAY, $4.20, $2.90; ROYAL VIXEN, $3.70.

PRETTY BUSY, saving ground in the early stages while holding a forward position, rallied strongly when taken to the outside of MISS SUBWAY, came determinedly under a drive and was up in the last sixteenth. MISS SUBWAY went close to the early leaders, assumed a slight lead when reaching the homestretch, but could not withstand the winner under strong pressure.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs; claiming. Purse, $700. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 2:53. Off at 2:53½. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Winner, William N. Adrians' ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAECLOUD, $12.20, $5.90, $3.90; LUCKY DUCKY, $8.70, $5.10; MAYRO, $3.70.

MAECLOUD, obtaining clear racing room from the start, came around LUCKY DUCKY when reaching the homestretch, came vigorously under a hard drive and took command in the final sixteenth to win under stout handling. LUCKY DUCKY, avoiding crowding that took place directly after the start, gained a clear lead leaving the backstretch, saved ground and held on tenaciously when forced to a hard drive.

FOURTH RACE—One mile; allowances. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 3:56. Off at 3:57. Start good for all but Greek Idol. Won ridden out; place driving. Winner, Southland Stable's lt. b. c. (3), by Ariel—Halki. Trained by Clifford Porter. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:38 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CEILING, $4.10, $2.40, $2.30; COMBAHEE, $3.40, $2.80; MICROBE, $3.50.

CEILING, taken in hand when SPEED was rushed to the front, went along smoothly until sent into the lead midway of the backstretch, opened up a winning advantage, but had to be hustled along to make certain of victory. COMBAHEE rallied nicely when placed to strong pressure and finished full of run.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Pan American Handicap. Purse, $1,500 added. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 4:26. Off at 4:33. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Winner, Sage Stable's b. g. (5), by Bright Knight—Rockhaven. Trained by D. C. Harrison. Value to winner, $1,145; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $75. Time, 1:11.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHT HAVEN, $6.20, $3.50, $3.10; BAY BUBBLE, $3.70, $3.50; QUEL JEU, $3.80.

BRIGHT HAVEN had splendid speed to take command after the first sixteenth, went along stoutly to set a fast pace and was stoutly ridden until the close. BAY BUBBLE broke swiftly, followed in chase of the winner all the way and held on well to stall off QUEL JEU. Latter away slower than usual, weaved his way between horses to reach a forward position, swung to the outside for the final test and closed resolutely.

SIXTH RACE—One mile; claiming. Purse, $700. For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 5:05. Off at 5:07. Start good. Won cleverly; place driving. Winner, Tranquillity Farm's br. f. (3), by Jock—Cleo Margaret. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BARBARA A., $6.30, $3.30, $2.40; AURA, $3.20, $2.70; GALLOPING $3.70.

BARBARA A., rated back of the pacemaker for the first six furlongs, took command under pressure when leaving the backstretch, rallied nicely when challenged and outstayed AURA when the real test came. AURA, steadied close up from the beginning, challnged stoutly when approaching the homestretch, but was unable to stay during the closing drive. GALLOPING sprinted into an easy lead, was rated until threatened, but was unable to keep pace when caught.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:36. Off at 5:39½. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Winner, William N. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED BADGE, $30.80, $15.00, $7.90; CROWNED HEAD, $5.20, $3.90; EL PUMA, $3.50.

RED BADGE, showing sharp improvement, outran her field to the first turn, was rated along while enjoying a long lead, saved ground and rallied nicely to withstand CROWNED HEAD. Latter raced closest to the winner from the start, and came stoutly when put to a hard drive. EL PUMA was taken to the outside when straightened on the backstretch, then improved his position readily under severe pressure.

Old Line Shifts Ring Line-up For Duel

A REVAMPED Maryland boxing team, featuring Ivan Nedomatsky, Southern Conference welterweight champion in the 155-pound class, will have it out with the battling Badgers of Wisconsin Friday night at Madison, Wis. The line-up for this, the Old Liners' last duel meet of the season, was announced last night.

Nedomatsky, who began his collegiate career last year as a lightweight, and the best in the business at that, was obliged to shift his activities to the welterweight division this winter because of increased weight which could not be melted off. After surviving 1935 undefeated, Ivan neglected his boxing to such extent that he lost several decisions last winter and was held to a draw.

Won In Conference.

He perked up in the conference championship free-for-all, however, and belted out two opponents to win his second title. This 155-pound class, though, is the toughest assignment the rugged Catonsville sandman has attempted and Wisconsin boasts one of the country's most potent leather-pushing squads. But Ivan says he'll win, or at least stir up some excitement before losing.

Spike Webb, who waged an unsuccessful battle for the conference lightweight crown two weeks ago, will move up into the 145-pound class, where he rightfully belongs, and Morty Schwartz will be reinstated as lightweight. Morty didn't fare so well in dual meets this year but has been looking good in the gym and Terp supporters hopefully look for a form reversal.

Gormley Moved Up.

Johnny Gormley, who has been doing Maryland's light-heavyweight scrapping, has been shoved upstairs with the big fellows and his position entrusted to the care of Blair Smith, a rookie. But still another newcomer to the ranks will fight in the 125-pound class, Bob Slye, who made an auspicious debut against V. M. I., and who seems destined to win a regular berth next season.

Tom Birmingham, regular 125-pounder, will not appear because of two bad gashes over the eyes suffered in the conference tournament. It was decided not to risk serious injury by using him against the Badgers.

The other weights will be held down by Charlie Gebhardt or Ed Shegogue, 115, and Mike Lombardo, 165 pounds.

McDonald Will Give Air Talks From Camp

Arch McDonald, WJSV sports commentator, will leave Washington tonight for Orlando, Fla., where the Washington Nationals are training for the forthcoming season. Beginning next Friday, McDonald is to conduct his Peoples Sports Review directly from the training camp.

McDonald will broadcast on March 13, 15, 17, 19, 22, 24 and 25, while Ted Church, program manager of WJSV, will be heard March 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 21, 23, 26, 27 and 28.

Rinaldi Quintet Will Seek National A. A. U. Crown at Denver

Runners-up In Post Play Add Stars

Kiesel, Lieb and Shore to Make Trip With Strong Team.

By DAVE HERMAN.

RINALDI TAILORS are going to Denver this week to play in the National A. A. U. championship and attempt to prove that they boast one of the best basketball teams in the country.

Vanquished by George Washington University freshmen Monday night, 22-20, after an extra period finals game of the District A. A. U.-Washington Post tournament, the Taylors, with a greatly strengthened team, plan to leave for the Colorado metropolis late Thursday night.

The Colonial yearlings, who sprang such a stunning upset by decisioning Rinaldi, were in line for the trip, but Director of Athletics Max Farrington stated yesterday it would be impossible for them to go.

Gets Quick Response.

As soon as this news reached the ears of Winfree Johnson, District A. A. U. basketball chairman, he contacted Davey Keppel, Rinaldi coach, and Leo Rinaldi, team backer. The latter gave his OK to the trip.

Funds to make the trip possible will come from various sources. The National A. A. U. has agreed to give $350, the local A. A. U. around $300 and Mr. Rinaldi will help make up the balance.

In an attempt to raise the money for the trip, arrangements were virtually completed for a game tomorrow night between Rinaldi and an all-District college five. This game will be played at Heurich's gym, Twenty-sixth and D streets, scene of The Post tournament contests, and a banner crowd is expected.

Permission to bolster his team for the national tournament, which is tantamount to an Olympic trial, was granted Coach Keppel by Chairman Win Johnson. Hal Kiesel, George Washington's all-city center; Bernie Lieb, Catholic University's all-city center-forward; Carroll Shore, former Central High and 1935 Georgetown frosh star, will play in Denver.

They have played with Rinaldi in numerous games, but were not eligible for the District A. A. U. championships.

Gains Experienced Men.

Addition of Kiesel, Shore and Lieb gives Rinaldi not only greater scoring power, but height and experience.

Others who will make the trip are Ollie Tipton, Sammy Hook, Bill Noonan, Bobby Lucas, Cliff Keyser and Pickles Walker.

Coach Keppel plans to use Kiesel at center, Lieb and Lucas at forward, and Shore and Tipton at guard. Hook, Kiesel, Shore, Lucas and Tipton were members of the great Sholl's team that went to the fourth round of the national championship at Kansas City two years ago.

In tomorrow night's games Tommy O'Brien, of George Washington, and Herbie Schmarr, of Catholic University, wil play forward; Ben Goldfaden, of George Washington, center; Bucky Buscher, of Maryland, and Harry Bassin, of Georgetown, guard.

Germantown's Club Named

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 10.—The United States Lawn Tennis Association, yielding to Australia's wish, announced today that the anticipated North American Zone Davis Cup final between the Aussies and Uncle Sam's representatives will be played on the grass courts of the Germantown Cricket Club, near Philadelphia.

The matches have been scheduled tentatively for Memorial Day week-end in May, assuming that Australia eliminates Cuba and the United States disposes of Mexico in first-round matches.

Because few grass courts are in condition for play in the spring and consequently the American players will have had little opportunity to practice on them, American officials had hoped to play the matches on clay. The grass season in Australia, however, has just closed and the Aussies weren't keen to play on a hard surface.

Government Basketball Play Opens With Upset

The United States Government Basketball League championships got under way last night at the Y. M. C. A. In a preliminary-round game Veterans' Administration defeated Farm Credit, 22-21, in a hard-fought game. Patent Office, with Hal Kiesel, of G. W., at center, upset the seeded P. W. A. team, 23-16, while Investigation romped over State Department, 36-3.

Thursday's games: 7:45 p. m. Veterans vs. H. O. L. C.; 8:45, G. A. O. Auditors vs. Indian Bureau; 9:45, Investigation vs. Patent Office.

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 10. Those merry Brooklyn Dodgers stand out as the year's No. 1 mystery team in the National League. As to whether they'll pace the second division again, sink to the lowly levels of the Phillies and Boston Bees, or even edge into the upper bracket, one guess is as good as another.

Maestro Casey Stengel is as much in the dark as anybody. All he knows is he has a flock of ball players down here. He hasn't the faintest idea who'll be where, or why, when the time comes to answer the opening gong.

"We're going to try one of those noble experiments," said Stengel today. "That is, we're going to toss a lot of ivory into the hopper and see what comes out."

First year men hold the key to the situation. While the 1936 Brooklyns are sure to be stronger in some spots, how they'll shape up in others depends entirely on the work of some of the colts.

During the winter Stengel made three big deals, involving 13 players and nearly $60,000 in cash, with the Giants, Bees and Newark Internationals.

The Sox spent the entire afternoon in batting practice.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 10.—Lou Gehrig and Pitcher Bump Hadley suffered badly twisted ankles today as the Yankees went through a long workout on a muddy field. Lou's injury came after he missed a terrific swipe at the ball in batting practice. Hadley was hurt fielding a grounder.

New York, March 10.—Hank Greenberg, slugging first baseman of the World Champion Detroit Tigers, tonight charged the club management with trying to "put me on the spot" after he had received another salary offer which he said was identical with the original one which he refused.

Greenberg, a product of the sidewalks of New York, said the latest overture, in a letter which he received today, was an attempt on the part of the Detroit management to make it appear that he was being unreasonable in the negotiations. He said he was not at liberty to name the figure offered by the club.

New Orleans, March 10.—Manager Steve O'Neill divided his Cleveland Indians into what he believed were two teams of "equal strength" today, but the combination of Bruce Campbell and Hal Trosky resulted in a 10-3 victory for their side.

Campbell garnered a triple and single and batted in four runs. Trosky smacked out a homerun with two on bases and added a double.

O'Neill worked six regular pitchers. They hurled for both outfits, each getting in the equivalent of a normal three innings of work.

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 10. Manager Roger Hornsby was unworried today at the continued absence of Jack Burns, the Browns' holdout first baseman.

"Who'll take his place?" The Rajah queried back. "Me—or Hal Warnock." Warnock, an outfielder, came to the Browns at the tail-end of last season from the University of Arizona.

4 'Inter-High' Schools To Vie in Mat Tourney

Four of the five schools in inter-high Washington sports will be represented in the first annual high school and junior wrestling championships to be held Friday and Saturday at Powell Junior High. Eastern, Central and Tech all had athletes entered last night. Chairman Tom Clayton of the District A. A. U. is conducting the event.

Among the Eastern aspirants were Roy Michaels, speedy halfback of the Lincoln Parkers' football team; Billy Kemp, hard-tackling center; Abe Cohen, guard, and Norman Abelman, a reserve. Other Eastern boys to compete were Kirk Miller, Roy Gotses, Ray Willard, James Ford and Robert Strong.

Entries may be made until 5 p. m. tomorrow with Captain Langmack at Powell Junior High and at the Y. M. C. A. The preliminary rounds will be held Friday afternoon and night and the finals Saturday night.

Maryland Five Beats Georgetown, 38 to 29

Running up a 17-9 lead in the first half, Maryland defeated Georgetown last night, 38-29, in an inter-mural basketball game at College Park. Jack Stonebraker and Charley Ellinger, varsity football stars, led the winning attack.

Girls Pin Team Boosts Lead In League

THE Shamrock girls again demonstrated that they are the team to beat in the race for the championship of the Washington Ladies League by defeating the Vee Bees last night at the Recreation drives. By shellacking the Vee Bees three games, the Shamrock's pulled away to a 10-game lead over their closest rivals.

Tied for second place with the El Gees, the Columbians felt the sting of the Colonials' attack when the latter, in winning two games, tied their season record set of 587 and finished their string with a three-game total of 1,605. The El Gees gained the deadlock for the runner-up position with an odd game decision over the Beequees, and the Cardinals stopped the Nomads twice.

Georgie Hays, Colonial star, was the big shot of the night, carrying away individual game and set laurels with 151 and 387, respectively.

First place is at stake tonight in the Department Store League at Recreation, with the leading Woodward & Lothrop team clashing with the second place S. Kann Sons Co. The teams are separated by only one game, and with but five more weeks of activity left, a real battle is assured.

The third annual St. Patrick's Day mixed doubles sweepstakes, sanctioned by the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, which will attract about 40 couples of leading stars from the District, Baltimore, Richmond, Norfolk and Connecticut, will be rolled Saturday at the Silver Spring alleys.

Held in Norfolk, Va., for the last two years, the event was moved to the Silver Spring drives this season, when Earle Stocking, originator of the stakes, took over the Maryland plant.

The event will consist of 10 games in two 5-game blocks.

Colmar A. C. to Meet.

The Colmar A. C. will hold a baseball organization meeting tonight at 7 o'clock at 118 Pershing avenue, Colmar, Md. The following players are requested to be present: Deck, Van Pelt, Higgs, Wessberg, France, Whitt, Mayo, Etter, Stack, Anderson, Miller, Lightbown, Bowie, Redmond, Thompson, Ferguson, O'Neill and Colbert.

Sandy Spring, Typos Reach Cage Final

SANDY SPRING, defending titleholder, and United Typewriter, both pretournament favorites, reached the final of the girls senior division of the District A. A. U.-Washington Post basketball championship last night at Heurich's gym.

Sandy Spring was given an unexpectedly strong battle by Garfield, before triumphing, 27-23, and the Typos also were pressed to eliminate Leland, 32-27.

The Typos and Sandy Spring will clash for the title either tomorrow or Friday.

Virginia Jones, fast-moving little Typo forward, was the night's high-point scorer, garnering 18 points. Her teammate at forward, Anna Honabach got 14; Lily Lee scored 16 for Leland. At half time the Typos were in front, 12-10.

Garfield trailed Sandy Spring, 14-11, at the turn, and made a gallant but unavailing eleventh-hour challenge. Miss Davis, Garfield forward, scored 14 points. Although held to 9 points, Miss Trundle, of the winners, was outstanding from whistle to whistle.

At 7:30, Boys Club Americans and Northeast Boys Club clash at 7:30 for the 115-pound title. At 8:30 Cook's Flashes will face Bovello Plumbers, and at 9:30 Merrick Boys Club and Twin Oaks Black Hawks will clash in 145-pound games.

Tomorrow night at 7 o'clock at the Washington Boys' Club, Langley Boys' Club and Washington Boys' Club Red Birds are to meet for the 100-pound title.

Lynch and Markey Win Squash Tests

With two of Washington's foremost tennis players, Hugh Lynch and Bud Markey, still well in the running, the first annual District A. A. U. squash racquet championships will go into the quarter-final round tonight on the Y. M. C. A. courts.

Yesterday's Results.

Hugh Lynch (Edgemoor), defeated J. D. Farnum (Y. M. C. A.), 3-0; A. C. Minnix (Y. M. C. A.), defeated R. O. Glockler (Racquet Club), 3-0; E. B. Brownell (Y. M. C. A.), defeated W. V. Davis (Naval Air Station), 3-0; T. S. (Bud) Markey (Edgemoor), won from Lieut. S. K. Robinson (Bolling Field), by default; Farrand Flowers (Y. M. C. A.), won from Dooley Mitchell (Edgemoor), by default.

Faber is certain to reach an amicable agreement with athletic authorities concerning his position next season. Even if he were to be removed completely from the sports scene it would make little difference to him as he is a member of the faculty, teaching bacteriology.

Dobson, who came to Maryland from the University of Richmond, will assume charge of spring training today. His biggest task will be developing men to fill the shoes of linemen who will be lost by graduation. He will have a squad of about 40 men to work with during the spring. A majority of the varsity gridmen are trying out for other teams.

16th Straight Victory To Mt. Rainier's Girls

Finishing its second straight year without a defeat in the Prince Georges County girls' basketball league, Mount Rainier High trounced Laurel High yesterday, 32 to 12, at Mount Rainier for its sixteenth straight league victory. This marked the third straight year that the Mount Rainier team has won the title. Louise Garilli led the scoring with 16 points.

Mamakos Wins By Knockout In A. A. U.

Stops Witkins in 3d Round No Upsets Recorded; 1,000 Look on.

By George Considine.

THE tenth annual District of Columbia Amateur Athletic Union boxing tournament made its bow to about 1,000 spectators last night at Turner's Arena and whittled itself to semifinal proportions. Although there were no upsets, every one of the ten bouts was a corker.

In what proved to be the best scrap, Steve Mamakos, 147-pounder, representing the Washington Boys' Club, rallied to win from Willie Witkins, of Jewish Community Center, via the knockout route in 1 minute and 35 seconds of the third round.

Mamakos ran into a straight left early in the match and took a nine count. He staggered up, however, and as his head cleared waged a two-fisted battle to score his kayo on a right to the chin. Exhaustion contributed materially to Witkins' downfall.

Bobby Rawson Wins.

In other excellent 147 pound bouts, Bobby Rawson, of the Jewish Community Center, shaded Dave Schlaifer, of the Olympic A. C. Bob Mathias knocked out Earl Stevens, of the Terminal "Y" and George Abrams, Washington Boys' Club, out-punched Glenn Drake, of the Terminal "Y".

The crowd booed long and lustily when Angelo Pappas, of the Washington Boys Club, was given a unanimous decision over Joe Pricci, 112-pound dancing master, wearing the colors of the Olympic A. C. It was the only instance where the spectators and judges did not thoroughly agree.

In tonight's most promising bouts Bernie Ferry, of the Washington Boys Club, ties up with Joe Petro, of the Police Boys Club, in the 112-pound class; George Pickeral, of the Olympic A. C., meets Johnny Nocente, of the Police Boys Club, and Steve Mamakos swaps swats with Bob Mathias.

All boxers involved in tonight's matches are requested to report at the arena at 7 o'clock. The matches will open an hour later.

Summary.

135-pound class—Whitey France (Terminal Y. M. C. A.) defeated Weston Beahm (Olympic A. C.), on decision.

147-pound class—Steve Mamakos (Wash. B. C.) knocked out Willie Witkins (J. C. C.) in 1 minute and 35 seconds of the third round.

Baltimore to Stage Olympic Mat Trials

Washington wrestlers aspiring to make the United States Olympic team must make their first bid for the honor Friday and Saturday, April 10 and 11, at the Central Y. M. C. A. in Baltimore. Chairman Tom Clayton, of the District A. A. U. wrestling committee, was notified yesterday that the Olympic tryouts will be held in the Maryland metropolis on the above dates.

Open to competitors of weights from the 123-pound class up, the Baltimore tryouts also will be for wrestlers competing in the South Atlantic A. A. U. and the Virginia A. A. U. sections as well as the District of Columbia A. A. U. locality. Local wrestlers interested must communicate with Wilson Groom, Central Y. M. C. A., Baltimore, Md.

Takoma Tigers Meet.

The Takoma Tigers baseball club will hold a meeting tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. at Ed Bladen's. The club will organize for the season and needs a couple of pitchers and a first baseman. The Tigers are expected to enter the Montgomery County League again. They are also seeking games. Players or teams interested call Georgia 5497 or Shepherd 2097.

Louis Naples to Play With Heurich Brewers

Louis Naples, former South West Market righthander, will play with the Heurich Brewers this season in the Industrial League. Naples is working out with the Brewers in the Heurich gym at Twenty-sixth and D streets northwest.

Naples proved such a headache to Heurich batters during the last Industrial League campaign that they brought him over and gave him a job in the brewery.

Steel Plants To Shade Price On Big Orders

New Schedule Unchanged Except for Discount Provision.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 10.—The first major steel producers announced today second-quarter prices on sheets about unchanged from the preceding quarter, but inaugurated a provision for quantity discounts for large users.

Republic Steel Corporation took the lead in adopting the new quantity discount system which provides for reductions of from $1 to $3 a ton, dependent upon the quantity released for shipment at one time. The discounts reached the maximum of $3 per ton on orders of over 150 tons.

"The new method of issuing prices has been adopted by Republic in expectation that it will lead to elimination of unfair trade practices which have grown up in the steel industry," T. M. Girdler, chairman and president of Republic, said.

Price Schedule.

The price of black sheets was set at 2.40 cents a pound, and the price of enameling sheets was set at 2.95 cents a pound, both unchanged from recently prevailing quotations.

A second innovation in steel pricing methods was contained in the corporation's statement accompanying the new prices in which it pledged itself to adhere to open-price practices. The official price list was published, embodying the statement that "if and when any change is made in the price as announced, supplementary or revised announcement will be issued."

Girdler stated that prices on products other than sheets will be issued as rapidly as lists can be compiled in the next few days.

Livestock Values Up 67% in Year

Chicago, March 10 (AP).—The average price paid for a car of livestock rose to $1,618 in 1935 from $967 in 1934, D. L. Swanson, executive manager, told the fourteenth annual convention of the Chicago Producers' Commission Association today.

He said the rise was due to the devaluation of the dollar, the drought, the crop control program and increased industrial activity.

Associated Power Output.

New York, March 10.—For the week ended February 29, Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output of 73,542,948 units, which is an increase of 9.5 per cent over the corresponding period a year ago.

Sugar Quotas Likely to Rise 200,000 Tons

Indications Are Beet Sugar Areas Will Fall Short.

AAA sugar officials are preparing to increase the Costigan-Jones sugar quotas for 1936 by approximately 200,000 tons, about 60,000 tons of which will be allotted to domestic producers and 140,000 tons to off-shore areas.

The AAA announced over the week-end that as a result of an investigation into the trend of sugar consumption in 1936, it is anticipated that total consumption will be close to that of the revised figure for 1935. The revised figure for 1935, which was announced March 7, is some 200,000 tons above the estimate of 1936 consumption made on December 28 last when the Costigan-Jones quotas for 1936 were announced.

According to present indications, says the Wall Street Journal, the beet sugar producing areas of the continental United States will not be able to fill their present quotas, so it is anticipated that any increase in quotas will go largely to Louisiana, Florida and the off-shore areas. The act provides that if any area is unable to deliver its full quota of sugar, the Secretary of Agriculture may prorate this deficiency among the other areas on the basis of their respective quotas and ability to supply the deficiency.

2.55% on U. S. Debt Record Low Rate

The average rate on the interest-bearing public debt of $29,449,803,670 on February 29 was 2.551 per cent, a low record since the Government's indebtedness has been of consequential proportions, the Treasury revealed today. The record high average rate was 4.339 per cent on June 30, 1921, when the interest-bearing debt was $23,737,352,080.

On June 30 1916, the average rate was 2.376 per cent on a debt of $971,562,590. The rate then increased annually until the peak in 1921, since which it has fallen consistently. The rate on June 30, 1935, was 2.715 per cent on a debt of $27,583,193,670.

$50,000,000 Bills 2.4 Times Subscribed

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announces that the tenders for $50,000,000 of 273-day Treasury bills, dated March 11, and maturing December 9, which were offered on March 6, have been opened at the Federal Reserve Banks.

The total amount applied for was $123,071,000, of which $50,000,000 was accepted.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent

Most Groups of Stocks Recover in Moderate Trading; Government Bonds Continue Down.

New York, March 10.—Security markets were nervous, less because of any fresh developments abroad than because of the sample given them in the closing few minutes of trading yesterday of what a concerted selling drive can do to prices. On the whole stocks moved upward and a large number of them recovered the great part of the previous day's losses. Government bonds continued to droop, and the dollar was firm. May wheat closed half a cent higher at 99⅝ cents a bushel.

Domestic news from Washington and industrial centers was largely crowded out as a securities market influence by the press of reports from Germany and Japan. Military preparations in the Far East are giving the markets some worry, but more immediately the prospect for a financial crisis in Japan, with inflation of the currency, is disturbing some sections of the market.

War Nervousness.

War talk and preparations are at least watering down the enthusiasm of the public for speculation and giving the stock market a greater professional flavor, which means that sudden breaks and rallies are to be expected. At the moment the public is not so sure it wants to buy stocks at prices which it would have favored when the advance was strong. However, the bulk of the holdings are not being disturbed. Large amounts of capital were poured into the markets at much lower prices, partly as a hedge against inflation in this country, partly as a better outlet than Europe afforded, and partly on growing confidence in our industrial revival. These influences still are at work and along with them is reluctance to take profits when the tax gatherer is so near.

Industrial news today was rather scanty. The monthly report on shipments made by the United States Steel Corporation, as that on sales made yesterday by the General Motors Corporation, showed that on a daily basis February was a somewhat better month than was January. On the whole, the past winter has been a favorable one for industry. No serious strikes took place and the alarmist talk of heavier breadlines and revolutions proved to be as empty as they were a few years ago. Industry's main worry now is taxes, and industrial leaders in their annual reports now being published are a unit in warning their stockholders that this year will bring a heavier burden of taxes and operating costs. One answer is that prices are likely to rise, but whether profit margins will also increase is a question more difficult to answer.

Foreign currencies were not without support. Some of it may have come from the open markets, which regarded the war news as less menacing, but most of it probably was a matter of central bank or governmental interference. Regardless of how soon fighting may begin, the cool fact is that all the important trading nations in Europe will immediately greatly increase their budgets for war preparations, and some of them can't stand much more without a considerable weakening of foreign exchange quotations. Sterling changed little, but the gold currencies moved up slightly. German currency is on virtually a fiat—and a forceful fiat—basis now. The Reichsbank's gold holdings cover circulation by less than 2 per cent. Yen were weaker.

Airplanes Rise.

Airplane stocks kept up the motion for the bulls. That section had its moments of doubt, but prices were well maintained. War at home or abroad, the speculators in airplanes think the outlook is bright for larger earnings. The Curtiss-Wright issues were the leaders in activity.

In the early dealings a fair rail market developed, but it was flagged down by the midday selling flurry. Steel was fairly sturdy throughout the session and gave heart to other parts of the list. A point or so was gained by Bethlehem, Otis and Republic. Buoyancy developed in the motor market in the first hour, with an upward range of 3 points in Chrysler and of 2 points in General Motors and strength was well maintained. Rail equipment and motor accessories climbed 1 to 3 points. General Railway Signal, Westinghouse Air Brake, Motor Products and Timken Roller Bearing were leaders.

Bank Position.

The most interesting feature of the weekly bank statement for March 4 is the disclosure of how banks in many sections of the country unloaded Government securities upon the New York market just before the recent offering of Treasury securities. Chicago banks liquidated $48,000,000; Richmond banks, $32,000,000, while New York banks were adding $20,000,000 and Boston banks were taking on $13,000,000. The amounts not acquired by banks evidently went to brokers and dealers, and this accounted for a large share of the $105,000,000 rise in brokers' loans in the New York district. Another feature of the reporting banks' figures was a rise of $33,000,000 in New York banks' holdings of Government securities, also derived from interior banks' holdings. Miscellaneous and commercial loans rose $44,000,000 in New York, $7,000,000 in Cleveland, $7,000,000 in San Francisco and $3,000,000 in other districts. The expansion was mostly connected with March 1 financial operations.

Acquiescence.

New Haven Railroad trustees seem to have decided to make the best of what they considered a bad bargain. In their petition for authority to buy 10 passenger locomotives and 50 modern coaches they say that they "anticipate that passenger traffic will continue to increase and may be substantially accelerated if passenger fares are materially reduced." They have not yet conceded the argument of the Interstate Commerce Commission that the increased traffic also would increase revenue. The commission itself was not too optimistic on this point. In refusing, last October 22, to permit an additional loan from the RFC, the I. C. C. criticised the road's estimate of a 10 per cent increase in revenues in 1936 by saying that it "did not include any allowance for possible loss in passenger revenue" and that "it is to be doubted whether passenger revenues for 1936 will show a 10 per cent increase over 1935."

Corporations Pay Executives 2.3% of Gross

Ratio of Compensation Lowest in Railroads and Utilities.

New York, March 10.—Compensation paid to executives represented only 2.3 per cent of the receipts of corporations in 1933, according to an analysis made by the National Industrial Conference Board. At the present time this slight percentage is even lower, since it declines with a rising volume of business. The ratio of compensation to receipts was found to be highest, 5.1 per cent in the case of service corporations and lowest, 0.8 per cent in the case of transportation and other public utilities.

Manufacturing corporations paid executive salaries representing, on the average, 2.0 per cent of their receipts. The percentage varied widely, however, in different industries, ranging from 0.6 per cent in the case of tobacco to 4.9 per cent in printing and publishing.

The significant reason for the varying percentages among the industries appears to be, not the nature of the industry, but its organization in large or small units. The ratio is highest in the case of smaller corporations. Corporations having less than $50,000 of assets paid 7.1 per cent of their receipts in salaries, while corporations with assets of $50,000,000 or more paid only 0.4 per cent.

Higher In Depression

The Conference Board's analysis also indicates that at no time during the depression have executive salaries tended to absorb an unreasonably large proportion of receipts. Between 1929 and 1932, the percentage tended to rise as a result of the decline in the volume of business. At the low point in 1932, manufacturing corporations paid 2.3 per cent of receipts to executives as compared with 1.8 per cent in 1929; mining and quarrying corporations, 2.3 per cent as compared with 1.4 per cent; transportation and other public utility corporations, 0.8 per cent as compared with 0.6 per cent; trading corporations, 2.7 per cent as compared with 2.2 per cent; service corporations, 5.0 per cent as compared with 5.2 per cent; and finance corporations 4.6 per cent as compared with 3.9 per cent. In practically all these fields, the proportion computed for 1933 was slightly less than in 1932.

The average salary of principal officers in manufacturing was $6,689 in 1929, the latest year for which data are available. The average in wholesale trade was $5,860; in mining, $4,915; and for steam railroads, $4,599.

$56,000,000 Bonds Soon to Be Filed

New York, March 10.—Two new bond issues amounting to about $56,000,000 are expected to be filed soon with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The city of Oslo, capital of Norway, is expected to file a registration statement with the SEC covering an issue of approximately $6,212,000 of 4½ per cent bonds, and the Consolidated Oil Corporation is expected to seek permission for the issuance of about $50,000,000 of 3½ per cent bonds.

Visible Grain Supply.

New York, March 10 (AP).—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes, in bushels: wheat decreased 2,938,000; corn increased 594,000; oats decreased 460,000; rye decreased 295,000; barley decreased 573,000.

Zinc Production.

New York, March 10 (AP).—Zinc production in the United States in February, it was stated today by the American Bureau of Metal Statistics, totaled 36,228 short tons compared with 41,917 in January and 33,468 in February, 1935.

Steel Ingot Output.

New York, March 10 (AP).—The American Iron & Steel Institute announced today that steel ingot production in February amounted to 2,967,803 tons, a daily average of 118,712 tons, compared with production of 3,049,439 tons in January, or a daily average of 112,942 tons.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Principal foreign currencies continued yesterday their comeback against the dollar, which began late Monday.

Banking quarters said that apparent easing of the European tension had lightened the pressure on foreign units.

The French franc rose .00⅛ of a cent in the New York market at 6.65⅛ cents and the pound sterling was ⅛ of a cent higher at $4.98⅛. Guilders at 68.50 cents and Swiss francs at 32.92 cents each improved .03 of a cent.

Earlier in London the dollar rose slightly to 4.98⅛ to the pound, while in Paris American balances gave a little ground at the equivalent of 6.648 cents to the franc.

Wheat Advances On Dust Threat

Chicago, March 10 (AP).—Fears of dust damage to crops Southwest and West acted as a new bugbear for wheat traders today, in place of European war scare reports. Kansas, Nebraska and Texas all sent news that dust storms were in progress, and as a result 1⅛ cents a bushel, maximum, was added temporarily to wheat values.

Wheat closed firm, ⅝@¾ above yesterday's finish; May, 99⅝@99½; July, 89½@89⅝; corn unchanged to ⅛ higher; May, 60¼@60⅜; oats, unchanged to ¼ up, and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to an advance of 2 cents.

Amoskeag Plans Cash Reorganization

Boston, March 10 (AP).—A reorganization plan designed to "rehabilitate rather than liquidate" the Amoskeag Manufacturing Co., which owns large textile mills in Manchester, N. H., was filed in Federal court today by John L. Hall, company attorney. The proposed reorganization, Hall said, would "recognize the rights of all interests" and would pay off all creditors in cash.

Federal Judge George C. Sweeney announced the reorganization would become effective within weeks unless objections of security holders were filed and sustained by the court in the meantime. The court said it would receive and pass on election of bondholders.

West. Electric Reports Profit; First Since '31

New York, March 10.—Further improvement in the business of the Western Electric Co. resulted in sales for the year 1935 of $105,417,000, an increase of 15 per cent over the sales for 1934. Sales to Bell Telephone Companies were $97,554,000 and to others $7,863,000.

For the first time since 1931 the operations of the Western Electric Co. and its subsidiary and associated companies resulted in a profit, the earnings for 1935 having been $2,620,279, which compares with a loss in 1934 of $7,751,548. For the 16 years prior, 1916-1931, the return on investment averaged 7 per cent and for the past 20 years, 1916-1935, averaged 4.5 per cent.

At the close of the year the company's plants were operating at about 27 per cent capacity, and the volume of business was sufficient to provide 5 days' work a week for the great majority of employes. The number of employes at the end of the year was 21,033 as compared with 17,148 in June, 1933, the low point in employment during the depression, at which time also the majority of employes were working 4½ days or less per week.

Edgar S. Bloom, president, said: "The year 1935 brought about further improvement in the affairs of your company and a continuance of business recovery throughout the country will mean further improvement in the telephone industry which should have a favorable effect on the business of the Western Electric Co."

Pittsburgh Plate Glass.

New York, March 10.—Net income of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. for 1935 amounted to $11,398,739 after the deduction of depreciation, depletion, losses and expenses in connection with property removals and Federal and State income taxes, according to the fifty-second annual report sent to stockholders today. The income is equivalent to $5.32 each on 2,142,353 shares of common capital stock, exclusive of 30,171 shares held in the treasury. In 1934 the company had a net income of $5,763,694, or $2.69 a share.

On December 31, 1935, current assets amounted to $45,013,998 and current liabilities $9,061,489, compared with $35,437,984 and $4,875,665 respectively at the end of the preceding year. Total taxes paid on accrued in 1935 amounted to $3,208,243, an increase of 82.4 per cent over the total of $1,758,232 in 1934. Pay rolls were 38.1 per cent higher last year than in 1934.

William Wrigley, jr., Co., and subsidiaries, makers of chewing gum with plants in Chicago, and abroad reported 1935 consolidated net income of $7,724,616, equal to $3.94 a share on 1,959,467 shares of capital stock, exclusive of treasury stock, compared with $7,854,285, or $4.92 a share on 1,952,041 shares in 1934.

Cleveland, March 10 (AP).—Otis Steel Co. reported today net earnings in 1935 of $2,228,664, the highest since 1929. This figure, after deduction of Federal taxes estimated at $395,000 and depreciation of $865,316, is equivalent to $1.69 per share on the common stock. It compares with a net profit of $560,891 in 1934.

Steel Corp. Shipments Decline in February

New York, March 10 (AP).—The United States Steel Corporation reported today a decline of 45,099 tons in shipments of finished steel products in February. Last month's total was 676,315 tons, compared with 721,414 tons in January.

Despite the decline in shipments from the previous month, the February total was the best for that month since 1931.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 10.—Calmness was maintained by traders today and a steadier trend developed in the stock market. Moderate repurchases were made in gilt-edged securities. Industrials and oils rallied, while transatlantic shares recovered part of their early weakness. Continental specialities remained unsettled. The closing tone was steadier.

Paris—The entire market, including rentes, regained about one-half of Monday's panicky losses, traders viewing the European situation as dangerous but war improbable. The market closed firm.

Liverpool—Wheat futures declined about one penny today due to small demand for cash grain, high sterling exchange and the improved European political outlook. Trading in cotton futures was restricted by a disposition to await European developments. Hedging and liquidation was absorbed by trade buying.

Inquiry Begun Into Arlington Bribery Charge

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 809. Clarendon, Va.

County and Federal authorities yesterday were investigating a bribe charge in connection with the construction of the sewage system which was to have linked Arlington County sewers with the disposal plant at Four Mile Run.

The Federal phase of the investigation was being undertaken by the Public Works Administration, which financed the project.

County engineers are studying the contract of the contracting firm of Morasco & Nickles, following the filing of a bribery charge against Louis Bishop, an inspector on the project. Bishop has admitted he received $500 from N. C. Nickles, a member of the firm, but denies it was a bribe. Nickles is reported to be in Kentucky.

The investigation will embrace the entire sewage system of the county as soon as county engineers complete their probe of the contract for the project and the charges against Bishop, George M. Yeatman, chairman of the county board, announced yesterday.

In charge of the project investigation are County Engineer C. L. Kinnier, Sanitary Engineer Richard Wirt, PWA Engineer Herbert M. Massey and A. T. Lundberg, of the Pittsburgh engineering firm in charge of the project.

Addressing the Young Democratic Club of Arlington County at its meeting at Clarendon last night, Representative Edward J. Hart, of New Jersey, declared that much

HERE'S THE DAY DOORMAN AND THE JANITOR THAT DISCOVERED HIM.
ALL I KNOW IS—OTTO AND I HEARD GROANS AS WE CAME BACK TO CHANGE OUR CLOTHES AND GO OFF DUTY—
IS THAT THE FIRST TIME YOU HAD SEEN HIM THAT DAY?
NO. FROM MY STATION OUT FRONT, I SAW HIM COME OUT OF BINDIE'S RESTAURANT, JUST ACROSS THE STREET, AND ENTER THE HOTEL 10 MINUTES BEFORE HE WAS FOUND.

Total War Debt Now Owed U. S. Is Over Billion

By the Associated Press.

As war-talk echoed over Europe yesterday, defaults on debts owed the United States from World War days skyrocketed over the billion-dollar mark for the first time.

The debtor nations are barred, under the Johnson act, from obtaining any further financial assistance in this country, but the unpaid cost of the last war and threats of a new conflict, have revived discussions of the entire debt problem in Congress.

A compilation by the Treasury disclosed that if Congress sets up a war debt commission—proposed by Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California, to review the question and seek a final and lasting settlement, it will grapple with a total debt of $13,670,087,391.28, of which $1,049,795,092.32 is now in default.

Unless the debtor natoins resume semiannual installments on which they are now—with the exception of Finland—repeatedly defaulting, or a new agreement is made, the default total will continue to mount at the rate of approximately $200,000,000 annually, payments due June 15 total $193,789,042.41.

Nine Man Commission.

McAdoo, who was Secretary of the Treasury at the time most of the debts were contracted, would establish a nine-man commission named by the President, Vice President and Speaker of the House, with authority to negotiate new agreements, subject to approval by Congress.

But both Chairman Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator Johnson (Republican) California, are oposed to the proposal, on the grounds that it would be an admission to the world that the United States was prepared to make further "compromises."

Despite previous agreements, scaling down the total owed by 15 European nations which funded their debt, the latest official Treasury figures show they are obligated for $12,059,394,250.77. In addition, Germany now owes $1,232,250,360.95, and the unfunded debt owed by Armenia, Nicaragua, and Russia amounts to $378,442,779.56.

Germany is in default on obligations totaling 196,350,000 reichsmarks (approximately $78,540,000) for payment of Army of Occupation costs and Mixed Claims awards.

Austria, $494,860.23; Belgium, $33,630,269.40; Czechoslovakia, $9,584,149.73; Estonia, $2,611,336.45; France, $250,292,292.86; Great Britain, $582,803,306.83; Greece, $4,426,507.85; Hungary, $290,381.27; Italy, $47,853,383.64; Latvia, $961,995.14; Lithuania, $776,319.97; Poland, $32,535,988.55; Rumania, $3,843,750.40, and Yugoslavia, $1,150,000.

Total Defaults.

With Germany excluded, the defaults total $971,255,092.32, of which $270,166,110.59 is unpaid principal, $623,176,280.70 in unpaid interest, and $74,912,701.03 is unpaid under moratorium agreement annuities.

Payments due June 15 (including an installment due from Greece on May 10) are:

Belgium, $9,142,453.88; Czechoslovakia, $1,682,812.78; Estonia, $322,850.29; Finland, $164,315.50; France, $74,787,725.89; Great Britain, $85,670,765.05; Hungary, $37,410.66; Italy, $15,641,593.38; Latvia, $134,883.26; Poland, $4,039,039.71; Rumania, $1,648,750.08; Yugoslavia, $350,000, and Greece, $532,887.93.

The United States has received under the original settlements and moratorium agreements $475,409,176.49 on principal and $1,318,913,038.79 interest.

Prior to the funding agreements, the United States was paid $281,990,396.99 on principal and $671,354,430.62 interest. Of the grand total of $2,747,667,042.89 received, Great Britain has repaid more than $2,000,000,000.

Tax Exemption of RFC Bank Stock Up Today

By the Associated Press.

As part of an effort to wipe out a previous House defeat of a similar measure, the House Banking Committee yesterday called hearings for today on a bill to exempt bank stock owned by the RFC from State and local taxation.

The action came within a day after Jesse Jones, RFC chairman, had written Speaker Byrns asking that the legislation be revived. It was passed by the Senate after a Supreme Court ruling that such holdings were subject to local taxation but met a setback in the House.

Burning Freighter Helpless in Fog

Boston, March 10 (AP).—Fog held the 3,300-ton North German Lloyd freighter Chemnitz at Boston Lightship tonight, unable to reach Boston Harbor to quench a threatening fire in her hold.

A Boston fireboat, after waiting more than five hours in the lower harbor in the hope the freighter could pierce the haze, returned to the dock.

Meanwhile, Boston agents of the line despatched a tug to the side of the burning vessel to determine if the freighter safely could remain at anchor all night and go up the harbor in the morning.

The agents, John G. Hall & Co., Inc., said they believed the blaze under control, since the Chemnitz had dispatched no further reports since swerving her course to Boston. The freighter left Philadelphia Saturday for German ports but raced landward again when the fire was discovered.

Conference Today On Tobacco Bills

Annapolis, Md., March 10.—A joint conference of the legislative delegations from the five southern Maryland counties has been called for tomorrow at 10 a. m. to consider tobacco legislation designed to protect growers.

The meeting will be held at the request of the Maryland Tobacco Growers' Association. George Gardiner will represent the association at the parley, while Robert Jameson, of Edelen Brothers, Baltimore commission firm, also will attend.

Senators and delegates from Prince Georges, Charles, Calvert, St. Marys and Anne Arundel counties have been asked to be present. Remedial legislation will be drafted for the General Assembly to assist growers in disposing of the remainder of their 1935 crop, particularly the low and medium grades, of which there is a surplus of approximately 12,000 hogsheads.

Virginia Births Fall Below 1934

Richmond, Va., March 10 (AP).—Preliminary figures of the State bureau of vital statistics indicated today that the total Virginia births for 1935 will be below the number for 1934 and possibly under the 1933 total, lowest in over 20 years.

Announcing that 50,800 births had been compiled for 1935 so far, Dr. W. A. Plecker, State registrar of vital statistics, said it was evident that the steady decline in the birth rate, temporarily interrupted in 1934, had again been resumed.

The figure will be swelled by late reports, but will hardly reach the 52,790 total registered for 1934, Dr. Plecker said. The 1933 total was 51,460. The all-time high in the State was 71,784 births in 1921.

"There is no doubt but that birth control practice is having a dysgenic effect upon our population," Dr. Plecker said. "I have seen figures which indicate that 50 per cent of our births come from that 25 per cent of our population which is lowest in the social scale."

D. C. Crime Unit Is Urgent Need, Warns Director

The organization of a crime commission for the District as "the most potent single factor in reducing the crime rate" was urged yesterday by James M. Hepbron, managing director of the Criminal Justice Commission of Baltimore, in a luncheon talk before the national committee on Federal legislation for birth control.

He criticized Gov. Harold G. Hoffman's delay of the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the murder of the Lindbergh baby as an "example of how long things can be dragged out and a Governor can make a farce of justice if he has a mind to."

"If a crime commission does no more than make justice move swift it will have proved worth while," he asserted.

"By no means, however, is a crime commission a cure-all," he continued. "There is no such thing as a cure-all for the problems of crime. However, the most potent single factor toward reducing crime is a more efficient administratoin of justice and a crime commission is the best way to bring out such an administration."

$15,000,000,000 Crime Cost.

Estimating the criminal toll in this country at $15,000,000,000 annually, Hepbron declared that the reason the United States leads the world in crime is because "under our administration of justice the criminal has too great a chance to get away."

"In European countries criminals are caught quickly and are dealt with immediately," he said. "In this country we have a lax, inefficient and corrupt administration of justice.

Hepbron ridiculed the ideas that the high crime rate in this country was due to emotional instability or the Nation's heterogeneous population or to economic conditions. Crime statistics, he said, revealed that crime rose with prosperity and decreased with depression."

Trial by jury in this country has "sunk to a pretty low level." Hepbron asserted, advising the adoption of the English system of drawing jurymen only from a list of reputable citizens. The dodging of jury duty by the better citizens in this country should be stopped, he stated.

Hepbron criticized the probation system for being too lenient and scored criminal lawyers for their questionable tactics.

Mrs. Long Denies Rumo She Is Engaged to Wed

Mrs. Huey P. Long, Senator from Louisiana, yesterday publicly denied that she is engaged to be married.

In a statement over the signature of her secretary, Earle J. Christenberry, it was said that such a report had been printed in a New York newspaper.

"I am authorized to state," Christenberry stated in the statement, "that no more damnable, deliberate untruth has ever been published."

Presidential Yacht Given Test in Bay

Norfolk, Va., March 10 (AP).—The new Presidential yacht, the Potomac, battled strong easterly winds in Chesapeake Bay and Lynnhaven Roads today on her trial run. She was formerly the Coast Guard cutter Electra, a new craft, and today was the first time she operated as a naval vessel.

High seas and a 25-mile wind hampered her to some extent on her trial, it was stated at the naval base where she moored for the night, but she did everything expected of her. Tomorrow she is scheduled to make another test, adjust her radio compass and have a full draught speed run for about 29 miles up the Chesapeake.

Lieut. W. R. Jones, United States Navy, is in command of the ship, which was converted from Coast Guard cutter to a Presidential yacht at the Norfolk Navy Yard. A deck cabin has been constructed on her main deck which will provide accommodations for 25 or more persons.

If weather tomorrow permits completion of the tests planned for the vessel, the Potomac will return to the Navy Yard Thursday. She is to have some finishing touches just before she proceeds to Washington, her home port.

Bail Cut Refused In Narcotics Case

Norfolk, Va., March 10 (AP).—On the Government's contention that Mrs. Elsie Zick Morse, 30, was linked with one of the largest narcotic rings ever uncovered in this section of the country, Judge Luther B. Way in Federal District Court today refused to reduce the $20,000 bond under which she is held in Hampton city jail. Mrs. Morse has a police record here.

"This woman is connected with a dope ring that extends all the way from New York to South Carolina," Assistant District Attorney Harry H. Holt, jr., told the court, "and whether she is a tool or not, she is one of the principals."

Mrs. Morse, on the stand, blamed her connection with the dope on Jack Morse, her husband, who has been sought by Federal authorities since a raid Wednesday afternoon on a rooming house.

Deputy Marshal H. L. Trimyer, one of the raiding squad which arrested Mrs. Morse, testified he found $4,500 in cash in her pocketbook and went with her to get $500 more from a Negro maid. This money, he said, is being held in the safe at the Hampton jail, where Mrs. Morse had been in custody.

Copyright Bill Charges Called 'Silly' by Duffy

Characterizing as "silly" charges before the House Patents Committee that the power trusts had influenced the preparation of the Duffy copyright act revision bill, Senator F. Ryan Duffy (Democrat), Wisconsin, yesterday appeared before the committee to explain the background of his bill.

The measure has been under heavy fire from creative artists of the country, in particular the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, who have been appearing before the committee to attack the measure. The ASCAP (shortened term for the society) members, chiefly song writers of the country, have asailed the bill on the ground that although its original purpose was sound, the numerous amendments added to the bill were dictated by motion-picture interests, broadcasting systems and hotel and tavern owners seeking to evade payment of royalty and other charges to composers of music.

Senator Duffy, a large, soft-spoken Irishman, with a drooping shock of iron-gray hair and horn-rimmed glasses, defended his bill in a long formal statement, and then responded to questions of committee members.

He said the measure had been drafted by two State Department men, two Government copyright experts, and a Department of Commerce expert in a series of meetings with him last summer. He later admitted that he had been unable to attend many of these meetings, but stated positively that only the men mentioned had anything to do with the preparation of the bill's rough draft, later revised and amended in the Senate.

He said the bill was "approved by all but selfish interests," indicating he meant the A. S. C. A. P. members, who he later characterized as "arbitrary and arrogant."

Questioned later by Representatives Daly, of Pennsylvania; Lanham, of Texas, and Sirovich, of New York, all Democrats, it was brought out, to Senator Duffy's surprise, that even the motion picture interests are now against the bill, as at present constituted, and that the American Federation of Labor, whose support he had claimed, is actively in opposition to the measure.

He also said the Authors League was for the bill. Representative Sirovich informed him that representatives of the Authors League had not only protested at the fact they were allowed but ten minutes to present their case against the measure before the Senate Patents Committee last session, but had asked for a hearing before the House group at this session to make clear their opposition.

Much of Senator Duffy's statement concerned what he called the "blackjack use" of the $250 minimum fine for infringement of copyright. This concerned a legal right of song writers to sue infringers, such as hotel owners, who use their music without paying the A. S. C. A. P. charges, which are distributed among composers, with the minimum damages set by the court legally figured at $250. Duffy, as had several Representatives, charged that A. S. C. A. P. used this provision as a club to compel submission of the small beer parlor owners and others to pay A. S. C. A. P. charges.

Representative O'Malley, of Wisconsin, asked Senator Duffy if the bill had the support of the Administration. The Senator said that it had that support in its inception, and he indicated his belief that it still possessed the sanction of the President, but he said he did not guarantee such support.

President Off Speakers' List For C. of C. Rally

For the first time in years neither the President nor any member of his Cabinet will be on the list of speakers before the Chamber of Commerce of the United States when that body holds its annual convention here next month.

It was revealed yesterday that the sending of invitations to address the chamber has been completed and no bid was sent to either the Executive or a member of his official family, despite the fact that numerous affairs of government are to be discussed at the session.

This was taken to mean that the differences between the President and the business interests represented by the chamber are as far from settlement as ever, despite the approach of the election campaign. The chamber has been among the most severe critics of the Administratoin policies, and the "breathing spell" proposal of Mr. Roosevelt some months ago has not appreciably lessened its criticism or opposition.

"Purely Business."

At chamber headquarters it was said that the session in the last week of April will be "purely a business-men's meeting." However, the program made public at the same time showed that vital Government policies will be among leading topics.

On the program are to be such subjects as effects of mounting taxes, the Federal budget and recovery, increasing employment by private enterprise and regaining foreign markets.

Also to be discussed in group ways to avoid government ownership, industrial relations, distribution, manufacturing and insurance.

Last year, when relations between business interests and the President neared the breaking point, Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, addressed the chamber's convention, and Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, spoke at a dinner of the American Trade Association Executives, held in connection with the convention.

Spoke Two Years Ago.

Two years ago the President spoke before the chamber, and in 1934 he sent a personal message, while Secretary Roper, Secretary Wallace, Eugene Black, then governor of the Federal Reserve Board, and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, and NRA administrator, addressed the members.

Meanwhile, it was made clear yesterday that the President is making no efforts to heal the breach with business. He is supporting the lobby investigation by Senator Hugo Black's committee, despite opposition of business interests to the committee tactics, it was asserted. He also was represented as determined to press his proposal to tax heavily the undivided corporation surpluses.

The Administration desire was said to be to wean away from its critics the small businessman and others in business circles who still are favorable to the President's policies. Along this line, the Patman-Robinson bill to curb price discriminations in favor of large buyers was cited as significant.

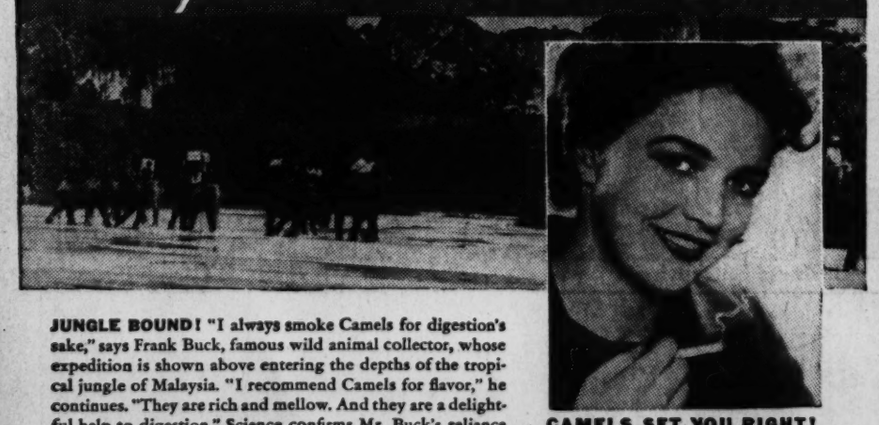
For Digestion's Sake—smoke Camels



JUNGLE BOUND! "I always smoke Camels for digestion's sake," says Frank Buck, famous wild animal collector, whose expedition is shown above entering the depths of the tropical jungle of Malaysia. "I recommend Camels for flavor," he continues. "They are rich and mellow. And they are a delightful help to digestion." Science confirms Mr. Buck's reliance upon Camels as an aid to digestion and well-being. It has been definitely established that smoking Camels increases the flow of digestive fluids and gives a cheering, comforting "lift"!

Senate Wire Seizures Illegal, Court Decides; Injunction Is Ordered

Western Union Barred From Giving Files to Committee.

Decision Is First To Halt Congress

Body Went Way Beyond Subpena Powers, Judge Rules.

By Felix Bruner.

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of the District of Columbia Supreme court ruled yesterday that the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee had gone "way beyond" the proper use of the right of subpena in seizing private telegrams.

In a history-making decision, Justice Wheat enjoined the Western Union Telegraph Co. from turning over to the committee messages sent and received by the Chicago law firm of Winston, Strawn & Shaw. The committee had subpenaed all messages sent and received by the firm during 10 months of last year.

The decision is believed to be the first instance in which a court has issued an order restraining any action of Congress.

Confident of Senate.

Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the lobby committee, declared he was "confident the Senate will not submit to an unconstitutional restriction of its own constitutional functions." Previously he had hinted that he would ask the Senate for legislation forbidding courts jurisdiction in such a procedure. After the decision, he said he would consult the full committee before making the next move.

Justice Wheat rendered his decision orally from the bench after he had interrupted arguments that had gone on for more than four hours.

Stopping a rebuttal argument by Frank J. Hogan, attorney for the law firm, Justice Wheat said:

"Mr. Hogan, I do not believe that I want to hear any more.

"I have listened to the case very fully. It has been fairly argued on both sides. It does not make any difference whether it is Mr. Silas Strawn or who it is.

"Unreasonable Search."

"The claim was made that this subpena which has been served upon the telegraph company amounts to an unreasonable search and seizure, and is therefore violative of the legitimate powers of the Senate committee. It is purely a question of law. I would be the last one in the world to claim any right to interfere with the powers of the Senate, or with the exercise of its legitimate discretion. Where it has discretion, I have nothing else to say about it, nor has any other judge. Where it has power, and that power is validly exercised, I have nothing to say about that.

"The claim is made here by the plaintiffs who, it seems to me, have a legitimate interest, that they will be seriously affected by obedience to this subpena upon the Western Union Telegraph Co. I think that they have a legitimate cause of action. I think that the court has jurisdiction, and, in effect it is an action to protect them in their rights under the Fourth Amendment of the Constitution.

"Feeling as I do, that this subpena goes way beyond any legitimate exercise of the right of the subpena duces tecum, I think that I am bound to grant the injunction as prayed for. That is the view that I take of it, that this subpena goes way beyond the legitimate use of the subpena duces tecum, and that the plaintiffs here have a legitimate interest in the controversy, and they have the right to be protected by the court when they claim protection under the fourth amendment of the Constitution."

Appeal Seen Remote.

Possibility of appeal of the case appeared remote. The Senate committee was not a party to the suit, but was represented by Crampton Harris, Alabama lawyer, as a "friend of the court." Paul Lesh, attorney for the Western Union and for T. B. Kingsbury, Western Union manager, the only defendants, told the court that the company held a "nonadversary" attitude toward the case.

Harris intimated in his arguments that the committee might choose to ignore the court order and demand that Kingsbury bring in the telegrams. He added that if the Western Union manager refused he might be held in contempt of the Senate. If he should deliver the

'Fool,' 'Jackass' Cries in House; Threat of Fist Fight Is Voiced

Catcalls and Jeers Bring Scathing Lecture on Dignity by Byrns.

By the United Press.

Angry shouts of "fool" and "jackass," catcalls, jeers and a challenge to a fist fight threw the House of Representatives into turmoil yesterday and brought nearly 400 members a scorching lecture on dignity from Speaker Joseph W. Byrns.

Representative Clare Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, asked permission to extend his remarks in the Congressional Record and add "about an inch" of data.

Representative Zioncheck (Democrat), Washington, recently convicted of disorderly conduct following a New Year's Day prank in which he jangled all the telephones of an apartment house here, arose and asked mischievously:

The House roared. Zioncheck flushed and laughed good naturedly. He bobbed up again a few moments later when Representative William A. Ekwall (Republican), Oregon, blond and chunky, sought permission to make a 5-minute speech explaining his attitude toward communism.

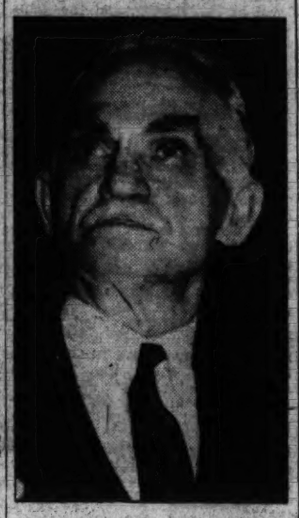
"If anyone could have made a bigger jackass of himself than the gentleman from Washington, I don't know who it is," Ekwall shouted.



SPEAKER BYRNS.

Party leaders leaped to their feet. A dozen voices clamored for recognition. Chairman John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York, of the Rules Committee, demanded Ekwall's words be "taken down"—a move

Tax Exemption Due for Banks, Underwriters

Sub-Committee Also Near Agreement on 'Cushion' in Corporate Levy.

By Robert C. Albright.

House tax conferees last night reached virtual agreement to exempt banks and insurance companies from operations of the new corporations earning tax, and were near a similar understanding on "cushioning" small corporation surpluses against heavy taxation.

Breaking nearly a week's impasse on both issues, the Ways and Means tax sub-committee cloaked its progress with a strict secrecy rule, after new Treasury schedules revived hopes for safeguarding moderate corporate reserves against serious tax inroads.

Nearly a score of new tables were laid before the sub-committee by Treasury experts, four of which carried rates that would not only "cushion" reserves, but yield the full $620,000,000 annual revenue the President insists is needed.

Although the sub-committee arrived at no formal decision, it is understood a predominant majority favor the "cushion" principle and need only to pass definitely on the rates to be applied.

Schedule Favored.

One of the rate schedules most favored, which would yield all of the revenue required, and still offer a rate of taxation light enough on the lower brackets to permit accumulation of what members consider a reasonable surplus to be covered into reserve, is the following:

Undistributed Earnings (Per Cent)	Tax (Per Cent)
Up to 5 per cent	15 per cent
5 to 15 per cent	30 per cent
15 to 25 per cent	45 per cent
25 to 35 per cent	50 per cent
Over 35 per cent	55 per cent

Treasury statisticians told the sub-committee that corporate reserves over the past 15 years have averaged about 30 per cent of corporate earnings, and it was with a view to subjecting that first 30 per cent to a lower or "cushion" tax rate that the new levies were ordered compiled.

Auto Immunity Inquiry Action Due Saturday

Senate May Select Group on Traffic Privilege Resolution of King.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

First steps of a sweeping Senate investigation to determine the extent of alleged discrimination and special privilege practices in Washington traffic law enforcement are expected Saturday when a recent resolution by Senator King (Democrat), Utah, is laid before the Senate District Committee.

Indicating a special sub-committee would be appointed to begin the inquiry, Senator King, chairman of the District Committee, said earlier plans had been delayed pending completion of the current House traffic inquiry.

Cites Stories in The Post.

"We don't want to cover the same field" said King. "Provisions of my resolution are broad, but we have been waiting to see how wide a field the House investigation covers."

Representative Carpenter (Democrat), Kansas, chairman of the House Traffic sub-committee, plans to conclude his hearings this week, it was announced. Only a few witnesses are still to be heard.

Visibly aroused over apparent abuses of certain Congressional privileges, Senator King, citing a series of stories in The Washington Post, introduced his resolution immediately following a recent Senate speech by Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, candidate for the Presidential nomination.

Strikes at "Immunity."

King asked that a comprehensive study of these reputed "privilege" abuses be made and that a complete report be presented to the Senate.

At Saturday's District committee meeting, it was said at King's office yesterday, the traffic resolution will be discussed with a view toward immediate action. It is likely that recommendations for appointment of an investigating sub-committee will follow.

In his resolution King struck at "Congressional immunity, special privileges and discrimination," and called attention to the possibility of inadequate laws governing strict

8-Year-Old Boy to Face Court In $50,000 Lumber Yard Blaze

An 8-year-old boy may face a Juvenile Court judge on a charge of setting a $50,000 fire that destroyed a Southeast Washington lumber yard, 10 garages and damaged 9 homes.

Police said David Miles, the boy, emphatically declared yesterday at the Fifth Precinct that he was quite capable of starting the fire.

His mother cannot believe that her small son could possibly have started the fire, but Detective Sergt. Watson Salkeld said, after an investigation, that much evidence points toward the boy.

Salkeld had spent several days questioning residents of the neighborhood around Eleventh, Twelfth, N and O streets southeast. Evidence pointed to David so the policeman took him into the Fifth Precinct Station for questioning.

David, according to police, built a small fire in the rear of a shed to keep warm. The fire spread to the lumber yard of Galliher & Klimkiewiecz and David ran home.

The boy's father, a P. W. A. worker at the Navy Yard, said his son was at home playing with his brothers and sister at the time the fire started.

Holt Charges Denied in Full By Hopkins

Says Maladministration and Politics Refuted by Field Report.

By Sidney Olson.

Repeated charges of maladministration and political usage of the Works Progress Administration in West Virginia made by Senator Rush D. Holt, of that State, were denied in every detail in a calm but thorough repudiation last night by Federal WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins.

Holt immediately retorted that "He (Hopkins) is probably 'too damned dumb' to know what is going on in West Virginia," and that "Investigation by the WPA forces was like sending Baby Face Nelson to investigate Dillinger."

Hopkins' statement, based on field investigations in West Virginia by Field Representative Alan Johnstone, asserted:

1. Not a person on relief rolls in West Virginia secured work through political influence on WPA projects.

2. All appointments to administrative places were made on a basis of merit.

3. Over 60 per cent of administrative appointees had no political indorsement whatever.

4. Senator Matthew M. Neeley (Democrat), West Virginia, accused by Holt of using WPA administrative appointments to build up a political machine, is exonerated, as the field report shows that Senator Neely was in the Orient on official business during the formative period of the West Virginia WPA.

Brother's Dismissal Upheld.

5. The dismissal by F. W. McCullough, WPA administrator for West Virginia, of M. S. Holt, jr., brother of Senator Holt, is sustained. M. S. Holt had been temporarily reinstated as district engineer in the Parkersburg area pending investigation of his brother's charges.

6. The charge of Senator Holt that "I made a speech against WPA on Monday, and my brother was fired out of it on Friday," is refuted. The report shows that McCullough had recommended M. S. Holt's dismissal on maladministration charges three days before Senator Holt's speech.

7. The dismissal of M. S. Holt had been recommended after an inquiry into the Parkersburg office showed that the Senator's brother had admitted being in charge of the area where investigators found "prosecution of unapproved projects, overloading of projects with supervisory personnel, and improper placing of administrative personnel on project pay rolls."

8. Johnstone's report to Hopkins concluded with the assertion that:

"Early in February of this year, subscriptions had been solicited and taken from the employes of the Parkersburg office to pay the expenses of broadcasting a speech delivered by Senator Holt at St. Mary's, West Virginia, on February 7."

Senator Holt had promised in the Senate that if Hopkins "whitewashed" the West Virginia WPA regime, he would support a national probe of the relief activities of this Administration. Such probes have been proposed by Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, and Senator James J. Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania.

Holt Threatens Action.

Holt said last night he would take the floor today to "sweepingly dispose of Cocky Harry," referring to Hopkins.

In a series of speeches in the Senate, from February 17 to March 6, Senator Holt had charged things ranging from the assertion that two West Virginians now holding Federal positions had been "lobbyists" for the Appalachian Coals, Inc., to others that WPA Administrator McCullough in West Virginia was a "42 per cent loan shark."

In his statement to the press last night, Holt said:

"Using Mr. Hopkins' own favorite expression, he is probably 'too damned dumb' to know what is going on in West Virginia. I had heard from the start that the matter was to be whitewashed and that promises had been assured those interested that the report would be satisfactory. Investigation by the WPA forces was like sending Baby Face Nelson to investigate Dillinger. They are all members of the same gang. I challenge Mr. Hopkins or any member of the gang to disprove a single solitary statement I made on the floor of the United States Senate.

"The whole purpose of the investigation, I found out after having these men trailed in West Virginia, was to try and find out things about me, not to investigate their own rottenness which has now been de-

Fay Templeton, 70, Is in Actors' Home

Englewood, N. J., March 11 (U.P.).—Fay Templeton, 70, once a queen of musical comedy, is in the Actors Fund Home here, where she may spend her remaining days. She arrived from Pittsburgh several days ago.

The fortune she earned during many years on the stage has vanished. Friends said the former toast of Broadway refused hospitality because "it would be charity." She felt differently about the home because she helped to support it in her lush years.

"There's no use putting off the evil day any longer," Miss Templeton said.

Second Emergency Session of Cabinet

Real Fear Felt French Will Open Hostilities on the Reich.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 11—Great Britain, despte a reported French threat to quit the League of Nations, was believed set on a middle-of-the-road policy for tomorrow's vital conversations over Germany's breach of the Locarno Treaty.

There were reports Prime Minister Baldwin himself would try his hand at steadying the rocking continental situation.

While Locarno representatives converged on London amid a tense air of threatening uncertainty, the cabinet met in emergency session for a second time in eight hours tonight.

For nearly two hours it listened to reports from Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Viscount Halifax, privy seal, on yesterday's Locarno talks in Paris, at which France demanded Germany be compelled to withdraw some of her troops from the Rhineland.

Another Session Likely.

A further cabinet session is expected tomorrow morning, but there was no indication it would change the policy.

This includes giving a hearing to Adolf Hitler's proposals for peace pacts as a substitute for the shattered Locarno.

Authoritaitve quarters thought it logical that Baldwin, as an original signer of Locarno, should head the British delegation trying to reframe security and prevent chaos.

France's reported threat to quit the League if Britain does not back her in a strong stand apparently failed to impress greatly diplomatic and official quarters in London, which frankly doubted such an irrevocable step would be taken.

"Desperately Serious."

"That is bluff," an important diplomat remarked. "But there is no doubt France is desperately serious."

The real fear in London was that France, seeing no chance of punishing Germany collectively, might decide to do the job herself, immediately presenting League members with the question of determination of responsibilities. It was believed the cabinet studied this question tonight.

The Locarno conferees, including representatives of Britain, France, Italy and Belgium, will meet in the old cabinet room of the foreign office, an anteroom of the "Locarno room."

Intense activity was noted in diplomatic quarters as envoys kept contacts with each other and their capitals. The foreign office discussed the situation preliminary to the League Council Saturday in St. James' Palace.

Observers, checking off membership of the Council, agreed it would be deadlocked if called upon to rule between divergent Franco-British views.

Italy May Hold Key.

The position of Italy, which may eventually be the key factor, was not disclosed as reports reached London from Rome that Dino Grandi, Italian Ambassador here, who will represent Premier Mussolini, would adopt a passive position because of sancti s.

Meanwhile, in the House of Lords, Earl Stanhope, undersecretary for foreign affairs, reaffirmed Britain's belief in the League.

"There is a possibility we may get in a war or of collective action in various parts of the world," said Stanhope, "but unless you undertake collective action you cannot hope for collective security. The government's view is that the risk is worth taking."

Pierre-Etienne Flandin, French foreign minister, arrived at 11 p. m. "I have every confidence in the ultimate issue of the conversations," he said.

King May Wed Greek Princess

Dark-Haired Greek Princess Believed Consort Bachelor King Had in Mind in Asking Parliament for Family Funds.

London, March 11.—Edward, bachelor King of England, told the House of Commons today that he might marry and tonight many Britons believed a dark-haired Greek princess named Eugenie may be their next queen.

The hint that King Edward was looking for a bride came in a message to Parliament dealing with what British call the civil list. In America it would be called the king's salary and expense account.

Parliament makes a financial settlement at the beginning of each king's reign. Edward's message today asked the House of Commons to renew the income received by his father, the late King George.

Marriage Possible.

In that message was this paragraph:

"His Majesty desires that the contingency of his marriage should be taken into account so that in that event, there should be provision for Her Majesty the Queen and the members of His Majesty's family, corresponding to the provisions which the House of Commons has been willing to make in like circumstances in the past."

Up jumped William J. Thorn, blunt-spoken member of the Labor Party, determined to get an answer to a question that has agitated the empire for 20 years.

"May I ask," he said, "whether His Majesty has given any guarantee he is going to get married?"

There was laughter, in which the stiff-necked chancellor of the exchequer, Neville Chamberlain—who was reading the King's message—did not join. Nor did he reply. Instead he droned on with the message.

England's Pastime.

Soon the news got around London, and Englishmen again were indulging in what has become a national pastime—picking a bride for Edward VIII. Everybody has suggestions; in fact, there were so many suggestions The London Star printed a front-page box and under it the caption: "Her Majesty the Queen." Inside the box was a big question mark.

The familiar list of European royalty was reviewed by the amateur matchmakers and one of the first names to pop up was that of Juliana, plump princess of The Netherlands. Grand Duchess Kyre of Russia also was mentioned.

But persons who usually make the smartest guesses about such things chose Princess Eugenie of Greece, 26-year-old cousin of Princess Marina, who married King Edward's brother, Prince George.

There are political and religious difficulties in the way of Edward's marriage with any member of

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, March 11.—Seeking "escape from mediocrity," two honeymooning couples sailed for the South Seas today to live in thatched huts and eat fish with natives of a tropical isle.

"Our folks think we are a wee bit cracked," said brown-haired, serious-eyed Marjorie Hogan, one of the brides.

The expedition is a sequel to the double wedding February 28 in Pontiac, Mich., of Murrill F. Walls, 28, Pontiac High School teacher, to Amber Penny, 21; and Archie Hogan, 23, Albion College athlete, to a schoolmate, Marjorie Faddis, 21.

"We decided it all inside an hour—to get married and go to Tahiti, I mean," explained diminutive Mrs. Walls, looking very jaunty in a green and white silk costume.

Said Hogan, who postponed taking a hotel management course at Cornell for this adventure: "This proposition appealed to me more. I expect to gain from it. The experience and travel ought to be valuable."

"I don't like alarm clocks," remarked Walls, who aspires to be an actor. It was Walls who rebelled against "mediocrity."

He didn't like Potomac High School teaching with the prospect of "working hard all your life and getting nothing for it at the end except maybe being killed an honest man."

Life nowadays, he said, is fraught with "economic uncertainty, war threats, cultural retrogression."

Walls sketched what plans are made so far—to leave the liner Maunganui at Papeete, assemble supplies, get transportation to Moorea or some other island where there are few or no whites, obtain a hut or two and live like natives. Shorts and trunks will be their attire.

"We had cosmetics showers before we left," said Mrs. Walls, "so we're all fixed."

Paris Is Ready to Quit League in Fear of Future Carnage.

Reich Punishment Will Be Demanded

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Paris, March 11.—French talk of a preventive war against Adolf Hitler was coupled tonight with a threat of withdrawal from the League of Nations with her allies on the eve of momentous conferences on Germany's violation of the Locarno Treaty.

Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin went to London for vital conversations, beginning tomorrow, French officials said, almost convinced he should make a preventive war against Hitler now, rather than "submit to carnage two years from now, when treaty breakers will be strong."

The French delegation carried to the London Locarno and League talks a mandate to stand firm for punishment of the Reich.

France, officials said, is resolved to throw her all into the crisis if necessary to preserve "the future peace of Europe," as Premier Albert Sarraut told Parliament yesterday.

"War Ahead Anyhow."

An authoritative French spokesman said:

"We know war is coming in two years, anyhow. We might as well have it now, while we are prepared.

"The only way in which Hitler's troops will leave the Rhineland is for the Locarno signatories to drive them out, but a stitch in time saves nine.

"There comes a time when a nation refuses to be humiliated in front of the world. French honor is at stake and we are ready to draw the sword if necessary to keep it unsullied."

The army commission of the Chamber of Deputies viewed the situation so seriously it decided to send a six-man delegation to inspect frontier fortifications tonight.

Amid fears of possible war, 20 deputies made a pilgrimage to the battlefields of Verdun, where France and Germany once locked in a world conflict.

France to Aid Italy.

Premier Mussolini's willingness to stand with France was said frankly by officials to have brought France to pledge to work for the removal of sanctions against Italy.

France, they added, probably will shortly abolish a prohibition against Italian goods and loosen financial restrictions without awaiting action by the League.

Should France do this, they said, her allies probably would follow, especially Yugoslavia and Rumania, whose sanctions against Italy were never enthusiastic. If France quits the League, they added, these others probably would do so also.

Flandin left for London accompanied by four advisers and his daughter, Mme. Breguet, wife of a military plane manufacturer. He was reported ready to tell Britain that France is not alone in her desire to see Germany punished.

Officials said Britain must back France in order to prevent "the death of the League of Nations."

"This Is a Poker Game."

One asserted: "This time, France will be satisfied with no gestures. Germany must remove at least 70 per cent of her troops from the Rhineland. The world must know that Germany has ceded.

"This is a poker game, but France knows that she has a royal flush, and, if the cards are laid on the table, she is certain of winning. Therefore she is willing to go the limit."

This source admitted, however, he could not see how Hitler, to insure his prestige as a dictator, could withdraw a large percentage of his troops.

An official said "other powers whose policies are based on collective security and who are determined to support the French and Belgian stand before the League of Nations have informed us that, if the treaties seemed worthless, they will not hesitate to quit the League.

In diplomatic quarters this was taken as meaning Soviet Russia and the Little Entente, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Rumania.

Nuns, Priests Fleeing Spain As Riots Spread

Burning of Churches Increases; Catholic Schools Suspend Classes.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, March 11.—Catholic priests and nuns, threatened with violence as political disturbances continued in central and southern Spain, were fleeing for the frontier and other points of safety tonight.

At Madrid, Seville, Malaga and other cities, the clerics were reported abandoning their rectories and convents and resident students were being returned to their homes after Extremists threatened to burn religious schools.

The wave of convent and church burnings since the Leftists won an election victory has been much more widespread than that which followed the overthrow of the monarchy. Property damage may exceed that of the memorable "conflagration day" of April 11, 1931, when millions of pesetas worth of church property was destroyed.

Priests and nuns, thus far, have not been subjected to physical attacks, but fear of mob violence has led many to seek safety. In Seville, nuns have disguised themselves in ordinary dress and removed relics and other religious objects to places of concealment.

More than 50 persons have been killed in the post-election disturbances and more than 30 churches and convents attacked. One priest at Ceheginin, Murcia Province, shot one rioter dead when a crowd of demonstrators burned his home.

Strong forces of police and civil guards patrolled the Madrid suburb of Vallecas, where rioters earlier in the day looted a number of business establishments.

It was understood that a train load of nuns left for points in Northern Spain, where they will be given refuge in private homes. A number of nuns were reported to have crossed the borders to Gibraltar, France and Portugal.

Madrid (Thursday), March 12 (U.P.).—Infuriated mobs formed in Madrid early today and threatened to sweep through the city burning and pillaging in sympathy with Red rioters in southern Spain, where more than 20 have been killed and 70 wounded since Saturday.

Conscripts' Furloughs Canceled by Holland

Amsterdam, March 11 (U.P.).—Dutch army conscripts due to go on furlough Saturday have been ordered retained until further notice, Premier Hendrikus Colijn announced in a broadcast to the nation tonight. He cited international tension.

Total War Debt Now Owed U. S. Is Over Billion

By the Associated Press.

As war-talk echoed over Europe yesterday, defaults on debts owed the United States from World War days skyrocketed over the billion-dollar mark for the first time.

The debtor nations are barred, under the Johnson act, from obtaining any further financial assistance in this country, but the unpaid cost of the last war and threats of a new conflict, have revived discussions of the entire debt problem in Congress.

A compilation by the Treasury disclosed that if Congress sets up a war debt commission—proposed by Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California, to review the question and seek a final and lasting settlement, it will grapple with a total debt of $13,670,087,391.28, of which $1,049,795,092.32 is now in default.

Unless the debtor natoins resume semiannual installments on which they are now—with the exception of Finland—repeatedly defaulting, or a new agreement is made, the default total will continue to mount at the rate of approximately $200,000,000 annually, payments due June 15 total $193,789,042.41.

Nine Man Commission.

McAdoo, who was Secretary of the Treasury at the time most of the debts were contracted, would establish a nine-man commission named by the President, Vice President and Speaker of the House, with authority to negotiate new agreements, subject to approval by Congress.

But both Chairman Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator Johnson (Republican) California, are oposed to the proposal, on the grounds that it would be an admission to the world that the United States was prepared to make further "compromises."

Despite previous agreements, scaling down the total owed by 15 European nations which funded their debt, the latest official Treasury figures show they are obligated for $12,059,394,250.77. In addition, Germany now owes $1,232,250,360.95, and the unfunded debt owed by Armenia, Nicaragua, and Russia amounts to $378,442,779.56.

Germany is in default on obligations totaling 196,350,000 reichsmarks (approximately $78,540,000) for payment of Army of Occupation costs and Mixed Claims awards.

Other European nations have defaulted on the following amounts:

Austria, $494,860.23; Belgium, $33,630,269.40; Czechoslovakia, $9,584,149.73; Estonia, $2,611,336.45; France, $250,292,292.86; Great Britain, $582,803,306.83; Greece, $4,426,507.85; Hungary, $290,381.27; Italy, $47,853,383.64; Latvia, $961,995.14; Lithuania, $776,319.97; Poland, $32,535,988.55; Rumania, $3,843,750.40, and Yugoslavia, $1,150,000.

Total Defaults.

With Germany excluded, the defaults total $971,255,092.32, of which $270,166,110.59 is unpaid principal, $623,176,280.70 in unpaid interest, and $74,912,701.03 is unpaid under moratorium agreement annuities.

Payments due June 15 (including an installment due from Greece on May 10) are:

Belgium, $9,142,453.88; Czechoslovakia, $1,682,812.78; Estonia, $322,850.29; Finland, $164,315.50; France, $74,787,725.89; Great Britain, $85,670,765.05; Hungary, $37,410.66; Italy, $15,641,593.38; Latvia, $134,883.26; Poland, $4,039,039.71; Rumania, $1,648,750.08; Yugoslavia, $350,000, and Greece, $532,887.93.

The United States has received under the original settlements and moratorium agreements $475,409,176.49 on principal and $1,318,913,038.79 interest.

Prior to the funding agreements, the United States was paid $281,990,396.99 on principal and $671,354,430.62 interest. Of the grand total of $2,747,667,042.89 received, Great Britain has repaid more than $2,000,000,000.

Tax Exemption of RFC Bank Stock Up Today

By the Associated Press.

As part of an effort to wipe out a previous House defeat of a similar measure, the House Banking Committee yesterday called hearings for today on a bill to exempt bank stock owned by the RFC from State and local taxation.

The action came within a day after Jesse Jones, RFC chairman, had written Speaker Byrns asking that the legislation be revived. It was passed by the Senate after a Supreme Court ruling that such holdings were subject to local taxation but met a setback in the House.

Burning Freighter Helpless in Fog

Boston, March 10 (AP).—Fog held the 3,300-ton North German Lloyd freighter Chemnitz at Boston Lightship tonight, unable to reach Boston Harbor to quench a threatening fire in her hold.

A Boston fireboat, after waiting more than five hours in the lower harbor in the hope the freighter could pierce the haze, returned to the dock.

Meanwhile, Boston agents of the line despatched a tug to the side of the burning vessel to determine if the freighter safely could remain at anchor all night and go up the harbor in the morning.

The agents, John G. Hall & Co., Inc., said they believed the blaze under control, since the Chemnitz had dispatched no further reports since swerving her course to Boston. The freighter left Philadelphia Saturday for German ports but raced landward again when the fire was discovered.

Conference Today On Tobacco Bills

Annapolis, Md., March 10.—A joint conference of the legislative delegations from the five southern Maryland counties has been called for tomorrow at 10 a. m. to consider tobacco legislation designed to protect growers.

The meeting will be held at the request of the Maryland Tobacco Growers' Association. George Gardiner will represent the association at the parley, while Robert Jameson, of Edelen Brothers, Baltimore commission firm, also will attend.

Senators and delegates from Prince Georges, Charles, Calvert, St. Marys and Anne Arundel counties have been asked to be present. Remedial legislation will be drafted for the General Assembly to assist growers in disposing of the remainder of their 1935 crop, particularly the low and medium grades, of which there is a surplus of approximately 12,000 hogsheads.

Virginia Births Fall Below 1934

Richmond, Va., March 10 (AP).—Preliminary figures of the State bureau of vital statistics indicated today that the total Virginia births for 1935 will be below the number for 1934 and possibly under the 1933 total, lowest in over 20 years.

Announcing that 50,800 births had been compiled for 1935 so far, Dr. W. A. Plecker, State registrar of vital statistics, said it was evident that the steady decline in the birth rate, temporarily interrupted in 1934, had again been resumed.

The figure will be swelled by late reports, but will hardly reach the 52,790 total registered for 1934, Dr. Plecker said. The 1933 total was 51,460. The all-time high in the State was 71,784 births in 1921.

"There is no doubt but that birth control practice is having a dysgenic effect upon our population," Dr. Plecker said. "I have seen figures which indicate that 50 per cent of our births come from that 25 per cent of our population which is lowest in the social scale."

The organization of a crime commission for the District as "the most potent single factor in reducing the crime rate" was urged yesterday by James M. Hepbron, managing director of the Criminal Justice Commission of Baltimore, in a luncheon talk before the national committee on Federal legislation for birth control.

He criticized Gov. Harold G. Hoffman's delay of the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the murder of the Lindbergh baby as an "example of how long things can be dragged out and a Governor can make a farce of justice if he has a mind to."

"If a crime commission does no more than make justice move swift it will have proved worth while," he asserted.

"By no means, however, is a crime commission a cure-all," he continued. "There is no such thing as a cure-all for the problems of crime. However, the most potent single factor toward reducing crime is a more efficient administratoin of justice and a crime commission is the best way to bring out such an administration."

$15,000,000,000 Crime Cost.

Estimating the criminal toll in this country at $15,000,000,000 annually, Hepbron declared that the reason the United States leads the world in crime is because "under our administration of justice the criminal has too great a chance to get away."

"In European countries criminals are caught quickly and are dealt with immediately," he said. "In this country we have a lax, inefficient and corrupt administration of justice.

Hepbron ridiculed the ideas that the high crime rate in this country was due to emotional instability or the Nation's heterogeneous population or to economic conditions. Crime statistics, he said, revealed that crime rose with prosperity and decreased with depression."

Trial by jury in this country has "sunk to a pretty low level." Hepbron asserted, advising the adoption of the English system of drawing jurymen only from a list of reputable citizens. The dodging of jury duty by the better citizens in this country should be stopped, he stated.

Hepbron criticized the probation system for being too lenient and scored criminal lawyers for their questionable tactics.

Mrs. Long Denies Rumo She Is Engaged to Wed

Mrs. Huey P. Long, Senator from Louisiana, yesterday publicly denied that she is engaged to be married.

In a statement over the signature of her secretary, Earle J. Christenberry, it was said that such a report had been printed in a New York newspaper.

"I am authorized to state," Christenberry stated in the statement, "that no more damnable, deliberate untruth has ever been published."

Presidential Yacht Given Test in Bay

Norfolk, Va., March 10 (AP).—The new Presidential yacht, the Potomac, battled strong easterly winds in Chesapeake Bay and Lynnhaven Roads today on her trial run. She was formerly the Coast Guard cutter Electra, a new craft, and today was the first time she operated as a naval vessel.

High seas and a 25-mile wind hampered her to some extent on her trial, it was stated at the naval base where she moored for the night, but she did everything expected of her. Tomorrow she is scheduled to make another test, adjust her radio compass and have a full draught speed run for about 29 miles up the Chesapeake.

Lieut. W. R. Jones, United States Navy, is in command of the ship, which was converted from Coast Guard cutter to a Presidential yacht at the Norfolk Navy Yard. A deck cabin has been constructed on her main deck which will provide accommodations for 25 or more persons.

If weather tomorrow permits completion of the tests planned for the vessel, the Potomac will return to the Navy Yard Thursday. She is to have some finishing touches just before she proceeds to Washington, her home port.

Bail Cut Refused In Narcotics Case

Norfolk, Va., March 10 (AP).—On the Government's contention that Mrs. Elsie Zick Morse, 30, was linked with one of the largest narcotic rings ever uncovered in this section of the country, Judge Luther B. Way in Federal District Court today refused to reduce the $20,000 bond under which she is held in Hampton city jail. Mrs. Morse has a police record here.

"This woman is connected with a dope ring that extends all the way from New York to South Carolina," Assistant District Attorney Harry H. Holt, jr., told the court, "and whether she is a tool or not, she is one of the principals."

Mrs. Morse, on the stand, blamed her connection with the dope on Jack Morse, her husband, who has been sought by Federal authorities since a raid Wednesday afternoon on a rooming house.

Deputy Marshal H. L. Trimyer, one of the raiding squad which arrested Mrs. Morse, testified he found $4,500 in cash in her pocketbook and went with her to get $500 more from a Negro maid. This money, he said, is being held in the safe at the Hampton jail, where Mrs. Morse had been in custody.

Copyright Bill Charges Called 'Silly' by Duffy

Characterizing as "silly" charges before the House Patents Committee that the power trusts had influenced the preparation of the Duffy copyright act revision bill, Senator F. Ryan Duffy (Democrat), Wisconsin, yesterday appeared before the committee to explain the background of his bill.

The measure has been under heavy fire from creative artists of the country, in particular the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, who have been appearing before the committee to attack the measure. The ASCAP (shortened term for the society) members, chiefly song writers of the country, have asailed the bill on the ground that although its original purpose was sound, the numerous amendments added to the bill were dictated by motion-picture interests, broadcasting systems and hotel and tavern owners seeking to evade payment of royalty and other charges to composers of music.

Senator Duffy, a large, soft-spoken Irishman, with a drooping shock of iron-gray hair and horn-rimmed glasses, defended his bill in a long formal statement, and then responded to questions of committee members.

He said the measure had been drafted by two State Department men, two Government copyright experts, and a Department of Commerce expert in a series of meetings with him last summer. He later admitted that he had been unable to attend many of these meetings, but stated positively that only the men mentioned had anything to do with the preparation of the bill's rough draft, later revised and amended in the Senate.

He said the bill was "approved by all but selfish interests," indicating he meant the A. S. C. A. P. members, who he later characterized as "arbitrary and arrogant."

Questioned later by Representatives Daly, of Pennsylvania; Lanham, of Texas, and Sirovich, of New York, all Democrats, it was brought out, to Senator Duffy's surprise, that even the motion picture interests are now against the bill, as at present constituted, and that the American Federation of Labor, whose support he had claimed, is actively in opposition to the measure.

He also said the Authors League was for the bill. Representative Sirovich informed him that representatives of the Authors League had not only protested at the fact they were allowed but ten minutes to present their case against the measure before the Senate Patents Committee last session, but had asked for a hearing before the House group at this session to make clear their opposition.

Much of Senator Duffy's statement concerned what he called the "blackjack use" of the $250 minimum fine for infringement of copyright. This concerned a legal right of song writers to sue infringers, such as hotel owners, who use their music without paying the A. S. C. A. P. charges, which are distributed among composers, with the minimum damages set by the court legally figured at $250. Duffy, as had several Representatives, charged that A. S. C. A. P. used this provision as a club to compel submission of the small beer parlor owners and others to pay A. S. C. A. P. charges.

Representative O'Malley, of Wisconsin, asked Senator Duffy if the bill had the support of the Administration. The Senator said that it had that support in its inception, and he indicated his belief that it still possessed the sanction of the President, but he said he did not guarantee such support.

President Off Speakers' List For C. of C. Rally

For the first time in years neither the President nor any member of his Cabinet will be on the list of speakers before the Chamber of Commerce of the United States when that body holds its annual convention here next month.

It was revealed yesterday that the sending of invitations to address the chamber has been completed and no bid was sent to either the Executive or a member of his official family, despite the fact that numerous affairs of government are to be discussed at the session.

This was taken to mean that the differences between the President and the business interests represented by the chamber are as far from settlement as ever, despite the approach of the election campaign. The chamber has been among the most severe critics of the Administratoin policies, and the "breathing spell" proposal of Mr. Roosevelt some months ago has not appreciably lessened its criticism or opposition.

"Purely Business."

At chamber headquarters it was said that the session in the last week of April will be "purely a businessmen's meeting." However, the program made public at the same time showed that vital Government policies will be among leading topics.

On the program are to be such subjects as effects of mounting taxes, the Federal budget and recovery, increasing employment by private enterprise and regaining foreign markets.

Also to be discussed in group ways to avoid government ownership, industrial relations, distribution, manufacturing and insurance.

Last year, when relations between business interests and the President neared the breaking point, Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, addressed the chamber's convention, and Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, spoke at a dinner of the American Trade Association Executives, held in connection with the convention.

Spoke Two Years Ago.

Two years ago the President spoke before the chamber, and in 1934 he sent a personal message, while Secretary Roper, Secretary Wallace, Eugene Black, then governor of the Federal Reserve Board, and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, and NRA administrator, addressed the members.

Meanwhile, it was made clear yesterday that the President is making no efforts to heal the breach with business. He is supporting the lobby investigation by Senator Hugo Black's committee, despite opposition of business interests to the committee tactics, it was asserted. He also was represented as determined to press his proposal to tax heavily the undivided corporation surpluses.

The Administration desire was said to be to wean away from its critics the small businessman and others in business circles who still are favorable to the President's policies. Along this line, the Patman-Robinson bill to curb price discriminations in favor of large buyers was cited as significant.

For Digestion's Sake—smoke Camels

JUNGLE BOUND! "I always smoke Camels for digestion's sake," says Frank Buck, famous wild animal collector, whose expedition is shown above entering the depths of the tropical jungle of Malaysia. "I recommend Camels for flavor," he continues. "They are rich and mellow. And they are a delightful help to digestion." Science confirms Mr. Buck's reliance upon Camels as an aid to digestion and well-being. It has been definitely established that smoking Camels increases the flow of digestive fluids and gives a cheering, comforting "lift"!

CAMELS SET YOU RIGHT! They are a friendly aid to digestion. And no matter how many you smoke Camels never get on your nerves.
